Truck Crushes Man

The holiday death toll in the Washington area mounted to 13 last night, part of a national fatality figure which had reached 338.

In Washington and the immediate area, there had been six drownings, four traffic deaths, one death from an accidental gun wound, one death from over-exertion and one death from a freak accident.

Latest victims in the area are:

Lucille Gochenour, 10, and her sister, Virginia, 2, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gochenour of Route 3, Lincolnia, Va., drowned in Turkey Run, Fairfax County.

Drowns in Channel

Earl Tolson, 24, 724 New Jersey ave. nw., drowned in Washington Channel, opposite the Municipal wharves.

William L. McCarthy, 51, of Dorchester, Mass., who died of traffic injuries suffered June 28.

Theodore Polinski, 48, of 1731 New Hampshire ave. nw., who died of traffic injuries suffered Thursday.

Melvin Leeland, 14, of 2107 Fairlawn ave. se., who shot himself fatally while explaining "Russian roulette" to a friend.

Wayne Rees, 35, of 169 Danbury st. sw., a World War II veteran, who collapsed and died while rowing a boat on the Potomac.

Julian L. Tinsley, 43, of 819 6th st. nw., who was fatally crushed while trying to push a truck out of a garage.

Five Reported Yesterday

The drowning of three young girls in Scotts Run near Langley, Va., and the traffic deaths of a 58-year-old woman and a 2-year-old child in the District were reported in yesterday's Post.

The deaths of McCarthy and Polinski yesterday increased the District traffic toll for 1947 to 38. There were 29 traffic deaths this date last year in the District, a year in which the total deaths were 72.

McCarthy was struck by an automobile at North Capitol st. and Massachusetts ave. on June 28 and rushed to Casualty Hospital with chest injuries. He died at 8:20 a. m. yesterday. Police have identified Talbert T. Ashby, 27, Herndon, Va., as the driver of the car which struck McCarthy.

Hit by Truck

Polinski, who died today at 4:45 p. m. in Emergency Hospital, suffered critical head injuries when he was struck Thursday night in front of his home by a truck which police said was operated by Robert A. Ellis, 22, of 5415 Illinois ave. nw.

Notre Dame Golfer Left Holding Bag, With Baby in It

New York, July 5 (AP).—A Notre Dame student walked into Bellevue Hospital today and asked if they would take a baby girl off his hands—he had to catch a plane.

The student, Henry J. Marvin of Mishawaka, Ind., said a brunette walked up to him at the airport and asked to borrow his fountain pen.

She took the pen into a rest room and left with him a baby girl about two weeks old and two small bags.

After he waited an hour, he took a cab to Bellevue. He really couldn't wait much longer, he said, as he had to play for Notre Dame in a golf tournament at South Bend, Ind., tomorrow.

In the bag police found clothes, two milk bottles and a note containing instructions for the baby's formula.

Marvin said he would like to have his fountain pen back.

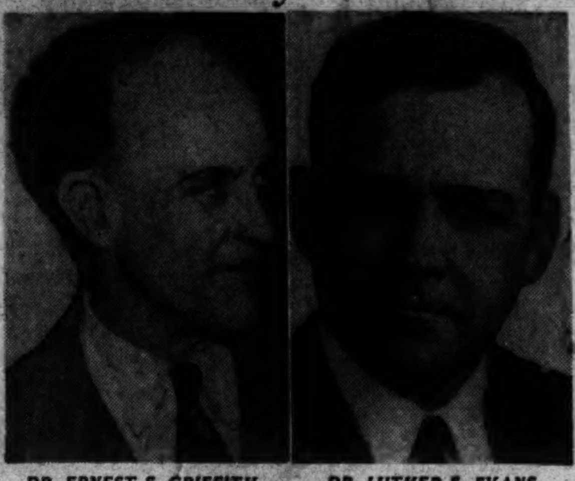
Congress Red Hunt Backs Its Own Library to Wall



DR. ERNEST S. GRIFFITH DR. LUTHER S. EVANS

Congressional Library officials under attack

By Jerry Kluttz

This is a story of the nearest approach to a witch-hunt in one of America's most famous cultural institutions—the Library of Congress. And it's also a story of an out-and-out attempt to intimidate the top officials and certain employes in that agency.

But the officials—Dr. Luther H. Evans, the librarian, and Dr. Ernest S. Griffith, director of the Legislative Reference Service—have fought back vigorously—and with some success—to protect themselves and their employes from the innuendoes and insinuations aimed at them.

However, some of the other library officials scare more easily, and one made this incredible suggestion the other day to the top staff—that the library dispose of its Communist books, newspapers and Soviet documents. He foresaw continued trouble with certain members of Congress so long as the library had a single book on communism in its files.

The idea was turned down flat. The official was reminded that Hit-

6 Major Cities Differ With D.C. On Pocketing Crime Reports

Police departments of six major cities, checked yesterday by The Washington Post, include in official crime statistics and circulate to the whole police department, all crime complaints.

None of them follows the custom of the Washington Metropolitan Police Department, recently officially authorized by Chief Robert J. Barrett, under which selected complaints are "pocketed."

All agreed that cases should never be withheld from official crimes reports, central bureaus, or the National Uniform Crime Reports.

In the cities queried, the police have devised methods of keeping certain classifications of reports confidential—from the public and from newspapers. But not a single instance was found where these crimes were not counted in department totals.

The cities polled were Baltimore, Richmond, Philadelphia, New York, St. Louis and Detroit.

In Washington, The Post has exposed a widespread system of withholding from official records several types of crimes for various asserted reasons.

A survey disclosed more than 600 robbery cases alone hidden in secret files of the Detective Bureau Robbery Squad, or held on precinct station record books between July 1, 1946, and May 31, 1947. The cases were never transmitted to Police Headquarters for inclusion in official statistics. Their very happening was withheld from other members of the Police Department whose efforts could

Peron Crisis Held Fake to Get U. S. Loan

By Virginia Prewett
Chicago Sun Foreign Service

Buenos Aires, July 5.—Perhaps the biggest story in Latin America today is a tremendous bluff President Juan Peron's economic brain-trust is running with Argentina's "induced crisis."

This "induced crisis" is a tightrope parade for Peron that makes his other bold moves pale in comparison.

The stakes are high. If the induced crisis gets out of control to become a real one, the Argentine army will call Peron to account. It already has served notice to this effect.

"Third World Bloc"

But if it goes off all right, Argentine economic masterminds will not only get the United States to finance indirectly their ambitious economic development under the five-year plan, but also Peron's politico-economic plan to head an openly projected "third world bloc."

The former American Ambassador to Argentina, George S. Messersmith, left Buenos Aires with the understanding he would be a chief witness in favor of a large United States loan, which already is being discussed in finanical reviews here.

The technique is to withdraw from traders the high Argentine profits of recent times, creating an artificial Argentine foreign exchange crisis which the United States would be asked to relieve with a loan.

Behind the "Induced Crisis"

The Argentines got rich during the war. They see no reason to be absent when the United States starts handing out dollars in bulk.

Argentinians know they will not have the justification to ask for dollars that destroyed countries of Europe will have. Hence the "in-

Death of Banker After Fist Fight Ruled Accidental

Ossining,, N. Y., July 5 (AP).—Dr. Amos O. Squire, Westchester County medical examiner, today classified as "accidental" the death of Vincent L. Banker, 46-year-old vice president of the Chase National Bank, who died June 25 after a fist fight with another Chase vice president.

The decision absolved Henry J. MacTavish, 45, of Stamford, Conn., of any criminal responsibility.

Squire's report said that Banker engaged in a scuffle with MacTavish on June 5 in a barroom of the Shenorock Shore Club at Rye, N. Y., where Chase officials were having an outing.

"It is my opinion," Squire said, "that Mr. MacTavish acted in self-defense when he struck the deceased with his fist."

AFL Urges Unions to Form Cooperatives to Curb Prices

By the United Press

The AFL last night urged its 7,500,000 members to fight high prices by setting up consumer cooperatives to produce and distribute necessities on a gigantic scale.

The labor organization said it was impelled to this action by failure of free competition to bring living costs down.

It said in the AFL monthly survey that its members spend six billion dollars a year for necessities.

"These dollars spent in cooperative stores," the AFL said, "will fight for fair prices and good quality."

It urged formation of cooperatives "at once," adding, "we cannot afford to wait." These organizations would own and operate production plants as well as retail stores.

National headquarters here said it is ready to supply local unions with information on cooperatives.

The federation admitted it had miscalculated the price trend.

"The AFL has repeatedly said that the forces of competition would reduce prices when enough goods are produced to meet the demand," the survey said. "But today many factories are cutting production while prices hold at high levels.

"This year's experience has proved beyond a doubt that talk alone will not bring prices down. There has been no significant decline in the general level of either industrial or consumer prices this year."

The AFL said that despite "some of the greatest wage gains ever granted" unions, the general wage level in the past year rose only 13 per cent while consumer prices went up 17 per cent. Prices rose

Mine Treaty Signing Held Off 24 Hours

Southerners Say Lewis Gives Them Complete Brush-Off In Coal Negotiation

By Sterling F. Green
Associated Press Staff Writer

A 24-hour hitch in signing of a soft coal peace pact for Northern mines developed last night, while Southern operators reported they were getting "a compromise brushoff" from John L. Lewis.

Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, postponed until 2:30 p. m. today a meeting of his 200-member policy committee to ratify the "agreement in principle" which has been reached with the Northern employers of 150,000 miners. It calls for a 44½ cent basic hourly increase.

A UMW spokesman said the lawyers "simply haven't got the language of the agreement worked out yet," but prophesied this would not interfere with a resumption of digging in 3000 Northern pits on Tuesday, when a 10-day industry-wide vacation ends.

Get No Answer

Not so bright was the outlook for Southern workings. A member of the Southern Coal Producers Association reported that five unsuccessful attempts have been made to learn from Lewis the proposed terms of the Northern contract.

A letter and four telephone calls in the last 48 hours have failed to stir an answer from the miners' leaders, he said, commenting:

"It's a complete brushoff."

The Southern Association—far on the outskirts of negotiations since their split with Northern owners in December—held a brief meeting, reviewed their lack of progress, and recessed until the Northern contract is made public.

Waiting on Lewis

"We'll have no more part of trying to make contact with Lewis," the operator said. "We're waiting now for him to get in touch with us."

One union official indicated that the snag in contract-writing grew out of the new provisions of the Taft-Hartley law. Lewis has asked a clause providing the miners will work when "willing and able," in order to avoid Taft-Hartley penalties for unauthorized stoppages.

If a final wording is agreed upon today, however, chances are good that most Midwestern miners will join Tuesday's back-to-the-pits parade. This would swell the working ranks to more than 200,000, or more than half of UMW's membership.

10,000 Set As Reduction In U. S. Jobs

Trade Board Study Finds Effect Here Won't Be So Drastic As Has Appeared

Reductions in Government personnel will not be as "drastic or far-reaching in effect as appears on the surface, according to the Washington Board of Trade.

The group in its newspaper "Washington Board of Trade News," has announced that no more than 10 per cent of the anticipated 100,000 reduction in world-wide U. S. Government employment service will affect Washington persons.

And the probable return to Washington of several Federal agencies transferred to other cities during the war emergency may safeguard about 5000 jobs.

Loss of 10,000 Seen

These conclusions were reached by the Trade Board's research staff, which consulted with officials in all major departments before reaching its findings.

"With most appropriation bills not yet passed by the Congress, no department head can be sure of readjustments to be made within his organization, but best estimates indicate a world-wide United States Government employment drop of about 100,000.

"Since about 10 per cent of all Federal jobs are in the Greater Washington Area, a similar reduction of Government workers here would lower such employment from its present level of 215,000 to 205,000 in 1948."

The Trade Board reported that its postwar planning committee has charted the course of Government employment from 1916 to the present time, and that it forecasts Government employment by 1951 at 180,000.

Several to Expand

The report pointed out that while many Government agencies will contract their operations, others will expand in the future, while other agencies, now decentralized, expect to return to Washington. Among agencies expected to expand are the Atomic Energy Commission and the Naval Research Laboratories, the Trade Board reported.

Meanwhile, the District United States Employment Service office reported that more than 3000 Federal workers whose jobs have been abolished have consulted USES during the past three months.

During the first week in July, the number of Federal workers asking for USES job counseling in the professional or white collar field rose sharply, according to Fred Z. Hetzel, director.

Federal workers now being laid off, he said, are finding jobs harder to find.

Scientists Scout Wide Reports Of Discs Flying Over Nation

By The Associated Press

The Nation was baffled yesterday by "flying saucers" reported seen in 28 States by hundreds of persons, and conjectures came from scores of named and unnamed sources throughout the country.

Official Government sources took a "let's see one" stand on the phenomenon, and no scientist proffered a detailed explanation.

But the Los Angeles Evening Herald and Express quoted an unnamed California Institute of Technology scientist in nuclear physics as suggesting that the saucers might be the result of experiments in "transmutation of atomic energy." Dr. Harold Urey, atom scientist at the University of Chicago, called that "gibberish."

(An exhaustive check with the War Department and other agencies disclosed last night that no new information was available in Washington. No one knew anything. But a new tendency to take the reports a bit more seriously was apparent. As the mystification waxed, the scoffing waned.—Editor's note.)

At Columbus, Ohio, Louis E. Starr, national commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, asserted at a VFW convention he was expecting information from Washington about "the fleets of flying saucers." "Too little is being told to the people of this country," Starr declared.

Two Chicago astronomers said the discs are probably "man-made." The undulating, flashing objects "couldn't be meteors," said Dr. Girard Kieuper, director of the University of Chicago's Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis.

"We realize," said Dr. Oliver

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, July 5 (U.P.).—Former King Carol of Romania formally married red-headed Magda Lupescu, his devoted mistress for 23 years, Thursday evening on what may be her death bed.

The playboy King went one step further in legitimatizing his relations with the once beautiful daughter of a junk dealer—he proclaimed her a royal princess and gave her the name of Helena, which is the name of his divorced second wife, Princess Helen of Greece, and mother of his son, Michael, present King of Romania.

U. S. Sets All-Time Record In Food Export, Truman Says

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The "largest total of food ever shipped from one country in a single year" was exported by the United States to feed a hungry world in the year ending June 30, President Truman told the Nation last night.

"But," he added, "we must not lose sight of the fact that even the great efforts of this and other exporting countries fell short of meeting the world's urgent post-war needs for food. Many millions of people are still desperately hungry."

"Substantial shipments of food—especially wheat—must be continued," the President added. Accompanying his statement, however, was a report from his Cabinet committee on World Food Programs, which indicated that prospects for an extremely short corn crop, compared with last year, may cut down other exports.

That statement said:

"The size of the final exports which we can safely spare from our grain supplies for the year will depend to a considerable extent upon the production of corn and other grains, in addition to wheat.

"It is hoped that we will be able to approximate this year's shipments, if transportation and shipping facilities are adequate and if the necessary financial arrangements are completed.

"We shall know more about this when the corn crop is harvested."

11 Nations Are Lined Up For Meeting

London, July 5, (AP)—Britain and France tonight rushed preparations for the July 12 conference on the Marshall Plan amid growing indications that at least some of the eastern European countries would follow Russia's lead and boycott the Paris meeting.

As acceptance of the invitation trickled in from the 22 invited nations, a British foreign office spokesman said French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault would come to London next week to discuss plans with Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin.

Up to tonight 11 countries had either accepted bids to the conference or had been represented by authoritative sources as likely to accept. The list included Italy. Portugal, Greece, Turkey, Eire, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Iceland and the Netherlands.

'Red Fringes' Silent

Iceland was expected to reach its decision tomorrow or Monday.

No official word had come from Austria, Switzerland and Luxembourg or from any of the eight "Red fringe" countries of eastern Europe.

The Budapest Communist newspaper, Szabad Nep, said in its leading editorial that acceptance of the invitation by Hungary would be considered "hostile" to the Soviet Union. In Bucharest, the Socialist newspaper, Popolul, echoed Communist editorial statements that "it is not necessary to participate."

Polish government sources said Poland's decision would be made after Premier Josef Cyrankiewciz and Foreign Minister Zygmunt Modzelewski arireved back in Warsaw from their visit to Prague.

Food, Drug Agency Says U. S. Eating Defiled Foods

By the United Press

The Food and Drug Administration said yesterday that thousands of Americans probably are eating foods which have been defiled by rats, mice anad insects. Furthermore, the agency can do little or nothing about it.

U. S. Supreme Court action recently forced the agency to abandon its 30-year-old practice of inspecting food, drugs and cosmetics at terminal warehouses.

The high court refused to consider an appeal from a lower court's finding that the agency acted illegally in 1945 when it seized several thousand pounds of macaroni which was defiled by rodents after delivery at a warehouse in Phoenix, Ariz.

It's Dewey on First Ballot, Missouri GOP Assures Him

En Route With Gov. Dewey, July 5 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York received assurances from Missouri Republican leaders tonight that he would have the solid support of the State's delegates in his expected bid for the GOP presidential nomination next year.

Barak T. Mattingly, National Republican Committeeman from Missouri, said after he and other Republican leaders of the State had conferred with Dewey in his railroad car, "I told the Governor that he would get the State's 33 votes at the national convention in Philadelphia next June."

Mattingly predicted the New York Governor would be nominated on the first ballot. He predicted 420 votes for Dewey on the first ballot from an area of the Midwest and Southwest he had canvassed.

The Missouri delegation supported Dewey in both the 1940 and 1944 Republican national conventions.

Dewey arrived in St. Louis at 5:50 p. m., en route with his family to Sapulpa, Okla., the first leg of a four-week, 4000-mile Western tour that will take him to the Governors' Conference at Salt Lake City and through the Rocky Mountain States. The trip has been widely interpreted as an attempt by Dewey to solidify support for his presidential aspirations.

The Governor, in a press conference aboard train, avoided any statement on national political issues, but outlined some of the work to be done at the Governors' Conference July 13-16. The Governor said the Governors and the Federal Government are cooperating in a nonpartisan effort to "get some order out of chaos" in the field of taxation.

Fall Session Of Congress On Aid Plan Is Predicted

Committees Named To Study Resources At Hand Set Sept. 1 As Completion Date

Plan Gains Support

Callback Forecast

By Jack Werkley

A special session of Congress in the fall to consider a comprehensive program to carry out the Marshall plan for European economic recovery was considered practically certain yesterday by some diplomatic and congressional sources.

Every effort to lay before Congress the foundation of the sweeping plan for cooperative rehabilitation of Europe now is aimed for completion in September. State Department sources are hoping the Congress will meet in October—supposedly at the call of President Truman—to consider the proposals.

It appeared the whole issue of the role the United States will play in helping restore Europe economically will come to a head roughly coincident with two other major international events—the United Nations General Assembly meeting in New York in September and the Council of Foreign Ministers Conference on Germany in London in November.

Target Is September

Britain and France have set for "before September 1" the date for completion of a report of the assets and needs of Europe to be worked out by whatever nations join in the cooperative enterprise in the new meetings in Paris starting July 12.

Three committees named by President Truman to study the limits within which the United States safely can help other nations and the American resources available for foreign aid also have set a target date in September for completion of their reports.

In the face of what is expected to be considerable congressional opposition to the plan, the Administration hopes to lay down the most detailed and documented evidence of whatever program finally is developed.

Alternatives Developed

In this connection, it was learned, the State Department has no intention of simply passing on as valid and unchallenged whatever estimates are developed at Paris by the European nations of what they consider they are able to do to help themselves and of what they estimate aid from the United States must be.

The State Department policy-planning committee, the key agency of the Government now working on the foreign aid program, is developing alternative plans based on its own studies of European needs and will be prepared to lay before the President and Congress detailed studies and

Lack of Boxcars Damaging Wheat, Rail Official Says

Kansas City, Mo., July 5 (INS).—A railroad official estimated tonight that half a million bushels of wheat are lying on the ground unharvested in Kansas and threatened with spoilage because of the boxcar shortage.

The estimate was made by Ralph E. Clark of Washington, D. C., manager of the closed car section of the American Association of Railroads. He admitted: "The boxcar shortage in the grain belt is serious. However, this half million figure is about 34,000 bushels of wheat under the total that was on the ground in the same area at this time last year because it could not be moved to elevators due to the lack of boxcars."

Marshall Plan Seen Gaining Stride Here

Congress Call Likely in Fall

recommendations on alternate programs which may be followed.

Moreover, this committee, headed by George F. Kennan, will be prepared to analyze the report of the European nations expected in September and to check the estimates of the European nations against its own independent study.

Another 19-member nonpartisan presidential committee of industrialists, labor leaders, financiers and educators will meet here July 24 with W. Averell Harriman, Secretary of Commerce, now in Europe obtaining preliminary information on economic problems.

This committee was named by the President to study the limits within which the country safely can extend foreign aid.

Two other Government committees named by the President are making studies of the Nation's resources to meet foreign aid programs and are examining the question of the impact heavy foreign aid plans would have on the Nation's domestic economy.

The climax of all the efforts to produce data on the scope, costs and effects of the European program outlined by Secretary of State George C. Marshall in his June 5 Harvard University speech and followed up in the Paris conference is expected to be the production of an Administration program in the fall and the calling of the special congressional session by the President.

Diplomatic sources are hoping the special session can be held in the fall to prevent it being carried over to the regular session in January—which they consider too late to meet the increasingly urgent needs of Europe and which would introduce more sharply the political considerations of a presidential election year.

Moreover, it was pointed out, a session in October would precede the showdown on Germany in the Council of Foreign Ministers conference in November. The State Department insists that the role of German industrial production in the European economic recovery program is a major factor. Russia already has rejected the notion of considering German production outside the treaty talks.

Mundt Bill Clears First Senate Hurdle

By Robert J. Donovan

The Mundt bill authorizing the State Department to carry on its education and information program, including the "Voice of America" broadcasts, cleared another obstacle yesterday when it received tentative approval of a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee.

At the same time subcommittee members, including Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), chairman, said they were ready to recommend additional funds which Secretary of State George C. Marshall has said were needed for the information program.

Congress already has passed and sent to the White House a bill appropriating $12,400,000 for this purpose. The State Department originally had sought 31 million dollars, and Secretary Marshall told the Senate subcommittee on Wednesday that at least 16 million dollars was needed to finance the program during the current fiscal year.

Senator Smith said he thought that the Senate Appropriations Committee would be "open-minded" on the subject, but that there would be no point in asking for an additional $3,600,000 until the Senate had passed the Mundt bill.

The bill already has been passed by the House by a vote of 272 to 79.

Senator Smith said the full Senate Foreign Relations Comittee would be asked on Tuesday to decide whether the measure is to be brought up from consideration of the Senate at this session. He said the subcommittee would urge the committee to recommend early consideration.

Russian Opposition May Spur Congress To Vote Billions

By John M. Hightower

Associated Press Staff Writer

Russia's opposition to the Marshall plan for European recovery appears to have strengthened greatly the prospects that Congress will approve the plan and appropriate the billions necessary to put it over.

That is the opinion expressed yesterday by both diplomatic and congressional authorities. They seemed agreed that all the latest developments here and abroad made the plan look better and better to those House and Senate members who have been highly suspicious of talk that Russia might "cooperate," because they no longer believe in Russia's good will.

Acceptance of the Marshall plan inside the United States is probably almost as important to European governments as was its acceptance or rejection by Russia. For these governments are now being forced virtually to "choose up sides" between the American-British-French lineup and the Soviet Union. They do not want to take any unnecessary chances that the United States will let them down.

Critical Test Seen

Some diplomatic authorities say the Marshall plan probably will provide the most critical test of bipartisan conduct of foreign policy since Congress passed the British loan program a year ago this month.

Essentially the plan is to develop an integrated European economy with financial aid from the United States.

The developments that are deeply influencing thinking at the Capitol are reliably said to have begun with Foreign Minister Molotov's rejection of the plan. They were further said to embrace President Truman's denunciation Friday of the Soviet stand as well as the latest British and French notes to Moscow urging the Soviets to reconsider Molotov's declaration of opposition.

Both the President's Charlottesville speech, describing as "folly" Soviet opposition to organized European recovery, and the new notes to Moscow were seen here as having substantially the same effect in terms of public and congressional opinion.

They serve to outline more sharply the stand taken by Russia and to strengthen on this issue the record being made by the western powers against Russia. Diplomatic officials said they doubt that Britain and France really expect any change in the Moscow policy because that seems to have been unalterably fixed at the Paris conference.

Follow Open Door Policy

However, it is explained here that the Western powers, including the United States, have been following an open door policy toward Russia. This holds that the Russians must be given every opportunity to cooperate, and if they do not they have to bear the responsibility for it.

This policy has not always been popular with some substantial elements in Congress. These have argued that the Russians might make a show of cooperating, then play the United States for a sucker by getting all they could and giving nothing.

When Molotov therefore declared his absolute opposition to cooperation with Britain and France, he apparently removed one of the most powerful arguments against the plan in Congress.

At the same time, the Soviet Foreign Minister threw down a challenge to American leadership throughout the world by threatening with vague retaliatory acts the countries that follow that leadership.

If the Kremlin forces economic isolation of Czechoslovakia from the West, despite the country's natural economic leaning in that direction, then the split in Europe may be as real as Molotov at Paris threatened it would be. In that case, the Western powers may finally have to write off as a practical matter any hope for unification of Europe—including Germany and Austria—for an indefinite number of years.

Congress Red Hunt Backs Its Own Library to Wall, Battling Innuendo

ler had burned the books he didn't agree with when he took over Germany.

Budget Slash Approved

The suggestion was made after the House Appropriations Committee recommended and the House approved a big slash in the library budget, even though an inquiry into disloyalty of its employes had produced nothing of consequence.

The story is pieced together from the official printed hearings given the library staff by the legislative subcommittee whose chairman is Representative Noble Johnson (R., Ind.).

The library's troubles stem from an unofficial and unauthorized report that charged it was a hotbed for Reds. The report, made last December, was drafted by George V. McDavitt, an investigator for the House Un-American Activities Committee, in cooperation with Ernie Adamson, staff director of the same committee at that time. The report was circulated among a few members of Congress, and its highlights were published in several newspapers.

The hearings disclosed that Dr. Griffith gave the subcommittee this brief history of the report:

"The original Adamson release, apparently based on the McDavitt report, was recalled by the committee, repudiated by the committee, and Adamson was discharged. Furthermore, the committee then issued an official report in which there was specific commendation for the Library of Congress for its preparation of 'Communism in Action.'" Alas, McDavitt is no longer with the committee.

Killed Officially

The McDavitt-Adamson report was killed officially—but its repudiated charges lingered on in the minds of some members of Congress.

Griffith sensed the matter might come up in the library appropriation hearings and he prepared a point-by-point answer to the report since it involved many members of his Legislative Reference Service. The McDavitt report and Griffith's answers were studied by Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.), a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee, and the only member of Congress who had studied both documents up to that time.

McDowell, a conservative Republican, voluntarily wrote a letter to Griffith, which was placed in the printed hearings and which said in part:

"I have compared the charges made by Mr. McDavitt, and the answer made by you, and I can see nothing at all that would indicate you were anything but what a man in your position ought to be.

"There is, unfortunately, in America, a sizable school of folk who believe that any indication of political liberalism shows a desire to change the American form of government, or to ally themselves with elements who are serving some other form of government . . ."

Own Investigators Sent

On top of this testimony, Representative Johnson and his subcommittee is said to have had additional evidence that the McDavitt-Adamson charges couldn't be substantiated. The House Appropriations Committee sent its own investigators into the library and it's reported on excellent authority that they gave the agency an excellent rating. In other words, they could not prove the suspicions of some members of Congress.

Nevertheless, the subcommittee chairman and a few of his colleagues remained unconvinced. And if you read the 313 pages of testimony by library officials before the subcommittee, perhaps these thoughts will come into your mind and trouble you as they did me:

Is it disloyal for a Federal worker to criticize Congress?

Is it disloyal to have belonged to an organization of which a Communist is a member?

Is it playing politics to compile background material and speeches of a candidate for President?

Is it really a crime to work for the Government?

And finally, you wonder—what do some people expect of Federal workers? Can they really want them to be a lot of little milktoasts who never have an original idea, who never say or do anything lest it become controversial and be used to drive them out of their jobs?

However, I'm sure of this from a reading of the hearings—that the days of the inquisition are still with us.

But let's get this one point straight—neither Johnson nor any subcommittee member charged any library employe with being a Communist or with disloyalty. It was his vague inferences in the questions he asked, his tone, that clearly pointed to that directon. Johnson and others stated their case in this way— that where there's smoke there must be fire, and that there must be Communists in the library because that's the gossip on Capitol Hill.

Also, Evans and Griffith openly recognized the subcommittee attitude and approach as an attack on their loyalty and the loyalty of certain of their colleagues. They answered every little hint and suspicion brought up in an open and vigorous manner. Unfortunately, some of the proceedings were off the record.

In fact, Evans said he welcomed the loyalty study by the subcommittee "so that the falsely accused employes could meet the charges and clear up their records for all time."

He pointed out that the President's loyalty order did not cover his agency since it's a branch of the legislative arm. Nevertheless, he said, he had taken steps to comply with the order and he recommended that a provision be added to his appropriation bill that would allow the library to pay the FBI and Civil Service Commission for a loyalty inquiry of all his employes. The committee agreed and steps already have been taken in that direction.

One Case Studied

Johnson asked Evans if he had complete confidence in the staff of the Legislative Reference Service. The librarian replied that he had that confidence, except in one person, "about whom some question has been raised by the director himself." He went on to say that a study was being made to determine if this person had subversive views.

Repeatedly, the librarian invited the subcommittee members, or anyone else, for that matter, to give him information that would support charges of Communist activity among his employes. He promised prompt action.

"We have tried to get the evidence," he testified. "We are examining every piece anyone has given us, but the evidence, when presented, alwyas breaks down."

At that point Johnson showered Griffith with questions on the booklet he and his staff had written on Communism in Action at the direction of Representative Dirksen (R., Ill.). It was all too evident that the Indiana legislator was most concerned over the meaning and implication of two words—"changed order"—as used in the booklet.

"Order" Is Explained

Griffith patiently explained that he meant the industrial order as compared with the agricultural order, which existed at the time the Constitution was framed.

The librarian jumped to Griffith's defense with this statement:

"This is one of the most damaging books against communism ever put together in the English language . We are proud of it. We think it is a piece of scholarship."

Apparently the public must agree with this view. More than half a million copies have been printed.

Both Evans and Griffith were subjected to the most detailed and intense sort of questioning on their backgrounds, particularly on their speeches and writings. At one point, Johnson asked the librarian:

"Will you stand on any public statement made by you in the past, be it written or oral?"

Evans said he would not; that in 1933 he told a Jewish group that they were unduly alarmed over the possibility that Hitler might prosecute the Jews. "I would like to eat those words," he added.

Despite persistent questioning, Evans said he had not engaged in politics since 1932 when he was on the Princeton faculty. Then Johnson asked his $64 question:

"You did not prepare a book on Willkie?"

The librarian then told how, in 1940, a collection was made of newspaper clippings and speeches of the late Wendell Willkie for the use of members of Congress or anyone else, either friend or enemy, of the then GOP candidate for President.

Johnson then made this incredible comment:

"I think that was pretty well indulging in politics." He went on to say that it "may raise a good question as to the proper function of the Library of Congress."

"Politics" Denied

Evans insisted that a file on Willkie was not a political matter and that, of course, it was a proper function of the library to compile it and to make it available to interested parties.

The record shows that Johnson brought up the cases of eight individual employes, all on the staff of the Legislative Reference Service. Some of the charges against them are downright unbelievable, but here's a list of the employes and details of their cases:

CASE 1 is that of George B. Galloway, who is now detailed to the House District Committee. A recognized authority on Government, Galloway was staff director of last year's La Follette-Monroney Committee on Congressional Reorganization and he had considerable to do with the revamping of Congress. It now becomes apparent that some die-hard members have not forgiven him for it.

After Congress had voted to reorganize itself and before he went on the library payroll, Galloway wrote a book, "Congress at the Crossroads," in which he told some of the events leading up to the favorable congressional action.

Representative Johnson pressed Dr. Griffith on whether he agreed 100 per cent with everything Galloway had written, and he ordered him to submit for the record a detailed report on passages he disagreed with. At one point his super-sensitiveness about criticism of members of Congress came out when he asked this question:

"Have you read his sarcastic—and I may say that many people do not believe it is based on facts—book with respect to our former Speakers and other officials of Congress?"

Case 2 involves W. Brocke Graves, a specialist on State governments. Johnson demanded to know if Graves had sent a message to the House opposing renewal of the Dies Committee. Dr. Griffith said Graves had signed such a petition in 1938, long before he had been employed by the library.

Johnson also asked if Graves was a member of the American Federation for Constitutional Liberties, and if he had, in 1937, been a member of the Pennsylvania Civil Liberties Committee, an organization he identified as a branch of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Significantly, the Indiana Republican leader then demanded of Griffith:

"What have you done about it?"

Dr. Evans broke in with this hard-hitting response: "We did not know about his membership in this first organization you mentioned and, when we did find out about the allegation and asked him about it, he denied that he was a member.

"As to the Civil Liberties groups, I do not know much about those in Pennsylvania, but I have never heard that the American Civil Liberties Union, if this is a branch of it, was a Communist group. I had not thought membership in that organization would cast reflections on a person's loyalty to the U. S. Government."

Case 3 is that of John C. Cooper, a former vice president of Pan American Airways, a transportation expert who is now assigned to the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. Johnson asked if Cooper had been on the board of directors of the Russian War Relief, Inc.

Evans said Cooper had been a member, and he added: "We would not hold that against him."

Group's Records Cited

Case 4 is that of Theodore J. Kreps, a price economist, and Johnson wanted to know if he had been a delegate in 1931 to the fourth biennial conference of the Institute of Pacific Relations in Shanghai. Also, whether the Institute was Communist-dominated.

Dr. Griffith answered: "The Communist infiltration of the Institute of Pacific Relations, according to the records of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, occurred considerably later than 1931—somewhere in the late thirties."

Case 5 is truly amazing and it involves Jack Levin a researcher and lawyer. Also the touchiness of Johnson over criticism of Congress. Johnson asked:

"Did you ever read this book by Mr. Levin wherein he speaks of phases of procedure in both the Senate and House, which, untouched by the reorganization, still aid in intolerance, bigotry, and greed . . . He makes this serious charge—that Congress cannot function today without lobbyists and he says that this damning indictment of the highest legislative body should arouse every thinking citizen to take drastic action by attempting to make Congress self-reliant and purely and truly representative of all the people."

Author Is Congressman

This question is so amazing because the author of the book in question is a member of Congress himself, Representative Estes Kefauver of Tennessee. Levin merely did research on the book before he joined the library staff.

Johnson then wanted to know if Levin had ever been to Russia. Griffith said he had visited there during a tour of Europe in 1927. In answer to another question, Griffith said Levin had never been a member of the National Lawyers Guild.

CASE 6 is that of Francis O. Wilcox, an authority on foreign affairs and who is detailed to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Wilcox's crime was to comment on Russia in a speech.

Johnson cited a newspaper clipping that said Wilcox had called for "infinite patience" in dealing with Russia and had said that Russia could outsit any country in an international conference. The Congressman wanted to know if it was "proper" for Wilcox to make such a comment.

Doubts Significance

The librarian agreed that Wilcox shouldn't have expressed himself on that subject because of his close relations with the Senate committee in that field. Then he made the understatement of the week:

"I do not think that it shows that he is pro-Russian, but I understand he believes the Russians have been very uncooperative in the international field."

Case 7 is that of Eldon E. Billings, a junior economist, who was decorated for air service in the China theater during the war. Johnson asked about Billings' membership in several questionable organizations and the economist submitted this statement for the record, which said, in part:

That he had been a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy, that he opposed the growing Communist trend within the group, and that he resigned in 1939 as the Communists were taking it over. That he left the Washington Committee for Democratic Action in 1940 when it became evident the Communists were infiltrating into it, and that he strongly opposed the American Peace Mobilization, which he said was Communist dominated.

Could Detect No Bias

Case 8 involves Mrs. Leisa Branson, an economist, who works on labor and cartel problems. Mrs. Bronson resigned from the library staff in 1944 to work for CIO's Political Action Committee. A year later she was rehired. In the discussion about her, Griffith made this statement:

"I found Mrs. Bronson was consistenly opposed to the so-called party line in certain organizations with which she was connected . . . She has suffered for her anti-Communist convictions . . . I have examined her reports very carefully. There never has been any evidence that I could detect of bias."

Mrs. Bronson is a member of CIO's left-wing United Public Workers. However, Griffith explained that had been a leader in the movement to get its pro-Russian, anti-American foreign policy reversed. The policy was adopted last year at its Atlantic City convention.

At another point in the hearings, Dr. Evans indicated he had kept close watch on his employes who were members of the Moscow line UPWA.

CASE 9 covers all library employes who are members of the American Economic Association, a professional group of the "very highest order," according to Evans.

'Assumes No Responsibility'

Johnson brought out that a Dr. John Gray had been president of the association in 1913, and he credited a statement to him admitting Communist Party membership in 1927 and 1929.

The librarian commented pointedly: "Mr. Chairman, the Library of Congress assumes absolutely no responsibility for the American Economic Association."

These were all the cases brought up by Johnson and his subcommittee—and it's known that some of them were in the repudiated McDavitt-Adamson report. On the face of it, the grievances against the library officials and employes were so vague and so plainly ridiculous that they were blown into bits by the forceful and convincing answers of Evans and Griffith.

Johnson and his colleagues must have been convinced that they couldn't make an open and aboveboard case of disloyalty among library employes. In fact, the committee report made no mention of employe disloyalty, and only an underhanded reference was made to it on the House floor during debate on the library appropriation bill.

Was It a Victory?

It would appear, then, that the library officials had won a major victory to clear themselves and their employes of disloyalty gossip. But did they?

When the Johnson group couldn't support the disloyalty hearsay, it tried another tack—withholding appropriations, which would force the library to reduce staff.

For example, the subcommittee recommended the Legislative Reference Service budget be slashed to $300,000 from the $650,000 requested. Also, that the library budget be cut about five million dollars. Funds were denied to set up a Soviet Union branch. However, the full committee, at the prodding of Representative Dirksen (R., Ill.), increased the Legislative Reference Service budget to $400,000 and the House approved it.

Generally speaking, the library would get only about $500,000 less under the House bill than it had for the 1947 fiscal year. But about 200 employes would have to be laid off unless the Senate added more money—and 20 of them would be in the Legislative Reference Service.

Answer in the Future

Faced with a continual fight with Congressmen who hold the upper hand, many a weary and weak administrator would attempt to appease them in such a situation by firing the employes they object to. Political firings where justice is no consideration are not uncommon in our Government.

We'll have to wait until the legislative appropriation bill is law to get the answer from the library.

But here's something I am sure of: that Communists and their pals in Government—and if there are any in the library—will enjoy this article to the utmost. They have thrown Congress off their trails again, and besides, they can use the library affair to their own shameful advantage.

New Tax Veto Would Stand, Morse Says

By Felix Cotten
International News Service Staff Writer

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) predicted yesterday that the Senate would uphold a veto by President Truman of the new GOP tax reduction bill, thus killing the legislation.

Morse made this forecast as the House prepared to take up and pass the bill Tuesday.

The measure is identical with the previous Republican tax-cut bill except that the effective date has been moved up to next January 1. It would cut personal income taxes 30 per cent on low-income taxpayers down to 10.5 per cent on the top brackets.

Chairman Knutson (R., Minn.) of the House Ways and Means Committee predicted that the House would pass the bill by well over the two-thirds majority necessary to override a veto, and that the topheavy majority would stick on a veto showdown.

Republican farm-State Senators have balked on committing themselves for the bill unless ample funds are assured for aids to Agriculture by the economy-minded GOP Congress.

The Agriculture Department appropriation bill is pending in the Senate. Sharp cuts in farm aids were voted by the House.

[According to the Associated Press, Knutson, saying Republicans "have met the President more than halfway," predicted that Mr. Truman will veto the new four-billion-dollar income tax-slashing measure.

His forecast came as 15 Republicans and 3 Democrats of the 25-member tax-writing Ways and Means group, headed by Knutson, filed with the House a formal statement saying that with the tax cut the Nation's debt still can be reduced by more than five billion dollars in the fiscal year ending next June 30.

11 Nations Due To Accept Bid

Masaryk left today for the Soviet capital, presumably to confer with Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov and perhaps with Premier Stalin.

There was no word at all from Finland, Albania and Yugoslavia.

The British Foreign Office, emphasizing again that the door to Soviet participation had not been closed, said Britain had sent a communication to Russia expressing the hope that her decision to stay out of the Marshall Plan talks was "not final." France already had sent a note expressing similar hopes.

[The Chicago Sun Foreign Service said today that the United States, in order to maintain a strict control over American funds for European reconstruction, intends to conclude separate arrangements with each participating European nation. This information has been conveyed by Washington to the British and French governments.]

Izvestia Wants No Aid

Moscow, July 5.—Izvestia, the Soviet government newspaper, said today that the Soviet people's own strength has always been sufficient for victory. The editorial referred to Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov's rejection at Paris of the Anglo-French proposals of the Marshall aid-for-Europe plan.

"We have always counted primarily on our own forces," Izvestia said, "and these forces always were sufficient for victory."

Opposition Fares Hard in Satellites

London, July 5 (U.P.).—Opposition parties in Communist-dominated Poland and Bulgaria are being subjected to increasing pressure and there are signs that an attempt may be made to force Polish Socialists to merge with the Communists in a "Socialist Unity" Party, reliable reports received here indicated today.

Private reports from Warsaw said that pressure from the Communists had caused the resignations of Edouard Asubka-Morawski as chairman of the Socialist Party executive committee, and of Julian Hochfeld as chairman of the Socialist parliamentary group. Osubka-Morawski, a former premier, retained his post as minister of public administration.

Police Padlock Offices Of Argentine Paper

Buenos Aires, Argentina, July 5 (AP).—Police today padlocked the offices of the nationalist newspaper La Tribuna. For two weeks it had campaigned against Miguel Miranda, president of the Central Bank and the country's economic czar.

Police said La Tribuna had failed to contribute the allotted amount of money requested from all newspapers towards the newspapers pension fund.

More About Flying Saucers

THIS IS NOT ONE OF 'EM, SAYS THE NAVY—The "flying pancake," a wingless plane developed by the Navy, is the only plane it has which might resemble the reported "flying saucers," but officials in Washington said yesterday that this strange-looking aircraft has never left Bridgeport, Conn. Authorities are still skeptical that the mystery missiles said to have been seen in the skies over the West Coast and as far East as the Carolinas are any sort of new airplane

Md. Stroller Sees Saucers

Lee, director of Northwestern University's Dearborn Observatory, "that the Army and Navy are working on all sorts of things we know nothing about."

Lee said the discs might represent the same sort of things as sending radar signals to the moon, "one of the greatest technological achievements of the war and accomplished in absolute secrecy."

The unnamed scientist quoted by the Los Angeles Herald and Express said, according to the paper, that "these saucers so-called are capable of high speeds but can be controlled from the ground. They are 20 feet in width in the center and are partially rocket-propelled on the takeoff."

The scientist's report of "transmutation of atomic energy," however, was scoffed at by Dr. Urey. "You can transmute metals, not energy," he said.

Col. F. J. Clark, commanding officer of the Hanford Engineering Works in the Pacific Northwest where the largest saucer influx has been reported, said the saucers were not coming from the atomic plant there.

"I have been waiting for someone to tie the discs to the Hanford atomic plant," he said. He declared that as far as he knew no experiments were under way there which would solve the mystery.

Credence in the saucers—widely laughed off at their first reported appearance June 25—grew as hundred of observers, many of them trained fliers, reported seeing them.

The mystery missles have even intruded upon the dignity of the Nation's Capital, for David Atamian, 5160 Shoemaker lane, Friendship Heights, Md., has reported seeing three or four of the discs Friday night at about midnight.

Atamian said the discs were traveling northward at a high rate of speed and appeared to be of a bright, bluish hue.

A crowd of 200 observed a disc at Hauser Lake, Idaho, on the Fourth of July. A group of 60 picnickers saw them at Twin Falls, And in Portland, Oreg., so many residents witnessed them that same day the police department sent out an all-cars broadcast.

A United Airlines pilot of 14 years' experience walked up the ramp to his plane at Boise, joking "That I'll believe in these disks when Isee them." Ten minutes later he radioed, shaken, from his plane that he had spotted five of them.

Witnesses in two points of California and in Spokane—one of them an Army Air Forces sergeant—reported seeing the disks Saturday.

Two persons in different sections of Charleston, S. C.—one of them a newspaper reporter—said a flying saucer passed over Charleston heading east at 6:20 p. m. (EST) Saturday at about the same time two men in Albany, Oreg., saw a single disk flash southward, halt and retrace its course before vanishing into a cloud.

Vigorous Study of Atomic Hazards Urged By Committee's Medical Board of Review

Vigorous study of the hazards to human beings, animals and plants from both peacetime and war uses of atomic energy, is urged by the Medical Board of Review of the Atomic Energy Committee.

To carry out the program, submitted in a preliminary report to AEC June 20 and released yesterday, the board, composed of seven prominent scientists, recommended:

(1) A system of assisting the education and training of qualified personnel, with a provision for fellowships in the field of radiation effects.

Science Leadership Urged

"Scientific leadership is the Nation's best defense," the board declared.

"A large number of young, active scientists with continuing experience in atomic fission, its dangers and its potentialities, assures the safety of our country more certainly than the memory of priceless but static knowledge in a declining team of former collaborators.

"It is the interest, if not the obligation of AEC to defend the Nation by maintaining our leadership in the control of atomic energy," it adds.

2. Establishment of an advisory committee for biology and medicine, and appointment of a medical director responsible for research and training programs in biology and medicine and health protection.

Would Publish Results

3. The commission should encourage, "consistent with the demands of national security," the publication of scientific papers dealing with medical and biological research and development.

4. The commission should consolidate the work of Government and other agencies, particularly the United States Public Health Service and the Armed Forces, in fundamental biological and medical research, and in training personnel in these fields.

Comprising the board are Dr. Robert F. Loeb, Lambert professor of medicine, Columbia University, chairman; Dr. Detlev W. Bronk, chairman of the National Research Council, University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Wallace O. Fenn, University of Rochester School of Medicine; Dr. Herbert Gasser, director of Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research; Dr. Ernest W. Goodpasture, Dean of Vanderbilt University School of Medicine; Dr. Alan Gregg, director of medical sciences, Rockefeller Foundation; and Dr. A. Baird Hastings, professor of biological chemestry, Harvard Medical School.

The need for medical and biological research on the various effects of radioactive substances and atomic fission was stressed by the board.

This work, it said, "is both urgent and extensive.

"It is urgent because of the extraordinary danger of exposing living creatures to radioactivity.

"It is urgent because effective defensive measures, in a military sense, against radiant energy are not yet known.

"From now on we shall mine, transport, process and use radioactive substances as sources of power, tools for investigation of biological processes, and for the treatment of disease. There will therefore be incessant danger in handling such substances and using their radioactive properties."

"Extensively unforeseen eventualities" are predicted by the board as lying ahead of the researchers.

"The number of radioactive substances is large; many have never been identified as existing in nature. Such substances call for suspicious study."

The board, in urging extension of the program of providing isotopes for sale at nominal prices to scientists, suggested that "steps be taken to make isotopes available to foreign workers."

In discussing security rules, the board remarked:

"Secrecy in scientific research is distasteful and in the long run is contrary to the best interests of scientific progress.

"The board recommends that in so far as it is compatible with national security, secrecy in the field of biological research be avoided."

To this paragraph in the report, Dr. Gregg added:

"A policy of secrecy in science is neither personally courageous nor politically wise. As Lord Acton said: "Power corrupts, and absolute power corrupts absolutely.'

"I would prefer to see scientists uncorrupted by the pressure for safety through extraordinary power."

Bricker and O'Conor To Attend Conference

Senators Bricker (R., Ohio) and O'Conor (D., Md.) will represent the Senate at the annual Governors' Conference at Salt Lake City on July 13-16, to work toward elimination of overlapping Federal, State and local taxes.

Senator Aiken (R., Vt.), chairman of the Senate Expenditures Committee, made the announcement yesterday. The two Senators are former Governors.

Capri Crooks Too Slick For Lucky Luciano

Naples, Italy, July 5 (U.P.).—Charles, (Lucky) Luciano was deeply chagrined today after an expensive camera was stolen from him as he basked in the sun on the Isle of Capri.

"I am terribly humiliated by the neat job Capri crooks pulled on me," the deported former New York vice czar told a reporter.

Greeks Blame Reds For Fire in Athens

For Middle East

U. S., Britain Oppose U. N. Oil Control

Lake Success, July 5 (AP).—American and British sources expressed opposition today to a proposed move to give the United Nations administrative operation of the rich oil resources in the Middle East.

The U. N. Economic and Social Council, which convenes here July 19, will consider a proposal that the U. N. establish an authority to administer oil resources in the Middle East, by and with the consent of the countries involved.

The proposal was submitted by the International Cooperative Alliance, one of the nongovernmental agencies having consultative status in the United Nations.

American and British sources held the view that the United Nations is not in a position to effectively administer the oil resources in the Middle East.

Building Houses U. S. Aid Offices; 2 Killed, 21 Hurt

Athens, July 5 (AP).—Communists were blamed by Greek officials today for a fire in the building housing the vanguard of the American aid mission to Greece which took the lives of three persons and resulted in injuries to 21.

Minister of Public Order Napoleon Zervas and Athens' Police Chief Angel Evert declared the fire "obviously was started by Communists," and Evert said two persons had been arrested.

The five-story structure, known as the Soldier's Pension Building, is in the heart of Athens. The British military mission has its headquarters in the building.

"We are 100 per cent certain this is the opening phase of a Communist program to cause disorder in the large Greek cities," said one Greek cabinet member who declined to be named.

In another part of the city an Army sentry at a barracks was shot to death and arms stolen in a raid by a group of unidentified men, the minister added.

The conservative newspaper Estia declared that government intelligence reports had confirmed that Greek Communists planned to establish a "free government" to be headed by the commander in chief of guerillas in the north.

Estia said that the head of the Communist state would be General Markos, the commander in chief of the so-called "Greek democratic army" in the northern mountains.

Air Minister Cannellapulos announced the arrest of 5 officers and 14 enlisted men of the Greek air force, charged with sabotage and spying under orders of the Communist Party in connection with the attempted sabotage of a fighter plane last month.

Millions Vote On Succession Today in Spain

Madrid, July 5 (U.P.).—Millions of Spaniards will go to the polls tomorrow for the first time in 6½ years to participate in a national referendum of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's succession law.

Political observers said the plebiscite amounted to "a choice between Franco and Franco." Under the succession law, Franco will continue administering the country as chief of state and have the right to appoint his successor.

An estimated 16,500,000 are eligible to vote and virtually all were expected to cast ballots. Fines are to be imposed on those who do not vote. Rumors, apparently government-inspired, warned housewives that their rations might be cut if they fail to participate.

So far, not a single word in opposition to the law has appeared in the press, heard on the radio or at public meetings.

Japan Ups Wages, Prices in Battle On Black Market

Tokyo, July 5 (AP).—Drastic increases in official commodity prices and industrial wages, backed by a new 12-billion yen (officially 240 million dollars) subsidy program were ordered by the Japanese government today in an effort to break the black market.

Staple foods, coal, railway fares and maritime freight rates were raised, as much as 200 per cent in some instances, while industrial workers got pay raises averaging 1800 yen (officially $36) monthly.

(The increases are merely an attempt to conform with the realities of black market prices. The yen itself, officially rated at 50 to the dollar, is generally regarded as actually worth 100 to the dollar, or less.)

Wounded Whale Killed After Going Aground

New York, July 5 (AP).—An 18-foot whale, bleeding from several deep wounds apparently caused by a ship, grounded itself near Neponsit Beach Hospital today and killed shortly afterward by Coast Guardsmen, who rifled 40 bullets into its body.

The whale's carcass, estimated weight 600 to 700 pounds, was to be towed to sea and dynamited.

Davies Is Recovering

Peace Note Sent Dutch By Indonesia

Jogjakarta, Java, July 5 (AP).—An Indonesian Republican delegation left by special train tonight for Batavia with a note from the new Republican cabinet which Premier Amir Sjariffoeddin said he was "confident would prove acceptable to the Netherlands and dissipate fears of war."

A high Indonesian official said the Republican reply was "an acceptance of the request contained in the United States' "aide memoire" of June 28. A peaceful settlement of differences between the Indonesians and Dutch in setting up the United States of Indonesia.

The Indonesian informant said the note being taken to Batavia accepts ultimate authority of the Netherlands crown representative over the interim government during the period before the full sovereignty is granted to Indonesia January 1, 1949.

Parting Isn't So Sweet: Romeo Pastes Juliet

Detroit, July 5 (AP).—Romeo was in jail today, charged with beating Juliet.

Juliet St. Amour, 35, told police her husband, Romeo, 39, beat her Friday evening. The couple had been separated for two years.

Carol Marries Lupescu, Ill

was reported to have collapsed before the ceremony was over. Considering her condition, there was doubt she realized that she had at last become the wife of the man who has been her unswerving lover since 1924 and twice gave up his throne for her.

Six witnesses, all close friends, were present.

Ernest Urdarinau, Carol's chamberlin, who with his wife was one of the six, said the wedding was held under Brazilian law. But Carol was so afraid that she would die before they could be married, he did not take time to summon a civil judge.

The marriage act, signed by the six witnesses, will be presented to the Seventh District Court for registration, as the law requires.

In Bed Several Weeks

Although Magda had been confined to her bed for several weeks, her condition did not become grave until Thursday. That was why Carol hurried the wedding.

They had been here since 1944. Since September 5, 1940, when Carol surrendered his power in Romania to Gen. Ionin Antonescu and abdicated his throne to his son, he and mistress wandered from Spain, to Portugal, to Cuba, to Mexico and finally to Brazil. They recently tried in vain to return to Paris.

Wood Waste Reported at Critical Stage

American forests cannot indefinitely supply lumber in the sizes and qualities now required, the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture reported yesterday.

In spite of this serious situation, the service says in a report on "Wood Waste in the United States," 57 per cent of the wood cut each year is wasted or burned for fuel.

"Of 188 million tons of wood cut in the forest of the United States each year for lumber, pulp and paper, and other commercial products, 109 million tons are wasted or burned," the statement declares.

Conversion Urged

"Part of the enormous yearly waste can and should be converted into products needed to satisfy human needs," it says.

To halt the tremendous waste, the Forest Service recommended a five-point program:

1. Integration of timber industries, for example, sawmills with paper and pulp mills.
2. Extension of forest management, with the aim of sustaining yields through proper conservation.
3. Research to find ways of making old products with less waste and new ways of using wood waste.
4. Technical assistance to woodland owners and processors.
5. Public aid in developing new waste-reducing processes.

Waste Explained

Largest waste takes place in turning logs into lumber, pulp and paper, veneer, railroad ties or, in what the trade call "primary manufacture."

Waste through these operations in 1944 totaled 53 million tons, the report says.

Logging waste, through trees smashed or destroyed, or logs left to rot in the forests, is placed at 49 million tons.

Furniture, millwork and flooring plants waste about seven million tons annually.

Forty per cent of the lumber is burned for fuel, the report declares, much of it "wastefully and inefficiently." Much of this, it adds, "is suitable for commodities of much higher value than fuel."

In an appeal to outdoor recreation seekers to be more careful of the use of matches, campfires and other fire hazards while in the woods, the Service reported a 40 per cent jump in the number of man-caused forest fires last year.

Last year forest fires burned 20 million acres of forest and range lands, with a loss of 32 million dollars.

Garbo Accepts $20,000 Estate Left by Hermit

Allegan, Mich., July 5 (U.P.)—Screen Actress Greta Garbo today accepted a $20,000 estate left her by an Allegan hermit who also wanted to be alone and cherished her as his dream girl during the 20 years he avoided the world.

The hermit was Edgar Donne, 67, who died last October in a dilapidated shack on his 140-acre farm.

Leo Buerr, a Grand Rapids, Mich., attorney said the hermit once trekked to Hollywood, dressed in a new suit, but apparently never got near the actress he loved. Buerr said Donne was banished by his family for a youthful love affair and roamed all over the world before settling here.

Senora Peron's Auto Strikes Aged Petitioner

Rome, July 5 (U.P.)—Senora Eva de Peron's car today struck and slightly injured a 63-year-old Italian woman who rushed toward the automobile to throw a petition into the lap of the Argentine President's wife.

The woman, Amalia Congiunti of Forsinone, said that Senora Peron had promised to fulfill her petition and her 23-year-old son, Mario, will leave with the next group of emigrants for Buenos Aires.

Fort Belvoir Reconditioning Service Army's Answer to Goldbricking, Too Quick Cures

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

Pvt. William H. King, his neck broken, can still read with this aid made for him at the Fort Belvoir reconditioning service's occupational therapy workshop

It used to be on old Army game, when a man wanted a rest, to report at sick call with "spots before his eyes," and relax in the hospital for a month or so.

At the other extreme, men with serious ailments too often were sent back to duty after being cured "according to the book," but actually before they were completely fit.

The Reconditioning Service at Fort Belvoir is the Army's answer to these problems. Born of necessity, the program was developed in the Pacific theater in 1944.

Its purpose is to furnish a physical and mental transition from hospital back to duty. It is compulsory for all men hospitalized more than 15 days.

When a man is released from the Fort Belvoir hospital, he moves into barracks at the reconditioning center. He may stay a week or five months, depending on his ailment. The service also works with patients, giving bed exercises and other therapy.

The center operates on a strict military basis, reminding the boys of recruit training. Lights are out at 11 p. m. and the routine is strictly "GI." The program doesn't attract malingerers.

Each man is assigned to physical reconditioning schedule according to his condition. They work up from croquet to 10-mile hikes and a combat obstacle course.

An occupational therapy workshop has been set up for men who have suffered severe fractures and need long periods of gradual exercise. There a man recovering from a leg fracture can make a rug on a foot-operated loom to stretch tendons and reactivate flabby muscles. Or he can recuperate from a broken arm by working with a hand-operated press.

Doctors find they can't get far by telling a man to flex a wrist or ankle. But they get action by putting him to work on something that shows results.

There is also work therapy—office work, editing the center's weekly paper, mowing the lawn—for those recovering from other kinds of ailments.

Another phase is educational reconditioning. A well stocked library includes current issues of literary and technical periodicals. There are daily movies of an educational or recreational nature. The men are encouraged to enroll in courses of the Armed Forces Institute.

Nominally, the chief surgeon at the station hospital is head of the Reconditioning Service. Actually, most of the daily work is handled by Ernest S. Corso and Capt. Augustine Helms, Medical Administration Corps. Corso, mustered out six months ago, has worked with the Fort Belvoir program since its inception.

Lewis Delays Signing Treaty With North and Ignores South

of the Illinois Coal Operators Association, voiced strong hope that his State's 28 mining companies would resume operations. He told a reporter:

"Unless the northern contract is worse than its advance notices—and that's bad enough—I expect to sign in behalf of Illinois producers.

"I certainly hope to see the Illinois mines reopened on Tuesday when the mine vacation ends."

The Illinois Association employs 40,000 miners. Other operator spokesmen predicted that Indiana mines, with more than 10,000 workers, would go along. The Northern and "captive" coal workings, in tentative agreement with Lewis since Wednesday, employ 150,000. The captive mines are steel company-owned, in both North and South.

The position of other Midwestern operators, like those of the Far West, was uncertain as the deadline neared.

The Southern group, which split from Northern producers in December when the Northerners made conciliatory gestures to Lewis, supply 25 per cent of the country's coal.

More than a score of the Southern operators were on hand in Washington. Most of them stated frankly they "don't like" the Northern terms and some insist the proposed settlement would "give the industry to Lewis."

There was little likelihood that Lewis would offer them better terms than those accorded the Northern and captive producers, but one concession to the South was possible—a separate welfare fund jointly administered by union and operators.

Under the Northern terms, the 5-cents-a-ton levy upon operators for the welfare fund is increased to 10 cents. The Southerners object to the whole idea of the welfare fund, which was granted by the Government while it was in possession of the mines for the last 13 months.

Observers said they saw little doubt that the Southern owners would have to accept a fund eventually but, if so, they do not wish to share the management rights of fund administration with operators from other sections.

Northern operators said they expected few mines to operate on Saturdays under the new wage terms. The new hourly rate of $1.63 an hour (as against the old rate of $1.18½) brings the daily wage to $13.05. If a miner works Saturday as well as the preceding five days, he will be paid $19.57 for the day.

One operator spokesman predicted that few mines would be willing to stand this steep wage cost to keep running six days a week, especially since many pits already have curtailed their Saturday operation.

8 Billion Held Needed for Plumbing

By the United Press

Americans, whose plumbing is the wonder of the world, got an eight-billion-dollar jolt last night from the U. S. Public Health Service, which said the Nation needs a practically new water and sewage system for millions of its citizens.

Winding up the most complete inventory ever made of America's basic sanitation needs, the Health Service said a minimum of $7,834,581,000 should be spent on better water and waste-disposal facilities serving more than 100 million persons.

Almost 40 per cent of this needed construction is at least in the planning stage, the service reported. Much of the work was put off during the war but cannot be longer delayed, officials said, if the threat of filth-borne diseases is to be avoided.

Some six million homes, the service said, need either new sanitary privies or major repairs to existing ones.

Despite this need, farm areas are better off than some big cities. In New York City alone, the report said, one billion dollars must be spent to bring water and sewer standards up to par.

U. S. Sets All-Time Record In Food Export, Truman Says

corn that went into last year's tremendous total food exports of 18,433,000 long tons (2240 pounds) is shown in comparison of 1946 grain exports with the year just ending:

In 1946 10,376,000 long tons of wheat or flour was exported, and only 1,574,000 tons of other grains.

This year the wheat shipments were about the same, or 10,520,000 long tons. But other grains rose to a total of 4,538,000 tons.

Commitments Indefinite

The members of Mr. Truman's Cabinet committee are Secretaries Anderson (Agriculture), Marshall (State), and Harriman (Commerce).

Both the President's statement and the committee report made no definite export commitments beyond last month. Allocations for grain exports have been made for July and August, calling for continued exports at present high levels.

The committee's report said continuation of the program for these two months is possible because of prospects for a record-breaking wheat crop.

"Our country was blessed last year with the most bountiful harvest in our history," Mr. Truman said.

"Our farmers worked hard to produce record crops.

"The food industries, the railroads, the shipping companies, and the Government agencies cooperated to make possible the movement of food on schedule from American farms to foreign ports.

"Within our ability to share our resources, we will continue to do our part to relieve human suffering and to help other countries to help themselves. It is the course we must follow."

An illustration of how this country is helping other countries help themselves, is given in the committee report. It referred to an "indirect food help" by the Army in shipping fertilizer to the occupied zones of Europe.

"During the calendar year, 1947," it said, "the Army plans to supply fertilizer material containing about 143,000 long tons of badly needed nitrogen.

"This nitrogen is being produced in plants which are under Army jurisdiction and does not come out of our commercially produced supplies. It will be a vital contribution to the job of getting these areas back into normal domestic food production.

"In addition to the fertilizer shipments to occupation zones, substantial quantities of nitrogenous fertilizer have also been exported to other devastated areas in accordance with International Emergency Food Council recommendations as to the regions of greatest need.

"More work of the kind which will help restore production in the needy areas should be done in order to reduce the unusual drain on American food and financial resources."

Self-Help Encouraged

The program of encouraging foreign countries to build up their production will be furthered, the report says, at the Special Cereals Conference in Paris beginning Wednesday.

This meeting was called by the United Nations Fund and Agriculture Organizations upon recommendations of the Department of Agriculture, the report adds.

At the meeting, the report says, "the effort will be to acquaint all countries with facts of the world food situation ahead, and to encourage the most adequate possible steps on the part of importing countries to increase the effectiveness of their own production, distribution and utilization of food supplies."

Grain and grain products made up about 81 per cent of the total exports. One third of last year's wheat crop was sent abroad.

Meat shipments, totaling 224,000 tons, made up 1.2 per cent of the exports, and were about 2.3 per cent of the country's year's production.

Dairy products totaled 493,000 tons, about 2.7 per cent; fats and oils, 233,000, about 1.3 per cent.

The remaining 2,425,000 tons, or 13 per cent, included dried beans and peas, fish, eggs, sugar, poultry, potatoes, vegetables, fruits and nuts.

Breakdown of Exports

Zones in Europe occupied by American and British forces, got 3,481,000 long tons or about 18.9 per cent of total shipments; the United Kingdom, 1,652,000 tons or about 9 per cent; Italy, 1,349,000 tons or about 7.3 per cent; France and French North Africa, 771,000 tons or about 4.2 per cent; Belgium, 614,000 tons or about 3.3 per cent; the Netherlands, 600,000 or about 3.3 per cent, and all other European countries combined 2,678,000 or about 14.5 per cent.

In the Far East, Japan and Korea received 1,642,000 long tons or about 8.9 per cent of the total. India received 1,003,000 or about 5.4 per cent; the Philippines, 523,000 or 2.8 per cent; China, 238,000 or 1.3 per cent; the Netherlands East Indies, 102,000 or about .5 per cent. The Latin-American republics received 2,322,000 or about 12.6 per cent, and all other countries, 1,454,000 or about 8 per cent.

Probe by Senate Into Occupation Of Germany Due

The long-delayed Senate investigation of the American occupation of Germany, including reports of widespread misconduct and immorality among United States troops, is expected to get under way this summer, it was learned yesterday.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who has been plugging for the investigation, said he had been assured by Committee Chairman Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) that the group would consider the matter.

A proposed investigation of the occupation last year was stymied after the State Department objected it might seriously impair American prestige in Europe. That inquiry was sought on the basis of a report by George Meader, former counsel of the Senate War Investigating Committee, alleging misconduct and immorality on the part of United States troops in the occupied zone.

Berliners Are Afraid U. S. May Leave City

Berlin, July 5.—Many Berliners, frightened by rumors that the western powers will evacuate this city and leave it to the Russians, are making preparations for flight to western Germany or are already en route, it was reported today by the German press and radio.

Despite statements by Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor, that the Americans have no intention of leaving, Berliners have been considerably upset by the failure of the Paris conference.

Truman Food Statement

Text of President Truman's statement on the world food program follows:

The Cabinet committee on world food programs, which I appointed last September to coordinate the activities of the United States in shipping food abroad, has submitted a report that should gratify every American.

To meet urgent human needs abroad, nearly 18½ million long tons of grain and other food were exported by the United States in the year ending June 30, 1947. This is the largest total of food ever shipped from one country in a single year.

Our country was blessed last year with the most bountiful harvest in our history. Our farmers worked hard to produce record crops. The food industries, the railroads, the shipping companies, and the Government agencies cooperated to make possible the movement of food on schedule from American farms to foreign ports.

But we must not lose sight of the fact that even the great efforts of this and other exporting countries fell short of meeting the world's urgent postwar needs for food. Many millions of people are still desperately hungry.

The Cabinet committee reports that crop prospects abroad have been reduced by the severe winter in northern Europe, and that in the months ahead substantial shipments of food—expecially wheat—must be continued.

Within our ability to share our resources, we will continue to do our part to relieve human suffering and to help other countries to help themselves. tI is the course we must follow.

The arrangements under which it was possible for us to ship such large quantities of food abroad are, therefore, being continued. I have asked the Cabinet committee and the coordinator of emergency export programs to carry on for the coming year. The assistant to the President will, as in the past, take all possible steps to help expedite this program.

Dykstra Undisturbed Over Peace Delays

San Francisco, July 5 (AP).—Americans fearful of delays in setting up effective world peace machinery should remember it took 13 years after the end of the American Revolution to adopt the Constitution, reminds Clarence A. Dykstra, provost of the University of California at Los Angeles.

"Just now every difference of opinion, every word of Molotov, for instance, is magnified and viewed with alarm," Dykstra told a closing session of the American Library Association's sixty-sixth annual conference last night.

"Ou problem is to prepare ourselves intellectually and socially for living in the world which science and technology have created. As yet we haven't made the accommodation."

AFL Urges Unions to Form Cooperatives

"much more than enough to offset wage gains," it said.

The AFL said prices must come down and consumers buying power must go up if full production and employment are to be maintained.

"By organizing as consumers in cooperatives we can mobilize our buying power to achieve these goals," the AFL said.

"When we own our cooperative stores, credit unions, wholesales and factories, we can use wherever necessary the only effective means of reducing prices—that is, competition in the free market with other businesses."

On Capitol Hill, leading Republican and Democratic members of the Joint Senate-House Economic Committee urged that the Nation's economic outlook for the immediate future is generally bright.

The chief cloud—one which appears larger to Democrats than Republicans—is the possibility that high prices may "rock the boat."

Two leading Republicans and two Democrats on the committee based their views on testimony received in public hearings from nine leaders of business, labor, agriculture and banking.

In that testimony, four business leaders and two bankers generally agreed that widespread fears expressed earlier this year, that there would be a serious recession in the fall, are groundless. A fifth industrialist thought business would decline.

The farm spokesman had indicated farmers' prospects are very good for a considerable period. The labor representative was pessimistic. He felt present trends might cause an economic collapse in about six months.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), committee chairman and chief Republican spokesman in the Senate on domestic affairs, told a reporter he believed that business will continue "at approximately the same rate for the rest of the year."

Prince Georges Detective Head Makes Hobby of Crime Slides

Almost every major crime and accident in Prince Georges County, Md., since 1939 is represented in the steopticon slide collection of Detective Lieut. Charles N. Thomsen.

Thomsen

Lieut. Thomsen, who became first chief of county detectives last Tuesday, had been county identification officer since 1939.

The 200 slides in his collection represent more than a macabre interest. Scenes they depict and the close-ups of wounds and other subject matter are of great interest not only to police, but also to medical men.

Dr. James I. Boyd, county medical examiner, has borrowed the slides for display to the county medical society and to his classes at George Washington University. The FBI has used them in the instruction of agents.

Several collections of photographs of this type of material are in existence, but Thomsen's collection has the advantage. Phtographs must be studied individually while his slides are shown on a screen to a large group.

Thomsen attended the FBI police academy and other police schools and has been doing fingerprint and identification work for more than 10 years. Before he joined the Prince Georges County force he was a member of the Takoma Park Town Police force.

The slide collection, part of it in color, has been gathered painstakingly in his own time, and the equipment for holding the slides, and the slides themselves, were paid for from his own pocket. But Thomsen takes pride in the fact that his collection is becoming more and more generally used by officials in the Washington area.

Navy Tests 'Sofar' Equipment to Find Survivors at Sea

The Navy announced yesterday it has tried out its first "sofar" equipment—to locate survivors of sea disasters—and found it successfully transmitted signals 2300 miles through the deep water of the Pacific.

The Navy exploded bombs near the Hawaiian Islands and recorded the sound at Monterey, Calif.

Here's how sofar will work in sea disaster rescues:

Planes will be equipped with bombs weighing about five pounds. These may be launched by planes in distress.

The sound of the explosions travels through the water at about a mile per second. The listening stations record the sound by figuring the difference in the time in which the signal reaches various stations, and basing calculations upon the known speed at which the signal travels, the location of the explosion may be plotted.

Faith Healer, 'Patient' Near End of Seclusion

Palm Springs, Calif., July 5 (AP).—Near the end of his 30 days in seclusion, Avak Hagopian, young Aremenian self-described faith healer, remained in his undisclosed mountain retreat today along with Vaughn Arekalian, whom he is attempting to cure of epilepsy.

The bearded Armenian and Arakelian left June 9, and no word has been received from them since. Arakelian is the 37-year-old son of Kirkor Arakelian, wealthy vintner who brought Avak here.

Men are sought for all openings except home economics instructor.

Leaning Tower Held in Need of Reinforcement

Pisa, July 5.—This city's 600-year-old leaning tower, one of the wonders of the world, is in need of a million-dollar foundation reinforcement, the Pisa city engineers disclosed today.

The leaning tower is moving out of line at the rate of 1 foot in three centuries, one of the officials explained. Before the war 1000 tons of cement was placed under the tower to steady it, but at least another 10,000 tons is necessary, he estimated.

However, at the present rate, it would take "several centuries" before it keeled over.

City to Honor Naval Hero Of Revolution

Greater Washington will join the Nation this afternoon in remembering the 200th birthday of America's first great sea fighter—John Paul Jones.

At the foot of his monument, 17th st. sw. and the Tidal Basin, a wreath will be laid at 1 p. m. Records show that the victorious leader of America's Revolutionary War Navy was born "shortly after the sun had reached its meridian on July 6."

More elaborate ceremonies are scheduled at Fredericksburg, Va., 55 miles away, where a host of high naval officers will gather at 4 p. m. (EST) to honor the father of the United States Fleet.

Fleet Admiral William F. Halsey, USN (ret.), chief speaker at the Fredericksburg ceremonies, and speakers at other observances are expected to sound an echo of the warning of the early naval hero, who said:

"America must become the first marine power in the world. In time of peace it is necessary to prepare for war by sea."

The Soviet naval attache here, Rear Admiral Eugen Georgievich Glinkov, will be among the military dignitaries making the trip to Fredericksburg.

Marine Guard Given 9 Months for Brig Brutality

Annapolis, Md., July 5 (AP).—With the sentencing of Marine Pfc. Arthur E. Fannin, jr., to nine months' imprisonment, the Navy today officially completed the battery of courts-martial that followed an investigation last winter of alleged brutalities in the Severn River Naval Command brig.

Fannin's sentence was accompanied by an order that the 21-year-old Logan, W. Va., veteran of Pacific campaigns be given a bad conduct discharge.

At Norfolk, Va., he will be imprisoned with two others convicted of a part in what Navy investigators charged were continuing abuses of prisoners in the North Severn brig early last winter.

Marine Pfc. Joseph C. O'Leary of Buffalo, N. Y., and Seaman 1/C James E. Childs of Camilla, Ga., were given sentences last week. Both were prisoners in the brig at the time they were accused of beating fellow prisoners.

Three other Marine guards—Corpl. William E. Harrison of Temple, Tex., Corpl. Harold N. St. Clair of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Pfc. Roger E. Fontaine of Grand Coulee, Wash.—were acquitted.

6 Cities Differ With District

have been a valuable asset in attempts to solve the crimes.

In addition to withholding these cases from official local statistics, the Washington police failed to include them in totals sent to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for inclusion in Uniform Crime Reports. They were withheld, too, from the Congress, the public and the press.

761 Out of 1350

The Post's survey of 11 months brought to light more than 1350 actual robbery reports made to police. The Police Department's Statistical Bureau had reports on only 761 of them.

Chief Barrett, two days before he was worn in as police superintendent, ordered an immediate investigation of the practices exposed by The Post.

His order was followed by one from Inspector Floyd A. Truscott, new chief of detectives, calling a halt to "pocketing" and "holding" habits. Truscott's order demanded that all reports be put on precinct station books and transmitted to the Police Headquarters Central Bureau immediately.

But, last Tuesday, Barrett's first official order as major and superintendent established officially a "hold" system heretofore conducted by "understanding."

False Reports Entered, Canceled

Barrett listed three categories under which complaints may be withheld from official statistics:

1. When there is reason to doubt the veracity of the complainant.
2. When publicity may hinder an investigation or give information to the culprit.
3. When there is danger of embarrassing hitherto reputable citizens.

The six departments contacted by The Post do not countenance withholding cases under any of the circumstances listed by Barrett.

In Detroit, Inspector Walter Carrigan, acting chief of detectives, said all police records are public and under no circumstance are complaints withheld from statistics.

False reports, too, are entered on officials records, he said. If proven false later, they are canceled.

Reporters Asked to Cooperate

If publicity might retard an investigation of a crime," Carrigan asserted, newspapermen are asked to cooperate. (St. Louis also asks newspaper help in avoiding harmful publicity).

Complaints are never hidden to guard a reputation, he declared.

Reports originate with the uniformed patrolmen, the Detroit inspector said. The patrolmen notify the Detective Bureau inspector and both made official records of the case. The inspector's report is written in duplicate and one of the copies is sent to the compiler of official statistics, Carrigan said.

Philadelphia, Baltimore, Richmond, St. Louis and New York follow substantially the same systems. Complaints are recorded at precinct stations, transmitted to the Detective Bureau and immediately made a part of statistical records.

New York and Philadelphia withhold names from statistical [illegible]es, but never the fact that a crime has taken place.

New York's crime reports are [illegible] kept confidential. They are [illegible]en neither to the public nor newspapers, but are never withheld [illegible]om department files.

Richmond police, who have no [illegible]letype system, mimeograph and [illegible]ansmit all complaints to station [illegible]ouses. Daily precinct records are [illegible]orwarded for statistics.

Barrett to Insist on Police Being Courteous to Visitors

Washingtonians and visitors to the National Capital will be greeted by a courteous police force if Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett and Municipal Court Judge Nadine Gallagher have anything to do with it.

Barrett yesterday announced he and other police high-ups will visit each of the 13 police precincts to lecture policemen on the importance of courtesy.

The visits will start, he said, as soon as he gets paper work in the superintendent's office, which he assumed July 1, under control.

Accompanying him he said, will be Inspector Floyd Truscott, newly-appointed chief of detectives; Inspector Walter Thomas, his administrative assistant; and the inspector over the precinct to be visited.

"I intend to make this force one the whole of Washington will be proud of," the superintendent declared.

Meanwhile, Municipal Judge Gallagher suspended a $5 fine against Marine Lieut. Elmo Stingley, 30, Camp Lejeune, N. C., charged with disorderly conduct. Stingley accused Police Pvt. E. R. Blankenship with being "overbearing and sarcastic" in arresting him for speeding.

"Can't you understand English?" Stingley quoted the policeman as shouting at one point. Stingley was fined $10 on the speeding charge by Judge John P. McMahon.

Commented Judge Gallagher: "It is as unfortunate for a policeman to provoke a man he has arrested as it is to have the crime committed. We must understand there is a delicate relationship between the police and the public."

Barrett has received several complaints that visitors to precinct stations have had to wait awkwardly until policemen get ready to handle their business. Other complaints of discourtesy also have been received.

Deafened People May Now Hear Clearly
Science has now made it possible for the deafened to hear faint sounds. It is a hearing device so small that it fits in the hand and enables thousands to enjoy sermons, music and friendly companionship. Accepted by the Council on Physical Medicine of the American Medical Association. This device does not require separate battery pack, battery wire, case or garment to bulge or weigh you down. The tone is clear and powerful. So made that you can adjust it yourself to suit your hearing as your hearing changes. The makers of Beltone, Dept. 6, 1450 West 19th St., Chicago 8, Ill., are so proud of their achievement that they will gladly send free descriptive booklet and explain how you may get a full demonstration of this remarkable hearing device in your own home without risking a penny. # President Idles Under Trees After Strenuous July Fourth

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Charlottesville, Va.—President Truman rested today under the great trees at Colle, just a few hundred yards from historic Monticello, after his strenuous July Fourth of speech making and formal ceremony.

Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said he had received no reaction to his ringing challenge yesterday to the Soviet Union to join in cooperation toward world peace. Although he did not mention Russia, Mr. Truman in his Monticello speech called the Russians to task for their isolationist policy and particularly for scuttling the Paris Conference on European collaboration for recovery.

Walks With Aides

The President went to bed about 11 last night and, for him, slept late—until 6:30 a. m. Then, clad in a light jersey, slacks and heavy walking shoes and carrying a stick, went for a walk over the mountains with his aides, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan and Rear Admiral James H. Foskett, and Stanley Woodward, chief of the State Department protocol division, his host.

Before embarking on his walk, the President sat under a sweeping mimosa tree on the Woodward estate, read the morning papers and watched the birds going about their morning chores in the trees. Among those he watched were wrens, catbirds, mockingbirds and what Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, White House physician, described as a tufted titmouse. General Graham, an amateur ornithologist of no mean repute, said Mr. Truman "knows birds pretty well."

Especially interesting to the President was a noisy fight between a cardinal and a blackbird.

U. S., Soviet Base Requests Likely to Fail

By Ned Nordness

Oslo, July 5 (INS).—A high Norwegian source asserted tonight that Denmark will reject the United States bid to maintain and erect military bases on Greenland, thus strengthening Norway's hand against similar requests from Russia in regard to Spitzbergen.

Negotiations between Denmark and Norway have extended for 20 years the treaty between the two countries giving Norway certain rights in east Greenland.

Both countries, freely but unofficially, discussed the American and Russia requests.

A high government official said: "We expressed ourselves of being highly desirous that Denmark reject flatly United States proposals for defense bases on Greenland.

"The Danish government apparently had made the decision long ago to turn down the American request. Denmark might conceivably adopt a change of attitude, but this hardly is probable."

He added:

"As long as Denmark refuses to accede to the United States request it is hardly likely that Russia will insist in its demands for bases on Spitzbergen. We are not at all certain such would be the case if America was granted its request for defense bases on Greenland."

The informant stated both Denmark and Norway desired to stay out of power politics between Russia and the United States.

China Orders Higher Taxes, Wider Draft to Combat Reds

Shanghai, July 5 (AP).—The Chinese government's new orders for "total mobilization" against the Communists confronted the people today with the prospects of wider conscription and higher taxes.

Most dispassionate observers said the results probably would be more symbolic than practical.

Neutral onlookers said it would help if Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek could get true instead of fictitious battle reports.

It is common knowledge that Chiang did not realize the gravity of the situation in Manchuria, for example, until the Communists threatened to chase the government armies clear out.

At the last minute, the government forces partly retrieved the situation at bloody Szepingkai.

[The United Press said the Nationalist army has started its summer offensive along the Tsinan-Tsingtao Railway which bisects Shantung.

[According to Chinese reports, Chiang Kai-shek's troops were seeking to split Communist units in Shantung and force Communists in the central area out of mountain hideouts.]

Soviet Advance Confirmed

Nanking, China, July 5 (U.P.).—A high source close to the Foreign Ministry today confirmed Gen. Hsiung Shih-hui's announcement that a regiment of troops from the Soviet Army had crossed into Chinese territory and seized Tahcheng, in upper Sinkiang Province, 15 miles east of the Soviet-Chinese border.

Chiang Kai-shek's government has not yet decided what to do.

Lack of Funds Threatens to Halt Functions Of Temporary Home for Soldiers and Sailors

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

An old Washington landmark—and haven for weary war veterans of four generations—is threatened with extinction for lack of funds.

The District Commissioners have deleted from the local budget $24,500 needed to run the historic Temporary Home for Former Soldiers and Sailors, 921 Pennsylvania ave. se.

The 1947 operating funds, amounting to $23,000, ran out June 30, and since then the home has been operating on a private bequest "by a little old woman in Alabama."

The home, a three-story red-brick building which until 1922 served as a Navy hospital, offers daily refuge to an average of 30 veterans, and can take care of as many as 85.

The home was founded by the Grand Army of the Republic in the early eighties as a temporary haven for veterans coming to the Nation's Capital to press their claims for pensions. Throughout the years, at different locations, the home has served veterans of the Civil War, Spanish-American War, World War I, and more recently, World War II.

There are five perament employes at the home, a superintendent, a watchman, a janitor, and two cooks. Visiting veterans are permitted 10 days' lodgings during a year, and three meals each day.

For many years the veterans "Well, up to now we've always managed to get the funds re-raised their own funds to run the refuge. Shortly after World War I, Congress was persuaded to appropriate operating expenses via the District government, which has fiscal supervision over activities of the home.

Policy of the home is directed by a board of managers made up of 35 representatives of veterans organizations, headed by Charles W. McCaffrey of 403 12th st. ne.

A Spanish-American War sergeant, McCaffrey retired as a Naval Gun Factory superintendent 10 years ago and since has served as chairman of the board of managers of the home.

"In the past several years the District Commissioners have removed our home budget from the District appropriations because they've felt the home was not strictly a District operation," McCaffrey explained last night. stored. We hope to do the same this year."

The immediate problem, according to McCaffrey, is to contact Watson B. Miller, Federal Security Adiminstrator, who is chairman of the board of management's budget committee.

"He'd gotten us out of dilemma's like this before, "McCaffrey explained, "but now he's out of town.

"Until he's found, and he gets Congress to help us with an appropriation, we'll manage to get along on the bequest from the little old woman in Alabama."

Arab Red Sees Imperialism Against Soviet

Jerusalem, July 5 (AP).—A member of the Arab Communist Party executive committee said today his group was opposed to a Jewish state in Palestine because it would be used as a base for "Anglo-American imperialism" and to promote war "against the new democracies and the Soviet Union."

Emil C. Touma, member of the central committee of the National Liberation League, which he described as the Communist Party of the Arab working classes, said during a news conference at the Arab office that his group was supporting the Arab boycott of the United Nations Commission on Palestine in order to preserve Arab unity.

Touma said his league had 3000 members and the support of "30,000 Arab workers." He said there was no cooperation between Arab and Jewish Communists, but the groups "most probably would merge in the event of independence."

He said his organization supported itself by dues and funds collected at rallies but not from any outside nation.

"We receive moral support from Russia and from progressive elements everywhere," he added. "We support Russia in the fight for peace and democracy and we believe they fight for peace and democracy."

The committee, in recess today because of the Jewish Sabbath, is scheduled to leave July 20 for Geneva.

Army Hunts for C-54 And Fears the 'Worst'

West Palm Beach, Fla., July 5 (AP).—Army authorities feared the "worst" today in their search for a missing C-54 military cargo plane with six aboard. The Atlantic Ocean had given up an oxygen bottle and a yellow cushion identified as Army aircraft equipment.

Small Quake Recorded

Berkeley, Calif., July 5 (AP).—A "small" earthquake was recorded on the University of California seismograph at 11:41.18 p. m. (PST) last night. It was estimated to center 80 miles away, probably in the Hollister area.

New Constitution Given Venezuelan Citizens

Caracas, Venezuela, July 5. (U.P.).—A new constitution was promulgated today by the national assembly on the 136th anniversary of Venezuela's independence from Spain.

Provisional President Romulo Betancourt announced that the country's first presidental elections by universal, secret vote will be held within three months.

Peron Crisis Held Faked

duced crisis," managed to give them a plea they need dollars for ordinary commercial imports.

In the slight-of-hand financing framed to get industrial power and political influence for Argentina first and always, the Argentine peso has been allowed to shake, as if in warning.

But more staggering, more than 1,500,000,000 pesos in profits from smart international trading in the latter months of 1946 and early 1947 have been spirited away into a realm of complete official secrecy. Actually the figure at present must be a great deal more than this.

Argentina is not turning into her gold and foreign exchange funds, as reported by the Central Bank, the profits from her rich sales abroad.

Somewhere the government has a special fund into which the foreign exchange earned by these sales is going. Also, foreign exchange realized by recent gold shipments to the United States must go somewhere.

The Economic Survey, the most reliable independent financial analyst service of Argentina, reported in its letter of June 10:

"In the eight months that have elapsed between the end of September, 1946, and the end of May, 1947, we have lost not less than 1,421,000,000 pesos in gold and free foreign exchange. The greater part of the shrinkage occurred during this year." This is 35 per cent of Argentine gold and exchange resources, it says.

"The development is all the more surprising as during the same period our foreign trade yielded a very high favorable balance not under 1,057,400,000 pesos. It is astonishing that no trace can be found in the Central Bank balances of this high export surplus."

Spending Dollars in U. S.

A report is that heavy dollar expenditures in the United States have "exhausted" or "theatened" Argentina's exchange resources, since this lively trade has been against Argentina in the balances.

Facts are that the available figures for the months of October to the end of February show that while Argentina was piling up a favorable balance in over-all trade of 1,057,400,000 pesos, her unfavorable balance in the United States amounted to only 188 million pesos.

Since October, Argentina has "lost" 1,424,200,000 pesos in gold and foreign exchange. That the records show. Assume that as much dollar exchange went to us from March to the end of May as from October to February and still there is a billion pesos worth of gold and foreign exchange that went for something else.

Financial observers here are convinced that these pesos are earmarked for two purposes: Capital machinery purchases for the five-year-plan and the trade credits and loans Argentina is using to build her political bloc.

This withdrawal, however, leaves normal United States-Argentine trade gasping for want of dollar exchange. Already the Government has clamped down on the imports that make the bulk of our normal trade. An American loan to finance current trade will obviously be requested. Or else our normal trade will be hatcheted with restrictions.

Argentina needs over six billion pesos—$1,500,000,000—for the five-year-plan. She figures to get it.

D. C. Children Find Pebbles Fit in Nostrils

Two youngsters who stuffed mothballs and pebbles in their noses were among 83 District residents injured in home accidents last week.

Others hurt, according to a Red Cross home accident survey, included an 8-year-old girl who burned her hand in a pre-Fourth of July firecracker explosion; three children who swallowed pennies; three other youngsters who drank disinfectant, antifreeze and too much laxative, respectively.

Both an adult and a child received cuts when their hands caught in electric fans. A 7-month-old baby girl was bitten by a rat while sleeping. A child of 19 months fell and pulled over a pan of hot grease, receiving hand burns.

A boy of 10 stuck a needle in his foot, and a child of 6 was accidentally struck in the eye with an arrow. A 4-year-old boy ran his arm through a door while running out of an apartment, suffering severe lecerations.

Adults injured included a woman who fell from a first-floor window while attempting to climb into her house and a man who got bitten by a dog while trying to break up a dog fight.

Two falls and one asphyxiation brought home accident deaths for the year to 112.

Methodist Bishop Says Crisis Confronts World

Whitby, Ontario, July 5 (AP).—Bishop James C. ## Joan Blondell and Mike Todd Motor Away After Marriage

Miss Blondell

Las Vegas, Nev., July 5 (AP).—A few hours after their wedding, honeymooners Joan Blondell and Michael Todd departed today by motor for an unannounced destination.

An attache at El Rancho Vegas Hotel, where they were married last night, said they headed toward Hollywood.

Miss Blondell, comely actress, and Todd, New York producer, were married in a surprise ceremony after composing a little tiff over Independence Day.

The actress, 37, was formerly married to Cameraman George Barnes and Actor Dick Powell. She has a child by each, Norman, 12, and Ellen, 9. Todd's wife, Bertha, died of a heart attack last August. His most recent success was "Up in Central Park."

Germans Told Imports Cannot Fill Food Need

Stuttgart, Germany, July 5 (U.P.). American Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson told German food officials today they could not expect current food imports to "bridge the gap between world requirements and world supplies."

"The world shortage of cereals cannot be overcome," the Secretary said, "until importing countries produce much more and use their increased production efficiently."

Woman Arrested For Firing Pistol

New York, July 5.—A 59-year-old woman who fired her pistol into Barbey st., Brooklyn, on the Fourth of July, said in Felony Court today that she did it because she felt sorry for the children playing in the street and wanted to amuse them.

Police found the two doors to Miss Rose Ellis' apartment heavily barricaded with boards 2 inches wide and with padlocks. Detective William Brennan said that Miss Ellis lived in "Langley Collyer fashion." The apartment's three rooms, he said, were filled with junk and booby traps.

Miss Ellis' pistol was given to her, she said, by her father in Louisiana 47 years ago. She said that in her youth in Louisiana most women carried a pistol for protection when unescorted. She was sent to Kings County Hospital for observation.

Anti-Women Society Loses President in Strangest Way

London, July 5 (U.P.).—Fred Wormull, firebrand leader of Britain's Anti-Women Society, which excoriates females for stealing men's jobs and ruining men's morals, disclosed his dark secret today. He has been married for two months.

The revelation may cost him his position and may even shatter his organization founded 13 years ago to drive women back to the kitchen and nursery. Five years after founding the society, Wormull claimed a militant membership of 2300 males.

Today Fred refused to discuss how he was trapped. He was discovered in his London apartment with an apron tied humiliatingly around his waist.

"Doesn't your wife stay in the kitchen?" he was asked. Fred blushed.

"Violet, my wife, says housework should be on a 50-50 basis," the former enemy of women confessed cravenly.

Italy to Act on Treaty

Rome, July 5 (U.P.).—Foreign Minister Carlo Sforza said today the government would press for immediate ratification of the peace treaty by the Italian Assembly in order to place Italy on an equal footing with other nations at the Marshall plan conference in Paris, July 12.

PONTIAC
A fine car made finer
A Product of General Motors

The right car for most people!

Most people would be well advised to own a Pontiac.

In the first place, it fits readily into the average budget—for, over the years of ownership, no car is more economical.

And, in the second place, it serves so dependably and gives such complete satisfaction, that the average family is content to keep a Pontiac to the full period of its usefulness.

When a car combines such outstanding economy and such a high degree of satisfaction to its owner—the combination is hard to beat.

Consider Pontiac when you order your next car. Regardless of when you expect to get it—Pontiac will prove a wise choice.

Evidence Seen Proving People Spread Polio

Belief that polio is spread by "person to person contact" appears strengthened by recent data, Dr. C. C. Dauer, Health Department epidemiologist, said yesterday.

Evidence "of a convincing nature" is still lacking, however that the disease is carried by water, food, or insects, Dr. Dauer said.

"We can't tell yet how it spreads from one person to another," he declared.

Dr. Dauer said there is no indication of a polio epidemic here this year. "Present indications certainly don't point that way," he declared.

Third Best Polio Record

The District had the third best polio record among the States in 1946, he said. There were 3.4 cases per 100,000 population here, compared with the national average of 19 per 100,000. Only Pennsylvania and South Carolina had better records.

There were "approximately 25,000" cases of polio in the United States in 1946, more than in any year except 1916, Dr. Dauer reported. Thirty-six of these cases occurred in the District.

Better methods of reporting cases may be responsible for most of the apparent national increase, he pointed out.

An increase here from one case during the first six months of 1946 to three so far this year was dismissed by Dr. Dauer as "a matter of chance" and not significant.

Article Published

"There is nothing in these latest reports to indicate an epidemic of great proportions anywhere in the United States," he added.

Dr. Dauer's comments followed publication of his article, "Incidence of Poliomyelitis in 1946," in the latest weekly Public Health Reports issued by the United States Public Health Service.

He said his article was based on nationwide reports from various agencies and studies of recent medical literature.

Variety Program Today to Benefit Jr. Police Corps

Thousands are expected to turn out today for the benefit show of the Junior Police and Citizens Corps, scheduled for noon at the Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument Grounds.

Purpose of the program, which will feature a band concert, an amateur radio talent contest and a two-hour variety show with stars from stage, radio and night clubs, is to help boost the corps' lagging campaign for $25,000. The money will be used to maintain and expand its juvenile delinquency program.

A pair of boxing gloves once used by Joe Louis, baseballs autographed by Washington Senators and a bow tie worn by Frank Sinatra will be auctioned off. Admission will be 30 cents for children and $1 for adults.

Accused of Rape In Capitol Area, Man Is Arraigned

Accused of raping a 20-year-old girl on the Capitol grounds Friday night, Fred Montgomery, 22, of 914 6th st. nw., was held in $5000 bond for the grand jury when arraigned in Municipal Court yesterday.

According to the girl, a native of Athens, Ga., she met Montgomery in Union Station while waiting for a train South. She went for a walk with him across the plaza, she told police.

When they reached the Capitol grounds, she asserted, Montgomery pulled out a knife, first demanded money, and then attacked her.

Air, Motor Circus July 27 to Benefit Alexandria Club

A combination air circus and ground show for benefit of the St. Mary's Boys Club of Alexandria and the Alexandria Police Boys Camp will be held July 27 at Hybla Valley Airport.

Keaney Kopp, director of the show, said nationally known stunt fliers will participate. They will include Betty Skelton and Woody Edmondson.

Kopp and Jimmy Greenwood, both local aviators, will give a parachute exhibition.

The ground show will consist of automobile and motorcycle daredevil stunts. The show will begin at 2 p. m. and last four hours.

5-Year-Old Boy Found Not to Be Polio Sufferer

A 5-year-old boy of the 300 block of L st. se. was sent home from Gallinger Hospital yesterday after doctors ruled he was not suffering from polio.

He was one of three boys admitted to the hospital Wednesday as possible polio cases, Dr. Alvin Sweeney, Gallinger superintendent, reported.

Still "under observation" for possible polio, Dr. Sweney said, are two brothers, aged 7 and 10, of the 1300 block of S. Capitol st.

Lights Rule Traffic Even In Emergency

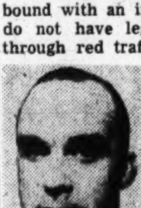
Washington motorists, hospital-bound with an injured passenger, do not have legal right to run through red traffic lights without stopping.



Miller

This was emphasized yesterday by Inspector Arthur E. Miller who referred to an accident Friday night in which two persons were fatally injured.

Edward Butcher, 26, 715 1st st. nw., who drove his speeding auto through a red light, told police he was hurrying a friend with a nose hemorrhage to a hospital.

Charge Manslaughter

Last night Butcher faced a charge of manslaughter. And funerals were being arranged for two of the accident victims, a 58-year-old woman and a 2-year-old boy. Both were passengers in the car struck by Butcher's, at N. Capitol and S sts.

"The only types of vehicles which have the right to run through red lights are police autos pursuing fleeing criminal suspects and fire apparatus on the way to a fire," Inspector Miller declared.

He added that even the fire apparatus must stop at red lights returning from a fire.

Others Must Stop

"All other vehicles, including ambulances, are required by law to stop and then, if the way is clear, then proceed.

"A private emergency auto with its horn being sounded may proceed if the way is clear, too, but only after coming to a full stop," the police official stated.

Miller said that he was going to instruct all traffic department men to enforce this regulation strictly.

A charge of passing a red light can bring a fine of $300 but Inspector Miller said that where there has been no accident, the fine usually has been $10. Accidents involve stiffer fines depending on severity.

Chevy Chase, Md., Couple Injured When Walk Falls

A Chevy Chase, Md., couple were among an estimated 45 persons injured when a section of a walk at Wildwood, N. J., collapsed Friday night during a fireworks display.

The vacationing couple, James P. Allnutt, 26, and Mrs. Allnutt, 27, of 510 Dorset ave., Chevy Chase, received first aid treatment for their injuries at Mace Hospital, North Wildwood, N. J., and were released. Mrs. Allnutt's father, Walter Brown, said last night they are expected home Tuesday.

Almost 100 persons were plunged 15 to 20 feet to the beach below when a 50-foot section of a wooden walk on the south side of Wildwood's Convention Hall fell through.

There were no deaths.

Accidental Death Toll Is 13 As D. C. Area Marks Holiday

two youths were injured when their motorcycle went out of control and ran into an embankment about 4:15 p. m. on Old Blandenburg rd. near Mica Mine rd. in Montgomery County, Md.

They were taken to Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park. The driver, Edward K. Clark, 20, 9903 Rogart rd., Silver Spring, had broken ribs and possibly a ruptured kidney; his passenger, Charles Hamilton, 22, 736 Scully dr., Silver Spring, a broken right hip.

The District's only drowning victim so far has been Tolson, an employe of Armour & Co. Harbor Police said Tolson apparently was attempting to swim across the channel with several companions when he weakened.

The Harbor Police patrol boat lifted Tolson's body with grapples about 20 minutes after being called to the scene and Rescue Squad No. 1 tried unsuccessfully to revive him. The body was taken to the District Morgue after identification by the victim's sister. Mrs. Mary Hull of 513 9th st. nw.

Tried to Save Sister

The double drowning of the Gochenour children in Turkey Run where it passes under the Shirley Highway about a half mile south of Route 236 occurred at about 7:30 p. m. Friday but was not reported until yesterday.

Fairfax County police said Lucille, the older sister, gave her life in a vain attempt to save her little sister, Virginia.

A group of children, which included two sisters of the victims, Helen, 5, and Zola, 12, were playing along the banks of the run when Virginia fell into the water at its deepest point.

Lucille jumped into the water where it was shallow and tried to extend a hand to the struggling toddler. However, she edged too close to deeper water and slipped in over her head.

Recovers Both Bodies

The other children ran to the home of John W. Biggers, jr., and he rushed t othe scene. He found the younger child floating on the surface and brought her to the banks of the run. Then he recovered the body of Lucille.

Other neighbors had been attracted to the scene by this time and assisted Biggers in administering artificial respiration to the sisters. This was supplemented by inhalators when the Alexandria Fire Department rescue squad arrived.

The children were declared dead when the rescue squad had worked unsuccessfully on them for two hours.

Rees died while rowing his wife, Eleanor, on the Potomac between Key and Chain bridges Friday. His wife said he suddenly complained of severe pains and collapsed. He died before help could reach him. Pending a coroner's certificate, police attributed his death to a heart attack induced by over-exertion.

Tinsley, who was crushed in a freak accident while trying to push a light delivery truck into the alley from a garage in the rear of 732 5th st. nw. at about 9 p. m. Friday, was not considered a traffic death, because the accident happened on private property.

According to police, Tinsley was reaching inside to steer the truck when he was crushed between the door frame of the truck and a 2x4 garage suppor[illegible]uty Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg said death was due to asphyxia resulting from compression.

Nationally, the number of violent deaths had reached 338 last night according to the United Press. This figure included 138 traffic deaths, 114 drownings, 82 deaths from miscellaneous accidents and four deaths from fireworks.

Fireworks Explode

The worst of the fireworks tragedies occurred at Elk Neck, Md., when Ann Cameron, 8, her cousin, Ruth Anne Holmes, 2 and Ann's father, William Cameron, 33, were fatally injured when a family store of fireworks exploded.

Seven members of the William Cameron and Raymond Holmes families were on the front porch when a spark from a cascading "flowerpot" ignited a box of 18 sky rockets. The rockets exploded in a multi-colored flash which filled the porch and enveloped the victims. The three other members of the two families were treated for less serious burns.

The fourth fireworks death occurred at a Skowhegan, Me., fair, when an aerial bomb exploded on the ground and killed an expert who had been hired to set off the display.

Speed Ace Crashes

These were other scenes of violence throughout the Nation during the holiday weekend:

Hundreds of spectators saw Marge Hurlburt, the Nation's leading woman speed ace, crash to her death at a Deborah, Iowa, air show.

Seven persons were burned to death when their car struck a loaded gasoline truck near Bristol, Fla.

Six persons who had crowded into a light, home-made boat were drowned in Lake Notely, near Blairsville, Ga., when the craft capsized.

A 16-year-old girl died when she fell from a 350?foot cliff in Wasatch Mountain Canyon in Utah.

Labor Relation Workshop Set By Vote Group

A series of three summer workshops on labor-management will be conducted by the Montgomery County League of Women Voters beginning at 8 p. m. Thursday in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

Open to the public, including men, the other sessions will be held July 31 and August 21. Miss Kathryn White, Bethesda, member of the staff of the Bureau of National Affairs, will be discussion leader. The series is held at the request of the National League to provide background material for a pamphlet on industrial relations for use of all league members throughout the country next year.

Mrs. J. Rene Hemongway, league president, said "The league has supported collective bargaining for 25 years. This will be the first attempt, however, to study the whole picture of industrial relations, and to define the public interest in that field."

Another summer project is being planned by the education chairman, Mrs. G. Beale Bloomer, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Donald S. Bliss, Takoma Park. Field trips to other counties will be made to learn how county library systems are set up and to discuss other education problems. Those interested should call Mrs. Bloomer at Oliver 8153.

Teen-Age Dances At Playgrounds Start Tomorrow

Six teen-age dances a week for nine weeks beginning tomorrow will be sponsored by the District Recreation Department. The dances, to be held from 9 to 11 p. m., will be on tennis courts and other hard-surface areas of playgrounds.

The music is being donated through the Musicians Protective Union, Local No. 161 (AFL).

Tuesday—Jefferson Junior High School, 7th and H sts. sw., with Altman's Orchestra.

Wednesday—Georgetown playground, 34th and Volta sts. nw., with Carr van Sickler Orchestra, and Taft playground, 20th and Otis sts. ne., with Jimmie Davis Orchestra.

Thursday—Congress Heights playgrounds, Savannah st. and Randle pl. se., with Jerry Rotis Orchestra, and Buchanan playground, 13th and D sts. se., orchestra to be announced.

Ships Receive Visitors

Norfolk, Va., July 5 (AP).—General visiting aboard ships at the Norfolk naval station and naval shipyard will be permitted all day tomorrow as the Navy observes the bicentennial of the birth of Admiral John Paul Jones.

Special exhibits will be on display at the naval aviation supply depot and the air station and naval station will admit visitors. At 8:45 p. m., searchlights aboard all naval vessels in port will be flicked on for a mammoth display. Fair skies are promised for this event.

The 45,000-ton battleship Missouri and the aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt, both undergoing repairs at the shipyard, will be open all day.

Boy Kills Self Showing Chum Gun Roulette

A 14-year-old District boy killed himself as he was showing a chum how to play the grim game of "Russian roulette," which he had seen depicted either in a "comic book" or in the movies.

Melvin Hyland Leeland, oldest of the eight children of Mrs. Sara McGarvey, 2107 Fairlawn ave. se., was in the dining room of his home Friday night, "showing off" a nine-chambered .22-caliber revolver to his friend, Lloyd (Buzzie) Gregg, 13, of 2204 Fairlawn ave. se.

In Russian roulette, the gambler loads one chamber of a revolver, twirls the cylinder, points the gun to his head and pulls the trigger. His life depends on where the one cartridge stops after the cylinder is twirled.

Pointing out to "Buzzie" that the gun had three cartridges in it, Melvin spun the cylinder, his friend said, raised the revolver to his right temple, and pulled the trigger. His spin had placed one of the three loaded chambers in line for firing. The Gregg boy ran to the home of a neighbor who called the police.

Police pointed out that the Leeland boy probably did not know that when the trigger is pulled, the cylinder is rotated, bringing into position the chamber next to the one originally lined up.

Melvin, who was pronounced dead at 1:45 a. m. Saturday at Casualty Hospital, was alone with Lloyd in the first-floor dining room. His mother and stepfather were out, while his younger brother, two half-brothers and three half-sisters were asleep in the house. Another half-brother lives with relatives.

Two hours after the accident, Melvin's stepfather, Raymond C. McGarvey, 37, a disbarred lawyer, was booked at the Fifth Precinct Station on a charge of drunkenness.

He first learned of the tragedy at 1:30 a. m. yesterday from Probation Officer H. J Connor, attached to Municipal Court. Sobbing as he walked in for a hearing, McGarvey was told by Judge Nadine Galllagher that he was free to leave. Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert C. Chalfonte had nol-prossed the charge because of Melvin's death.

Mrs. McGarvey, who told police she was at a nearby restaurant with friends having something to eat when the shooting occurred, said she did not know her son had the gun, which came from her mother's farm in Upper Marlboro, Md.

The mother said she learned from friends of her son that he had read about Russian roulette from a "comic" book. He had been talking about the game and demonstrating it for some time, she said. Police reported they were told he had first seen the revolver gamble depicted in a movie.

Melvin's grandmother, Mrs. Blanche Vermillion, said the revolver had belonged to a son who was reported missing while serving with the merchant marine in 1942. It was used to train hunting dogs, she explained, and she had not missed it until three or four weeks ago. She said she believed a boy who knew Melvin had taken it while visiting at the farm one Sunday, and had turned it over to Melvin. Other members of the family surmised that the boy had kept it in a toolshed in back of his home.

One of two sons of Mrs. McGarvey by a previous marriage, Melvin transferred from Holy Comforter School to Orr School about two months ago, graduating from there last month. Members of the family said he was a cheerful boy who helped his mother by obtaining odd jobs from time to time to aid the family finances. Mrs. McGarvey said she receives some help from welfare agencies and some from relatives.

Donald, 13, now the oldest, is the only living child by the former marriage. McGarvey's children are Raymond, jr., 9; Helen, 7; Ann, 6; Harvey, 4; Ronnie, 3, and Ramona, 1.

Md. State Police To Seek Recruits

Pikesville, Md., July 5 (AP).—In an effort to "help the State cope with the impending shortage of men" in State police department ranks, the department will launch a recruiting drive for 32 new members July 18, Campaign Chairman Karl F. Steinman said today.

Steinman's announcement came just after he was named to head the recruiting committee composed of civic and business leaders appointed by Superintendent of State Police Col. Beverly Ober.

Governor Lane has proclaimed the opening day of the drive "Maryland State Trooper Day," and the Advertising Club of Baltimore has pledged its support. The club has drawn up plans for a kick-off luncheon in Baltimore and has announced the principal speaker will be Brig. Gen. B. M. Bryan, jr., provost marshal general of the U. S. Army.

Va. Republicans Nominate White

Montross, Va., July 5 (AP).—Republicans of Westmoreland, King George and Northumberland Counties at a meeting here this afternoon nominated Walter H. White of Colonial Beach for the State House of Delegates.

White is in the furniture business at Colonial Beach, a member of the town council, and a graduate of George Washington University.

Walter H. Johnson, GOP chairman of the First District, and Carl A. Marshall of Fairfax, Eighth District chairman, addressed the meeting, at which Edward Hall of Mundy Point presided and Edward L. Doherty of Colonial Beach served as secretary.

Civil Service Points Gift Wins Support

The Civil Service Commission has dropped its opposition to a bill giving Gold Star Mothers Federal employment preferences.

This was revealed yesterday by Harry B. Mitchell, president of the commission.

The bill, scheduled for House action tomorrow, would add 10 points to Civil Service examination scores of widowed mothers of men who died during wartime military service and widowed mothers of totally disabled veterans.

The bill was approved by the House Civil Service Committee last week despite the objections of the Civil Service Commission. On Thursday, the committee was informed that opposition was being withdrawn.

Simultaneously, the committee was advised the commission approved extension of the job rights to widowed mothers of servicewomen who died in the course of military service, Mitchell reported.

The measure would permit those newly covered to take special examinations for any civil service jobs to which an appointment was made in the preceding four months.

The Veterans Preference Act already gives the 10-point preference to disabled veterans. Able-bodied veterans get five free points. Others eligible for the 10-point benefits are wives of veterans who have total disability resulting from war service and widows of men who died in service, providing they have not remarried.

Registration For Primary Closes in Va.

Registration for Virginia's August 5 Democratic primary ended yesterday with the last minute turnout at central registrars' desks reported light in Arlington, fair in Alexandria, and heavy in Fairfax.

Arlington's central registrar, Mrs. Mary Moore McIntosh, said only 67 had signed for the primary by 3:30 p. m. yesterday compared to nearly 100 by the same time last year.

In Alexandria, City Registrar Fred Pettit said about 50 people had registered yesterday, and termed the turnout "fairly large" for a noncontroversial election. Alexandria candidate's for the Virginia Senate and House of Delegates are unopposed.

According to Fairfax Central Registrar Franklin Gooding, yesterday's registration figure of 75 was "pretty heavy." Last year, he said, about half that number registered on the last day.

Total registration figures were not available yesterday since returns from individual precincts in Arlington and Fairfax counties have not yet been tabulated.

3 Die When Stunting Planes Lock Wings

Seaford, Del., July 5 (AP).—Three young airmen were killed in a crash of two small planes which locked wings near here.

The dead were identified as Bayard Brumbley, 26, of near Delmar, pilot of one plane; Charles Floyd Hitchins, 30, Laurel, pilot of the other ship, and Harold Cordrey, 22, Laurel, passenger in Hitchens' craft. Witnesses reported the two planes collided while stunting close together. The planes took off yesterday from Laurel Airport and crashed 15 minutes later in a wooded area on a farm.

Packers Plan Outing

Frederick, Md., July 5 (AP).—Members of the Tri-State Packers' Association will hold an outing Wednesday at the Catoctin Country Club near Frederick.

Holiday Haul Nets $600 for Thieves, Thugs

More than a dozen robberies and break-ins were reported to police here yesterday as thieves and holdup men took advantage of the long weekend holiday.

The money and value of goods taken totaled more than $600.

Serafin G. Guerre, 21, 4428 Lily Pond dr. ne., reported a $25 watch snatched from his wrist as he rode on a Friendship Height streetcar. A teen-age boy reached through an open window at 7th st. and Independence ave. to grab the watch, Guerre said.

Taximan Robbed of $14

Robert Roberts, 1301 Ridge pl. se., a taxi driver, reported a sailor he picked up as a fare at 14th st. and New York ave. nw. pulled a .45 automatic on him as they approached Columbus Circle, near Union Station. Later, as they reached 2d and E sts. ne., the sailor relieved him of $14, the cab driver said.

About 20 minutes after Roberts called police, Police Pvts. C. S. Muse and R. J. Glover arrested 19-year-old C. E. Smith of the Patuxent River base who, police said, was in a sailor's uniform and had $14 on his person. He was held at First Precinct for investigation.

John Cheek, 18, of 49 H st. ne., told police two men, both of them 6 feet tall, attacked him as he walked about 3:15 a. m. on 4th st. ne., between L and M sts. One choked him, he said, while the other removed his billfold containing $21.75, a bakers' union card and a birth certificate.

Sailor Attacked, Robbed

Rodney D. Carpenter, 20, of the Naval Air Station at Patuxent River, said he was attacked by a man with a straight razor at 12:45 a. m. on 9th st. ne., between G and H sts., and relieved of $18. Carpenter said he attempted to fight back. He was treated at Casualty Hospital for lacerations to the right hand, left chest, left leg and face.

One billfold snatch occurred at busy 14th and F sts. nw.

Mrs. Mary Thompson, 624 C st. ne., said she was on the streetcar loading platform at that location when she was jostled by a slender woman about 6 feet tall accompanied by a 10-year-old girl. Later Mrs. Thompson noticed the zipper on her pocketbook open and her billfold containing $44.06 missing.

Five business firms were reported broken into. John B. Gordon, owner of the Chew and Chat Lunchroom, 1412 North Capitol st., said his place was entered between 9 p. m. Friday and 1 a. m. yesterday and $14 taken.

Earle William Baker, 105 W. Glenbrook rd., Bethesda, owner of Wyoming Market, 1900 Wyoming ave. nw., reported $25 taken from his store's cash register and 10 cartons of cigarettes valued at $12.30. He said the burglars entered by prying bars off a basement window.

Burglars Rifle Juke Box

John M. Sales, operator of a restaurant at 1116 9th st. nw., said burglars entered by a side door and took $40 from a music machine.

John Hulen, 752 Irving st. nw., owner of a building at 705 M st. nw., reported the building entered through a rear window and two gallons of paint and tools valued at $15.50 taken.

Norman Lewis, owner of Town Cab Association, 54 H st. ne., said the firm's garage was entered between 11 p. m. Friday and 7 a. m. yesterday and a parts grinding machine valued at $300 taken.

Sidney R. Barradell, 2055 38th st. se., reported two wheels, including tires and tubes, taken from his 1940 Packard as it was parked Friday night in front of his home. He valued the wheels at $25.

Phoeboe Rodgin, 2305 Huidekoper pl. nw., reported a powder box containing $22 in change taken from a desk.

Meanwhile, police charged Reginald G. Young, 26, a janitor, of 1816 6th st. nw., with petty larceny in connection with the theft of a $15 electric fan and 16 bed sheets valued at $16 from Walter Reed Hospital.

4 Escape Injury As Truck Enters Maryland House

Prince Frederick, Md., July 5 (AP).—Four people narrowly escaped injury last night when a truck left Route 261, crashed into a house, sank through a first-story bedroom floor and came to rest in the basement.

Maryland State Trooper Stuart Gibson said Louis Denton, 18, of Broomes Island, arrested as the driver of the vehicle, was charged with reckless driving and failing to stop at the scene.

Talmadge Hutchins, occupant of the house, said the truck crashed through a front wing of the structure and entered the guest room in which Mr. and Mrs. Charles Loose of Baltimore were asleep. The truck pushed the bed aside as the floor gave way, and the vehicle dropped to the basement, Hutchins said.

Trial Magistrate William W. Duke set Denton's hearing for Friday, July 11.

Auto Rolls 3 Times, Hurts Amateur Golfer

Lynchburg, July 5 (AP).—Oliver J. Richardson, Richmond, is in Lynchburg General Hospital with a broken right femur, a crushed left ankle and a possible broken back after his car turned over three times this morning as he returned from the State amateur golf tournament in which he was a participant.

According to friends who were following the car in which Richardson was driving alone, along Boonsboro rd., the auto went out of control and turned over three times, winding up at the side of the road upside down.

Richardson was thrown clear of the car and was found approximately 50 feet from it.

Ball Urges Stadium to Seat 12,000

Frank J. Ball, jr., candidate for the Virginia State Senate, yesterday proposed that a 12,000-capacity athletic stadium be built at Washington-Lee High School to honor Arlington's war dead.

The "acutely needed" stadium could be financed by county and school board funds, the young Arlington attorney said.

Under his plan, the stadium would be under control of the school board, which also could accept private donations to cover cost of construction.

Ball's proposal for a war memorial was the first advanced since a county drive for a $368,000 recreation center, honoring World War II dead, ended in failure last year.

Ball said he understood about $5000 from the earlier campaign still remained and might be applied to the stadium project.

He termed it "ridiculous" that Alexandria, "with half our population," has a high school stadium with a 12,000 seating capacity equipped for night games, while Arlington has only a daytime stadium "with insufficient seating capacity."

U. S.-Russian Korea Talks Tied Up Again

Seoul, Korea, July 5 (U.P.).—The deliberations of the joint Soviet-American Commission were tied up again today over the question of "broad consultation" of Korean political parties and organizations about the shape of their future government.

Oral consultation of parties, which were to have begun Monday, have been postponed indefinitely.

Maj. Gen. Albert E. Brown, chief of the U. S. delegation said "the practical application of principle, has led the Soviet to object to certain parties and organizations."

Brown said that when the commission went to Pyongyang in the Soviet zone, only three north Koran political parties and 35 social organizations attended a formal welcoming ceremony.

Others described Pyongyang as a "police city," and said the American delegation was "shadowed" and that Brown's personal party was followed by an armed Russian patrol of one officer and two enlisted men.

Mrs. Noyes' Poem Dedicated With Musical Setting.

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—A Christmas greeting that Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Noyes sent to Kent Cooper in 1941 was dedicated with a musical setting tonight on the Mutual network.

The greeting was the poem "What Is Time," written by Mrs. Noyes, late wife of the President of the Washington Star and former president of the Associated Press. It appeared on the Noyes' Christmas cards that year.

Cooper, executive director of the Associated Press, composed a musical setting for the verse. In its first radio presentation it was dedicated to Mr. Noyes, in honor of his 84th birthday Monday and in memory of Mrs. Noyes, who died in 1942 without knowing her poem had been set to music.

Introduction of the song, by the Chicago concert orchestra, Marion Claire and chorus, was the feature of the Chicago Theater of the Air program.

Two More Stores Agree to Close Extra Day a Week

Bruce Hunt, Inc., 613 14th st. nw., and Harry Kaufman, Inc., 1316 7th st. nw., have joined the list of Washington stores closing an extra day each week during the summer.

These additions bring the list of stores with revised hours to 88 and the list of those closing on Saturdays to 72.

Bruce Hunt, Inc., will close eight consecutive Saturdays during July and August, Edward D. Shaw, executive secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, announced yesterday.

Harry Kaufman, Inc., will remain open on Saturdays but will close on nine consecutive Mondays, July 7 to September 1, inclusive, Shaw announced.

Gen. Eisenhower Talks Tomorrow, Opens Food Clinic

Feeding the Army at home and abroad will be the subject of a 10-day conference opening tomorrow in the Army War College Auditorium with an address by Gen. Dwight D. Tisenhower, Chief of Staff.

The conference is the first since organization of the Food Service Division in the Quartermaster General's Office some months ago.

It will be attended by Food Service supervisors and quartermasters from the six armies in the United States, from overseas commands, representatives of the Army Air Forces, Navy and Marine Corps, War Department General Staff, food consultants and others.

Va. Farmers Warned Of Baby Chick Racket

Blacksburg, Va., July 5 (AP).—An Extension Service official today warned against a "bootleg chick racket" in which he said out-of-State poultrymen traveling through Virginia rural areas were selling annually some 25,000 chicks which have not been properly inspected and which in many cases have been misrepresented as to sex.

Associate Poultry Husbandman A. L. Dean said persons representing no recognized hatcheries were buying day-old leghorn cockerels for a cent and a half in other States, and selling them in Virginia as pullets for as much as 15 cents each.

Dean explained that unless a chicken sexer is employed the average person cannot determine a chick's sex until it is at least a week old and has begun to grow wing and tail feathers and a comb.

He said chicks bought from such salesmen might prove to be diseased as well as of the wrong sex for use as fryers and broilers. He said the same "racket" was being carried on to some extent by mail order advertisement.

To combat the practice, Dean recommended buying only from recognized hatcheries within Virginia.

Disabled Ship Towed

Norfolk, Va., July 5 (AP).—The Coast Guard cutter Cherokee was towing the disabled freighter John L. Mason towards Norfolk today.

The 2,500-ton vessel radioed on Friday that she was having engine trouble, and although she was in no immediate danger, requested help. The Cherokee got a line aboard the Mason as she lay to about 20 miles off the coast of South Carolina.

The tug Michael Moran left port this morning and will take over the tow from the cutter. The ship's engines will be reaired here. She was en route from England to Charleston, S. C.

Accident Rate Cut

Portsmouth, Va., July 5 (AP).—Statistics released by the Office of Public Information at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard in Portsmouth disclosed that only four accidents involving lost time occurred in the yard during June, the lowest accident rate recorded by the yard in nine years.

Taking note of the report, Rear Adm. David Clark, USN, yard commanding officer, issued a statement congratulating the employes, but at the same time he pointed out that the yard is not yet at the top of the safety list and urged them to try for an accident-free month.

Bus Hearing July 23

Baltimore, July 5 (AP).—The Public Service Commission announced that it would hear on July 23 the aplication of the Red Star Motor Coaches, Inc., to abandon service between Easton and Matapeake over State Route 33 by way of the Claiborne-to-Romancoke ferry.

Red Star said its Easton-Matapeake line "has resulted and is continuing to result in an operating loss."

The commission will consider at the same time the petition of the Bayside Motor Coaches to operate bus service between Easton and Fairbank.

Miss Dawson Is Queen

Irvington, Va., July 5 (AP).—Miss Marjorie Dawson of Acorn yesterday was crowned queen of a Rappahannock Day celebration here by Mayor Horace E. Edwards of Richmond.

The motor boat races, which were a part of the celebration, were dominated by C. C. Buchanan of Norfolk, who won three inboard events. Buchanan's entries took firsts in the 100-horsepower and under class and were unopposed in the 100 to 140-horsepower and unlimited inboard events.

Walter Hurley of Urbanna, won the unlimited outboard runabouts class, and Calvin Barrack of Irvington took the work boat class.

Dog Saves Ill Veteran

Baltimore, July 5 (AP).—A small black and white dog was credited today with saving the life of a disabled war veteran who collapsed of an internal hemorrhage in a downtown street.

But he wasn't big enough to fight off two men who, police said, took the veteran's wallet with $7 and his shoes while he still lay helpless.

William Brooks, 39, and only recently discharged from the Veterans' Hospital at nearby Fort Howaard, was the victim. The small dog, a stray, took up a vigil over him when he collapsed, barking loudly and chasing around the fallen man to divert motorists.

BATHROOM RESCUE SCENE—Leon Raskin, 1½, of 2337 15th st. ne., shows his mother, Mrs. Goldie Raskin, where firemen entered to free him from the bathroom of their home yesterday. Leon, who finally enjoyed the experience, ran into the room when Mrs. Raskin sought him for "a talking to." A spring lock on the door held him prisoner until Fire Sergt. D. E. Harpster of Engine Company 26, came through the skylight. Said Leon, "Hello, fireman. Come get me out." Said Harpster, "I'll be down there with you in a minute." Leon: "Okay, but don't jump on me"

Army Awards Medical Center Joint Contract

The Army's plan for a huge medical research center at nearby Forest Glen, Md., moved a step nearer realization yesterday with award of an architect-engineer contract to New York and Washington firms as joint venturers.

They are Faulkner, Kingsbury & Stenhouse of Washington and Eggers & Higgins of New York. The contract was awarded through the Washington District Engineer's Office, which will supervise the work.

Initial cost of the "Army Medical Research and Graduate Training Center" has been estimated at 40 million dollars.

The center will be the "greatest military medical research center in the world," according to the War Department. It will also be an important addition to Washington as the "Science Capital of the World."

In addition to research, the unit also will be used as a teaching center, "so that benefits accruing to the medical profession through its operation may serve to aid the civilian population as well as the armed forces," the War Department said.

A 1000-bed hospital capable of expansion to 1500 beds, one-fifth of which will be designated as research beds and placed near research activities and laboratories, is a feature of the plan.

Gen. Eisenhower Keeps Promise to Wounded Veteran

Atlanta, Ga., July 5 (U.P.).—Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff, kept his promise today to a veteran who missed out on a champagne party in Berlin because of his wounds.

Then Allied Supreme Commander in Europe, Eisenhowever promised members of the Eighth Infantry Regiment champagne when the unit reached Berlin.

General "Ike" kept his promise, but Charles T. Brown of Forrest Park, Ga., missed out on the festivities due to battle wounds.

Brown, now a patient at Lawson Veterans Hospital here, reminded Eisenhower of the promise in a letter.

The General sent the champagne, an autographed photograph and a note:

"I trust you will consider this as a token of my appreciation of the splendid performance of the Eighth Infantry Regiment in the European theater of operations."

Former Episcopal Dean Weds Young Divorcee

Detroit, July 5 (AP).—The Very Rev. Kirk B. O'Ferrall, 58, former dean of St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral here, and Mrs. Isabelle W. Morrill, 30-year-old divorcee and cathedral choir member, were married today.

The couple left directly for New York on the first lap of a honeymoon to France, where the clergyman has accepted a one-year call to serve as acting dean of the Procathedral of the Holy Trinity, the "American Church" in Paris.

Permission for the marriage had been given by the Right Rev. Frank W. Creighton, Episcopal Bishop of Michigan, as required by church canons, because of the bride's divorce.

Tenants Face 15% Rent Hike In Arlington

Tenants of the Fillmore Gardents Apartment development, 2800 block S. 8th st., Arlington, have been asked to agree to a 15 per cent rent increase, co-owner Harry Burka said yesterday.

If they agree to the rent hike, he said, they will be given leases extending to January 31, 1949.

The development, with 442 apartment units, has taken three tax increases and two reassessments since its completion in 1942, Attorney Solomon Grosberg said in explaining the rent-jump request.

Grosberg said most of the tenants had been verbally notified of the proposal with "fair success." Others, out of town, will be notified by mail, he added.

The increase would raise rent on one-bedroom apartments from $59 to $67.50 monthly, and on two-bedroom apartments from $66 to $75 a month.

Pepper Asks Boost for D. C.

By International News Service

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) demanded yesterday that Congress "give itself a dose of its own medicine" by voting the same 15 per cent "optional" rent boost for the Capital that it did for the Nation.

Pepper, bitter foe of the national rent control law which President Truman approved reluctantly last Monday, made his statement as a Senate District of Columbia Subcommittee wrestled with a "home front" landlord-tenant bill.

This measure, already approved by the House, contains no provision comparable to the 15 per cent "voluntary" raise in the national bill. Washington landlords, however, already are permitted to raise rents if they can prove they have suffered from increased taxes, maintenance, operating costs or expenses.

The subcommittee, headed by Senator Buck (R., Del.) who guided the national bill to final passage, is scheduled to meet Tuesday to put final touches on the legislation.

District Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Gogswell explained that thus far Washington landlords who have obtained boosts under the statute have never been allowed over 10 per cent.

The pending District bill, as now before the Senate subcommittee, would merely continue existing controls until March 31, 1948, under the present provisions.

Insulated House Ventilated by Hungry Beetles

Seaford, Del., July 5 (AP).—Moving into a new six-room bungalow, Mr. and Mrs. James Massey settled down to comfortable living, but not for long.

Beetles an inch and a half long bored right through the pine walls, they reported, leaving openings the size of a pencil.

"And we had had the house ratproofed, mouse-proofed and insulated against heat and cold," exclaimed the somewhat startled hosts.

County Agricultural Agent William E. Henderson identified the beetles as southern pine sawyers.

Quadruplets Reported Born on Egyptian Farm

Cairo, Egypt, July 5 (U.P.).—The independent newspaper Akhbar el Yom today reported the birth of quadruplets—three boys and a girl—to a 35-year-old peasant woman in a mud hut in the south Egyptian province of Assault.

"Allah has blessed me with his kindest compensation," the mother told reporters.

She previously had lost four children. Her name is Babita and she is the wife of Abdel Zaher Ahmed, a farmer.

R. E. Yellott, 78, Dies After Heart Attack

Robert E. Lee Yellott, 78, of 1 Verne st., Bethesda, a Washington real estate dealer for many years, died early yesterday after a heart attack.

Mr. Yellott

Born in Lexington, Va., Mr. Yellott came to Washington as a child and attended the public schools here. He was graduated from the old Columbian College, now George Washington University, with a law degree.

In 1901 he entered the real estate business and continued active in it until his death.

His wife, Lillian Wright Yellott, died in 1934. She was the daughter of former Representative John V. Wright (D., Tenn.), who served in the Thirty-fourth, Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth Congresses.

Mr. Yellott was a member of Kappa Alpha Fraternity, the Masons and the All Saints Episcopal Church in Chevy Chase. He was a charter member of the Columbia Country Club.

He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Mary Virginia Wiley of Alexandria, Va., a son, Army Capt. Robert Wright Yellott of the Bethesda address, and a granddaughter, Virginia Yellott Wiley of Alexandria.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the William R. Pumphrey funeral home. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Sarah Jewler

Funeral services for Mrs. Sarah Jewler, 56, of 6412 Elliot pl., Hyattsville, Md., will be held today at 1 p. m. at Danzansky's funeral home, 3501 14th st. nw. She died Friday at Prince Georges General Hospital.

Born in Russia, Mrs. Jewler lived 26 years in Washington, where her husband has been in the grocery business. She was a member of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Tisereth Israel Congregation and of the Women's Auxiliary of the Jewish Old Age Home.

Mrs. Jewler leaves her husband, Sam Jewler; a son, Morris, 5022 North Capitol ave., and two grandchildren. Burial will be in Tisereth Israel Congregation Cemetery.

Leonard Quadow

Leonard Quadow, 53, died at his home, 1808 Ontario pl. nw., yesterday after a long illness. Before coming to Washington in 1940, Mr. Quadow lived in Chicago, where he was an attorney.

He was a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, and received his LL.B. from the University of Chicago. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Sarah Quadow, and a daughter, Miss Jacqueline Quadow.

The body is at Danzansky's funeral home. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

William E. S. Wilcox

William Eustice, Stowe Wilcox, 68, died unexpectedly at his home, 1221 M st. nw.; yesterday. Mr. Wilcox was born in London, England, but had lived in Washington for a number of years. Before his retirement he was in the movie business.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Edith Wilcox and a sister, Mrs. Louise Williams, 1305 10th st. nw. Private funeral services will be held at Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N st. nw., Tuesday at 2 p. m.

Asiatics Fear U. S., Not Russia, Missionary Says

Hamilton, N. Y., July 5.—Asiatics fear the United States more than they do Russia, Ruth I. Seabury, educational secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missions, told the New York Institute of International Relations at Colgate University tonight.

"Asiatics think America's way of life is often brutal, unrealistic, unattractive, discourteous and morally unsound," Miss Seabury said. "They are especially unable to understand our tendency to answer the world's economic needs in terms of what we think best for ourselves."

Other speakers included Dr. Albert A. Brandt, New York City writer, and Dr. Clyde R. Miller of Columbia University.

In a panel discussion, Dr. Miller called the Truman Doctrine "the most serious blunder in American history," to which Dr. Brandt retorted that "If war comes, those who are always talking about its inevitability, and not the Truman Doctrine, will be to blame."

Russians Take Entire Dresden China Output

Berlin, July 5.—Perhaps the most world famous concern in the Russian zone of Germany to be placed directly under the management of the Soviet military administration is the Meissen (Dresden) China plant. American correspondents touring the Soviet zone last week found that the entire production of this porcelain plant is now going to Russia, and it is impossible even to place orders for its famous dinner and tea services.

Cave Searched For Explorer, Lost 4 Days

Shell Mound, Tenn., July 5 (AP). Gov. Jim McCord of Tennessee ordered State police today to use "all available means" to make gloomy, bat-filled Nickajack Cave yield up John T. Hurn, 35, of Nashville—whether alive or dead.

State mining inspectors joined a four-man Red Cross party which entered the vast, dank cavern today in search of the part owner of the commercial cave. At the same time, C. F. Webb, division chief of the State highway patrol, called for two more cars of officers.

Hurn disappeared four days ago and his brother, Hollins Hurn, said he had gone deep into the cavern in hopes of finding another entrance. The cave winds under parts of Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama under honeycombed Sand Mountain.

Body Found in Water At Norfolk Identified

Norfolk, Va., July 5 (AP).—The body of a man found floating in the water off the old Bay Line docks last Wednesday was identified today as Clyde Leslie of Milwaukee, Wis.

Police said he was identified as the result of a telegram from J. Edgar Hoover, Federal Bureau of Investigation chief, who said the man's fingerprints matched prints of Leslie held by the sheriff of Waukegan, Ill.

Admiral Blandy Still Thinks We Need Depth 'Test Charlie'

By Bob Considine

JUST over a year ago, Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy led a bunch of assorted officers, scientists, newspapermen and goats across the broad back of the Pacific to Bikini.

Today, Blandy is commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet. But he keeps close tab on repercussions from his memorable tests of the atomic bomb. He added up some late scores for the writer.

Blandy believes that "Test Charlie," in which an A-bomb was to be touched off about 2000 feet below the surface, will eventually be held, though it is at present "indefinitely postponed" by the White House.

"We need more information about the effect of the bomb on ship bottoms, through shock transmission," he said.

"We're not foolish enough to believe there is no possibility of another war. That war would be an atomic bomb war, for once the war broke we could not depend on the atomic controls then in force.

"We'd certainly be fools not to be prepared for such a war, or to fail to advertise repeatedly that we're prepared for it. We let the Germans and the Japs know that we had tremendous stores of poison gas, before and during the last war. They never used their own stores."

Backs Battlewagon

BLANDY said that important changes in warship design are certain to emerge from the Bikini tests.

"But don't count out the heavy warship," he warned. "Call it anything you want—battleship, heavy cruiser or aircraft carrier.

"But they're going to be around for a long time; certainly as long as there is something called amphibious warfare.

"Places like Iwo Jima could never have been taken without heavy ship shell-fire. Armor-piercing shells broke up the Jap installations, and only armor-piercing shells.

"Armor-piercing bombs would have had to be dropped from tremendous heights to gain enough velocity to break through that stuff. And the higher the bomber was the less accuracy could have been maintained."

"The battleship Kentucky is being refitted to serve as a guided missle launching platform," Blandy said. "It's an important departure, and one which we have looked into in the North Atlantic—where weather conditions often would keep long-range bombers grounded, but not V-type weapons."

Cautious Scrapping

BLANDY revealed that some of the ships used in the Bikini test still are radioactively "hot." He said:

"They're still hot enough to make it inadvisable to have men on them more than 24 hours at a stretch.

"Most of the ships used in the test will be scrapped eventually, but we'll have to be careful about how the scrapping is done, in order to protect the salvaging crews.

"The target ships have all gone from Bikini now, and are at ports which have proper facilities for inspection, which is continuing."

Blandy recently underwent a blood test, ordered by the Navy to check up on all personnel present at the A-bomb tests.

"I guess I made out okay," he said with a chuckle. "At least I didn't hear anything about the test. I understand that some of the men were proved to be anemic, but in view of the fact that no physical exam was taken just before the test—of enlisted men, at least—we can't be certain that the anemia came from the bomb.

Hunger a Factor

"IT'S still too early to comment fully on the effect of the bomb on the surviving animals who were on the ships, and their descendants. Only time will tell the full story, for generation after generation of goats, pigs and mice will have to be studied.

"As for the birth of a number of deformed children of residents of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, we can't be certain that it was the fault of the bomb. There was considerable malnutrition in both cities when they were hit, which could have as much to do with the matter as the bomb."

As head of the Atlantic Fleet, Blandy has devised new methods of A-bomb defense, based on what was learned at Bikini. Another department of the Navy is well along with its study of ships driven by atomic energy. The Bureau of Ships has many plans for future warships with all positions protected from killing rays.

Bikini made a loud noise, but it was no bust.

Whole Story of Blast Only Now Taking Form

By Dr. William A. Shurcliff

(Dr. Shurcliff was technical historian of Joint Task Force I's "Operation Crossroads," and is the author of the official report, "Bombs at Bikini," being published this month by the William H. Wise Co.)

A YEAR ago the world tuned in on Bikini. Forty thousand persons assembled there to see the atomic salute to the end of a military era. Not just ships, but the whole scheme of national security was on trial.

Why did popular interest in the tests drop so quickly? Partly because their purpose was misunderstood. Too many sensations had been conjured by news gatherers; too much attention had been directed toward extreme speculations such as tidal waves, chain reactions in the atmosphere and cracking of the earth's crust. None of these calamities occurred, and interest dropped.

Another factor lessening the verbal impact of the tests was the necessarily intermittent character of the news releases. Sinkings could be—and were—announced at once; but other important outcomes were not apparent so promptly. It was nearly six months before the Bureau of Ships experts had sorted their data and made anything approaching a final appraisal of what it meant. It was seven months before the radiologists could adequately compare the deadliness of the different kinds of nuclear radiation. Even after four months, pressure experts were still piecing together data arriving from East Coast and West Coast laboratories. Oceanographers are still pondering the unprecedented base surge.

The photographic story, also, took time to unfold. Newspapers and magazines were filled with views of airplanes, natives, VIP's and far-away atomic mushrooms. Conspicuous by their absence were enlarged photographs of the hearts of the explosions; cataloging of the scores of thousands of photographs is not yet complete.

Scores of Volumes

BUT the story is now taking concrete form. The Joint Chiefs of Staff's Evaluation Board has been working hard. Available to it are a one-volume technical summary report, a two-volume summary of the strictly scientific phases. A set of 150 volumes describes and summarizes damage to ships. A seven-volume work appraises damage to military equipment.

This much is clear to all: The atomic bomb is not just another weapon. It is destructive beyond the ability of words to describe, beyond the ability of photographs to portray.

The atom bomb is a multi-edge weapon. An airburst atomic bomb shatters by its shock wave, burns by its thermal radiation, blinds by its brilliance and kills by its nuclear radiations. An explosion under water crushes underwater objects by its shock wave, shatters above-water objects by its blast wave in air, obliterates with its column, fatally shrouds by its base surge, capsizes by its 100-foot breakers, kills by its fast-acting fission products, and for weeks or months ambushes by its slow-acting fission products. Any one of these blows makes the atomic bomb a supreme instrument of destruction. Collectively, they make it intolerable.

Answers to Shun

BUT although we know well that the bomb can produce death and destruction over one or more square miles, depending on the circumstances, do we know what its psychological effects would be? Can anyone guess what paralysis or fear might seize populations struck by several bombs set off simultaneously? How does a mass people behave when individuals, apparently unharmed, suspect they have received fatal doses of gamma radiation?

These questions cannot be answered. If we were ever to learn the answers by experience, we would be incapable of remembering the questions.

One solution alone exists: forever rule out the threat of war.

If Bikini moves to New York, New York moves to Bikini.

Senate Casts the Tax Die Reluctantly

By Robert C. Albright

Post Reporter

SOME TOP Senate leaders are still glassy-eyed about the tax reduction rush the House GOP phalanx gave them last week.

Sure, they will dig up the tax bill corpse and rush it to the White House again. But a few hard-headed politicians among them are aghast at the gamble.

It was not political second guessing, but the hot potato the House handed them, that made the Senators jump. If the House passed the bill as planned, the Senate would be in the soup.

Having passed the bill, the House could sit back while the Senate caught the heat from every tax pressure group in the country. The rush tactics won.

The gamble was this: That at the end of the session, when the Republicans streaked for home, President Truman might kick them collectively right in the seat—on that patch that still shows from the first boot.

Of course, it would be nice to win at the curtain's drop. But wouldn't the Democrats grab much of the credit? It was the Democratic leadership that first asked postponement of tax cuts until January 1.

And it was a Democrat—Virginia's Harry Byrd—who first showed them how they might trump a second veto.

Besides, was it good strategy to dump the only GOP measures having any broad social appeal—housing, health, aid-to-education and many another— to get in a last lick on taxes? To a bill, they were measures Senate Policy Chairman Taft personally sponsored.

Nor was the sweeping agenda of international measures complete. Michigan's Vandenberg had pitched no-hit foreign policy ball through the first eight innings. He wanted to complete the game.

MARTIN DIES

. . . Significantly oratorical

In Wednesday's high command huddle on strategy, Taft yielded to the House after a struggle. Vandenberg said "No" to the end.

Halleck's Silent Vote

A CLOSE analysis of the House vote sustaining the tax veto shows that even the next try won't be a pushover in that chamber. The Senate admittedly at this stage lacks two-thirds.

The House came within two votes of overriding. It wasn't enough, but only a surprise maneuver by Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck pushed the tally for the bill that high.

Usual strategy is to call for a quorum before every vote to turn out members. Instead, Halleck's whip organization alerted all Republicans to be on hand at the stroke on noon.

Democrats, none the wiser, were caught napping when the quorum bells failed to ring. The bill went to an immediate vote. Seventeen Democrats failed to show in time. But only seven Republicans were absent. Five of these were hospital cases. A sixth was on the West Coast. A seventh missed the vote by a nose.

Thus, House Republicans have more than that two-vote shortage to overcome in the next overriding try. They must offset that absentee Democratic bloc. The hidden quorum stunt won't work twice.

Never Say Dies

THE Truman doctrine has had one interesting reaction in southern Texas.

It has given a platform to Martin Dies, founder and charter chairman of the House Un-American Activities committee.

Texans, just back from the Gulf section, say that Dies, who retired from Congress in 1944 without even a primary fight, is again making speeches in every town and hamlet in the Second Congressional District.

Theme of every speech is what his committee did to run Communists out of the country. Each has an "I told you so" gimmick.

Dies hasn't exactly announced for Congress. He said he would disclose "future plans" in a radio broadcast after the first of the year.

Friends brought the story to Judge J. M. Combs, of Beaumont, who now holds Dies' seat. The liberal Combs doesn't scare easily.

he Gallup Poll Finds Thirst for Education Increasing

Two Out of Five U. S. Adults Want Night Schooling

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

HERE is a widespread interest in this country in adult education. If it were ssible to meet that demand with low-cost ening classes, the school buildings of the untry would be as jam-packed with adults the evenings as they are crowded with ung people during the day.

The extent of the public thirst for more ucation has just been measured in a coast-coast survey by the Institute in which ults in all the 48 States were asked:

"Would you like to attend classes and take ecial courses for adults in some school or llege?"

The results show that 41 per cent, or apximately two in every five adults in the ting population, would want to enroll. The act number that might enroll, however, uld depend on many factors, such as how ch the classes would cost the student, ether the subjects offered would fit the mand, whether classrooms would be coniently located, and whether classes would held at hours convenient to the largest nber.

1. The desire for adult education is far greater among women than men. About a third of all the men polled indicated interest, as compared to nearly half of all the women.

2. The more education a person has, the more he seems to want. The survey found that people who had had some college training were more in favor of enrolling in adult education courses than people without college training.

3. The greatest demand for adult schooling is in the age group 21-29 years.

4. General public interest in adult education is on the rise. A similar poll taken by the Institute in December, 1944, found 34 per cent expressing a desire to enroll in an adult education course, as compared to 41 per cent today.

The majority of adults willing to enroll are not interested in mere vocational or commercial training, as might be expected.

Such commercial and trade school subjects as typing, dressmaking, mechanics, etc., which might bring in immediate income, are of course mentioned by many. But the largest number want training along scientific, professional and liberal arts lines.

Adult interest is especially high in government and the social sciences. The interest there has increased greatly since 1944.

In today's survey all voters who indicated a desire to enroll were asked:

"What courses would you like to take?"

The results, giving a picture of what general subjects the country is interested in today, are as follows among those who named subjects:

|---|---|
| SOCIAL SCIENCE—Government, economics, psychology, history, etc. | 22% |
| PROFESSIONAL—Nursing, law, research, journalism, engineering | 16 |
| LANGUAGES — Chiefly Spanish, French, English, Russian | 16 |
| COMMERCIAL — Typing, shorthand, bookkeeping | 14 |
| HOMEMAKING—Dressmaking, housekeeping, home economics | 11 |
| VOCATIONAL—Trade school, beauticians, mechanics, etc. | 8 |
| FINE ARTS—Music, art, painting | 8 |
| TECHNICAL—Radio, navigation, radar, designing | 5 |
| PHYSICAL SCIENCES — Physics, chemistry, astronomy | 2 |
| RELIGION—Theology, religious education | 2 |

The table totals more than 100 per cent because some gave more than one subject.

'It's Not A Pleasant Position,' But . . .

GOP Rebel's Chin Is Still Out

By Alexander R. George

REPUBLICAN Wayne L. Morse of Oregon has been "leading with his chin" during much of the two and a half years he has been in the Senate.

So often has Morse opposed the GOP leadership and majority that he has been called the No. 1 Republican rebel. An enthusiastic equestrian, he also has been dubbed "the Lone Ranger."

Many members of Congress think the Oregonian's political chin was out farther than ever when he helped Democrats in their so-called filibuster against the overriding of President Truman's veto of the labor bill. But Morse has indicated that if "using my honest independence of judgment" happens to be chin-leading, he will be doing more of it.

Although Morse seems to relish some of his fracases with fellow Republicans, he says:

"I do not like to be looked upon as a constant dissenter with any of my party organization in the Senate. It is not a pleasant position."

He insists, however, that "it is the solemn obligation of a Senator to vote for legislation which he believes to be in the public interest even though he knows that as of that moment a majority of his constituents would vote contrary to his judgment.

"Then, it is his obligation," he added, "to stand up and tell his constituents why he took the action which he did. If his reasons are not satisfactory to them, it is their opportunity to remove him from his seat at the next election."

Expects Good Scrap

SENATOR MORSE, who voted against the tax reduction bill as well as the labor measure, plans to seek reelection in 1950. He says:

"I know the United States Chamber of Commerce is after my political scalp. It will be a good fight. It is my conviction that an overwhelming majority of the people in Oregon, once they come to understand the weaknesses of the legislation (Taft-Hartley Act) will take the position that I did exactly right in voting against it."

He has tangled with Senator Taft on labor and other issues, but he declared recently in debate: "I want to say to the Senator from Ohio that I have received from him the finest of personal and professional dealing."

Morse contends that "there is a place for my views just as there is a place for the views of those to whom we refer as more conservative. That's because our party finds its greatest strength and its only hope for progress in hammering out a middle of the road pattern, a fair compromise between our views."

Softened on Truman

ONE OF Morse's larger wallops was aimed at the GOP high command when he said of Carroll Reece:

"His election as Republican national chairman will cost the party several million votes."

On the other hand, Morse has claimed that he made more speeches in behalf of Republican candidates in the 1946 campaign than any other Republican excepting those who were candidates themselves.

The Oregonian has hit hard at the Democrats, too. He accused President Truman of "ham acting" in including an announcement of the settlement of the railway strike in his speech to Congress asking legislation to deal with the strike. He contended the White House knew the strike was off some hours before the President announced it in his speech.

The Senator later withdrew the statement and wrote a letter of apology to the President. On several occasions he has praised the President's actions. He said Mr. Truman's labor veto message was "magnificent, a plea for cooperation by all groups in order to make democracy work."

Labor Specialist

WHEN Morse came to the Senate in January, 1945, he was rated one of the country's leading experts on labor-management problems. He had been a member of the War Labor Board for two years. Before that he was an arbitrator of labor disputes on the Pacific Coast for seven years and was credited with the development of sound procedures and rules for arbitration.

Morse is said to have made more speeches in his first six months in the Senate than all of the other freshmen Senators put together. The Senate Press Gallery nicknamed him "the five o'clock shadow" because he started making a daily speech at 5 in the afternoon which frequently resulted in delaying recess.

Oregon farm needs were a favorite subject. Day after day he told how Oregon sheep farmers were losing money on a certain breed of lambs. He demanded the OPA lift its controls on them. On the day the Senate approved the United Nations Charter, Morse made a scholarly speech on international problems and then in the last "crucial" five minutes before the historic vote was taken, slipped in a few words about Oregon lambs.

La Follette 'Spokesman'

MORSE obtained his first political training as a youngster on his farm home near Verona, Wis. It was at a time when Senator Robert M. La Follette, sr., Republican insurgent, was battling with party stalwarts. Wayne's father and elder brothers were "regulars," but he was inclined to take the La Follette "Progressive" side in family discussions.

Since boyhood his hobby has been horses. He has owned some of the finest saddle horses in Oregon. When he came to Washington to enter the Senate, he and his daughter Nancy made the 3300-mile drive from Eugene, Oreg., hauling two of his horses in a trailer.

War Gained Friends for Margarine

By Sigrid Arne

MARGARINE, the Cinderella of the American dinner table, seems to have picked up enough friends during the war to start several heated debates in State capitols and in Congress.

The debates center on attempts to remove some of the restrictions which have hedged in margarine ever since 1886. The opponents are the margarine makers (there are about 25) and the milk producers (there are some 2½ million dairy farmers and nearly 4000 commercial creameries.)

Federal law exacts several taxes for the privilege of making margarine. Manufacturers pay $600 a year to make it, wholesalers $400 a year to sell it colored and $200 to sell it white, and retailers $48 a year to sell the colored margarine and $6 to sell the uncolored. In addition there are taxes on each pound sold.

States Take Cut

MANY of the States slap more taxes on top of that. The highest State fees for manufacturing are $1000 a year, charged in Montana and Wisconsin. There are no similar taxes on butter.

There are all manner of "nuisance regulations," as the margarine makers dub them. Some States prohibit the use of margarine in State institutions. Others demand special packages and labels. Twenty-three States forbid the sale of colored margarine.

As a result of these taxes and regulations, the margarine makers say only a third of the Nation's grocers stock margarine although it normally costs only 40 per cent the price of butter.

Margarine was first dreamed up in France during the Franco-Russian War. The people needed fats and butter was scarce.

It was first made from animal fats and then from vegetable oils. Until recently American margarine used much imported coconut oil. But the war cut that off and the makers shifted to cottonseed and soybean oils. That turned out to be lucky for them politically.

South and Midwest

WHEN margarine was made from imported coconut oil it had few friends in legislative halls. Butter drew fervent support from all the States where there are dairy farms and butter and cheese makers.

Now that cotton and soybean oils have entered the margarine mix, it has enlisted political aid from the Southern States (cotton) and from the States which raise soybeans, most importantly Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Ohio and Missouri.

In addition, friends have sprung up among grocers who resent paying the retailing tax for selling margarine and among housewives who are hunting ways to cut food bills.

The result has been some court decisions and a good many bills introduced in State Legislatures and in Congress.

Count 43 Victories

THIS drive to free margarine started in 1939. Since then the margarine makers say 38 various restrictions have been repealed in 23 States and there have been 5 court decisions in their favor.

To arguments favoring margarine the National Cooperative Milk Producers Association makes three major replies:

1. It doubts margarine has the food value of butter. There is no cut-and-dried reply to this, although Agriculture Department researchers say that margarine and butter have approximately the same calorie and vitamin A count.

The milk producers warn that if margarine makers are permitted to sell colored margarine it is likely it will be sold fraudulently at butter prices. That type of fraud started the restrictions on margarine in the first place, back in 1886.

3. The milk producers say that in the complicated pricing system of dairy products, butter is the basis. If it loses much of its market to margarine, they think many small dairy farmers will shift to other types of farming. They say the result may be less milk and therefore higher prices for milk. They ask, "What would be the advantage of saving money on margarine if it had to be spent on higher prices for milk?"

The Headmaster

Brown Sounding Taps for Campus 'Barracks' Life

By Fred M. Hechinger

WHEN Johnny came marching home and enrolled in college, he had to get used to many intricacies of civilian and student life. In one respect, however, readjustment was often all too easy: housing. The crowded emergency dormitory differed little from Army barracks.

The former soldier did little griping. He knew that only superhuman effort had managed to get him a place in college at all. But with the passage of time, educators are beginning to worry about their emergency housing projects. The greatest trouble with temporary housing is its tendency to become permanent.

WRISTON

Brown University, at Providence, R. I., has been doing some constructive thinking along these lines. It, too, has its double-decker bunks. Enrollment has jumped from a prewar 1400 to 2800, and when the fall term opens an all-time high of 3200 undergraduates is expected.

Brown's Lyman Gymnasium, used as an emergency dormitory at first, was as barracks-like as the worst of them. "The old soldiers' home," students labeled it. But in the past year Brown has made its bid for permanent expansion. By the time the blueprints are translated into houses, three city blocks will have been swallowed up to provide comfortable living quarters, study halls, dining rooms and fraternity homes.

Grouped around inclosed courts, a large quadrangle will comprise 10 freshman units and 10 fraternity houses. On the second block will be a large refectory for both resident students and commuters. A second quadrangle will take care of the remainder of 700 resident undergraduates and of seven more fraternities.

Practically Profiteering

HOUSING had long been an important item at Brown. In 1772 the Boston Gazette mocked the building of "a college near as large as Babel; sufficient to contain ten times the number of students that ever have, or ever will, oblige the tutors with opportunity of educating . . ." Journalists should use the word "ever" with considerable caution!

During the Revolution Brown housed a succession of troops and served as a hospital. It was not until 1800 that the university resolved its original postwar housing crisis when John Adams signed a bill granting damages to the staggering amount of 2779 dollars and 13 cents.

Smilingly Brown remembers those historical peanuts as it gears present plans to a total expenditure of four million dollars. Last week, just one year after the opening of its fund drive, the university announced that the three million mark had been reached. Contributions came from widely spread alumni and friends, but a half million was given in bulk by alumnus John D. Rockefeller.

Henry Merritt Wriston, Brown's president, has gone deeply into "educational housing." He quotes Francis Wayland, his great predecessor in 1850: "We have expended almost all the funds appropriated to 'education in the construction of unsightly buildings, we had almost said barracks . . ." That, Wriston says, must not happen again, even in an emergency.

"Our educational purpose must be evident in the structures themselves . . . . We should lay more and more emphasis upon the dormitories as instruments of instruction, and upon the student's room as a place where he may do his work in quiet . . . New buildings are no substitute for good teaching, but appropriate living conditions support and supplement good teaching. If it were not so, men would have been content to worship in barns; they would not have sought to build cathedrals."

Campus Safety Valves

UNIQUE in the Brown building plan is the integration of fraternities. Strong arguments were advanced against it. Some called the entire fraternity system an anachronism, and one soldier just back from the front bluntly told Wriston: "You are blowing on a dead coal."

The fraternities won out largely because they were felt to be a valuable pillar for social and community life. "High-pressure" learning is seen as a threat to an all-around campus experience. Said Warren L. Carleen, a Brown junior: "Proof that present times are not normal is the fact that students are found studying in the library on Saturday nights. The bull sessions of today are held with text books." Fraternities would serve as an antidote.

Insisting that new buildings must not become hollow shells, Brown links its construction program with a new emphasis on a really liberal education. President Wriston warns that the period between the two wars "saw liberal education in process of disintegration. The mood of the time exalted the expert above the man; it prized skill more than integrity. Reason and esthetics sold in the world market at a disastrous discount."

To counteract these tragic tendencies, Brown University includes in its curriculum the teaching of the classics of all ages as a key to the "true insight into the values by which men live." Next to the sciences, it favors the study of Latin and Greek.

What has all this to do with Brown's building program? Wriston calls it ridiculous to surround the teaching of human values "with an esthetic environment hostile to everything students learn in the classroom."

"It is absurd," he adds, "to expect undergraduates to have a private life of the mind when we provide no private life at all."

He hopes to end that absurdity when he breaks ground for the first new building in June, 1948.

New TVA Head Is Publicity-shy

McKellar His Only Press Agent

By Jack H. Pollack

GORDON CLAPP
. . . Red—like Bob Taft

A YOUNG MAN who, according to Tennessee's Senator McKellar, is fit to be nothing more than a grocery clerk, is now boss of one of the country's biggest enterprises.

He is red-headed Gordon Rufus Clapp, new chairman of the 800 million-dollar Tennessee Valley Authority, which brings cheap electric power and flood control to three million Americans in seven Southern States.

After working for the TVA ever since its inception 14 years ago, Gordon Clapp succeeded David E. Lilienthal in the three-million-kilowatt job on October 28, 1946—Clapp's forty-first birthday.

The Senate Public Works Committee had voted, 7 to 5, against Clapp's confirmation. Several Senators who turned thumbs down admitted he was exceptionally well qualified but said they voted against "the TVA idea" rather than Clapp personally.

Though an adverse committee report usually means Senate rejection of a presidential nominee, Clapp was confirmed six months later, 36 to 31. A fair-minded Republican Senator, after examining his records, observed, "If we don't confirm men like Clapp our Government will soon be full of timeservers and clockwatchers."

During the committee hearings, when job-hungry Senator McKellar demanded to know why more Tennesseans weren't on the TVA payroll, Clapp replied, "Senator, I'm more interested in the work of an employe than in the State in which he was born."

He's Color Blind

WHEN I ASKED Marguerite Owen, TVA's Washington representative, for some human-interest material about her new boss, she shook her head sympathetically, "You're going to have a tough time getting Mr. Clapp to talk about himself."

She was right. I found Gordon Clapp the most modest public figure I've ever encountered, far more eager to talk about TVA than himself. Told that he was considered colorless for a Federal figure, Clapp answers, "Well, it gives a fellow more time to get his work done."

The new TVA chief is a slim, blue-eyed man of medium height. Even without his light shell-rimmed glasses, he has a studious, philosophic air about him. His voice is soft, friendly, relaxed.

At the height of McKellar's inquisition, I reminded Clapp that a jerkwater utility company president wouldn't have to be crucified by a vindictive Senator and would probably draw $75,000 a year instead of the TVA chairman's $10,000.

With quiet conviction, Clapp replied: "Money isn't everything. Most of us stay in public service because we love it.

"A public servant should respect the institution of Congress regardless of what he may think of individual members. Of course, it doesn't augur well when a Government administrator isn't allowed to think."

Old Riverman

GORDON CLAPP'S face lights up when he discusses his beloved Tennessee—or any river, for that matter. "I was a babe in arms when dad first took me on excursion trips up and down the Mississippi on those old sternwheelers."

The TVA chairman was born of Scotch-English parents in tiny Ellsworth, Wisconsin. As a lad, he was both a Huck Finn fan and Boy Scout.

A brilliant youth, he attended Lawrence College in Appleton, Wis., where he made Phi Beta Kappa, majored in history, edited the yearbook, played tennis and as a member of the debating team began arguing such subjects as "Private vs. Public Power."

Shortly after graduation in 1927, he married his college sweetheart—the only girl he ever had. Gordon stayed on at Lawrence and, before he was 25, was made director of admissions and assistant dean.

The president of Lawrence, Henry M. Winston, now president of Brown University, says of Clapp: "Though his political views and mine have never coincided, Gordon Clapp showed one of the most lively, original and powerful minds of any student I have ever known. If he had turned his talents to business, he would have gone forward to the highest level of management and great financial profit."

650-Mile Python

BUT Clapp turned to public service after taking his master's degree at the University of Chicago in 1933. A grassroots experiment called the TVA was then being conceived and Clapp was excited at the prospect of harnessing a mischievous 650-mile river stretching from Knoxville to Paducah.

"A decentralized agency had a natural appeal to a man from the provinces," reports Clapp. "I wondered how a multi-purposed Government corporation using modern business methods would work. And if it failed, I wanted to know why."

Two months after TVA became law, the 27-year-old Clapp went to work for it at $60 a week and has been there since. In 1938, when a hostile congressional committee on a "fishing expedition" thoroughly probed TVA, the only objection investigators could make about Clapp was, "Say, you're pretty young for this job, aren't you?"

Rising to personnel manager, the idealistic Clapp kept spoilsmen legislators from packing the agency with sisters, cousins and aunts. Charged with selecting both staff and construction workers, Clapp launched a labor plan so successful that TVA has never had a strike—even when wartime employment rolls suddenly soared from 10,000 to 42,000 workers to feed Oak Ridge and huge aluminum plants.

"Gordon Clapp did a pioneer labor-management job, especially for the labor-backward South," says 75-year-old Judson King, right-hand man of the late Senator George W. Norris.

Round Table Plan

UNDER the TVA labor plan—which troubled businessmen are studying nowadays—management and an organization representing 15 international unions, termed the Tennessee Valley Trades and Labor Council, cooperatively thrash out joint problems. Labor leader M. H. Hedges admits, "We've never had a controversy we couldn't settle across the table with Gordon Clapp."

Even big businessmen have long respected the little-known TVA head as a scientific manager and expert in public administration. A leading industrialist privately admits, "We businessmen could learn a great deal from Clapp's techniques."

The almost universal respect Clapp had won in his job stood him in good stead during his tussle with Senator McKellar. When the crotchety Senator from Tennessee accused Clapp of being a Communist, another Senator whispered to a friend, "If Gordon Clapp's a Communist, so is Bob Taft."

His Senate fight won, Chairman Clapp is now back in his white frame house in rural Norris, Tenn., where he has lived for the past 12 years. His five-room house—originally built for project workers—is rented from the TVA, whose power heats it. Books line the walls—for the occupant is a ravenous reader.

When he had more time he played chess and tennis—but his only recreation nowadays is chopping wood on weekends. He is fond of Fred Allen and no one can blame him if he prefers the radio Claghorn to the real ones on Capitol Hill.

Iowa Paying in Soil For Nourishing World

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

SPIRIT LAKE, Iowa, July 5.—The great American Midwest, bread basket of the world, is totting up the cost of feeding an unappreciative world and wondering if the results warrant that cost.

It is wondering whether too much land has been planted to corn and other intertilled crops. It is wondering whether too much land that should be in grass has been plowed to grow wheat.

To produce recent record crops this land is giving up resources that will be missed by future generations. The losses from erosion in Iowa last month were the most serious of any year since the prairies were broken a century ago.

The great part of that erosion was due directly to overcultivation for foreign relief. Soil resources that have required 400 to 1000 years for nature to build, have been sacrificed.

The International Cereal Grain Conference, called by the International Emergency Food Council at the instance of Agriculture Secretary Anderson, will meet in Paris Wednesday. Anderson will represent the United States.

The meeting, to which food ministers of more than 40 nations have been invited, will divide the surpluses of four surplus-producing nations, Canada, Australia, Argentina and the United States, of which America is by far the greatest contributor. The beneficiaries will be the so-called claimant nations of the world.

As if in protest, Midwestern agricultural leaders last week made public estimates of the long-range cost of our world-feeding program. Although Frank Mendell, State conservationist, put a value of 134 million dollars on this year's erosion loss for Iowa, its impact upon the Nation's self-sufficiency is beyond measure.

Here are some of the figures Mendell put out:

1. More than 115 million tons of top soil that made Iowa the greatest growing land in the world has been washed away. It cannot be replaced in a century.

2. At least a portion of the top soil from 25 per cent of Iowa's total crop land has been washed away. Federal Soil Conservation Service workers estimate that the 115 million tons came from about six million acres of rich loam that had been planted or prepared to be planted to either corn or soy beans.

Except for the demand of Administration leaders for cereal grains to feed Europe, most of this land would have been planted in grass and thus saved from the washing rains. Iowa has under plow today about three million more acres than in 1941. Much of this was grass land.

Here in Iowa's playground the writer today talked to several close observers of the crop scene, including Allen Whitfield of Des Moines, former owner of the Des Moines Joint Stock Land Bank, whom he considers one of Iowa's best students of agriculture. Whitfield, who had just traveled through much of Iowa's corn country, predicted that this year's corn crop would be not more than 60 per cent of last year's and may be much less.

Old Man River's Billions

IT IS going to take an estimated two billion dollars and many years to put a leash on the sort of floods which have wiped out 125 million dollars of wealth in the Missouri Valley this spring. But the Army Engineers have a plan on paper and say it can be done.

The Engineers have been in charge of flood-control work since 1824, but they didn't get enough money to do a real job until the tremendous floods of 1927.

For many years flood destruction has been just about equaled by the money spent to control them. The Ohio floods in '37 wiped out 400 million dollars of wealth. The '43 floods on the Missouri cost 65 million dollars, and the next year the Missouri wiped out another 50 million dollars. That's about 171 million dollars average for the three years.

Compare that with the 158 million dollars Congress is considering for flood control work for the next 12 months. Or with the two billion dollars the Army figures is needed for the over-all job. It would take about 13 years to accomplish the Army master plan if Congress keeps on appropriating as it contemplates this year.

To put up the levees which line the Mississippi from St. Louis to the mouth, the Engineers had to handle more than twice as many cubic yards of earth as were dug to build the Panama Canal.

The Engineers feel they are on the right path because their flood-control devices have had one good test. When the Ohio went wild in '37 they had already done about eight years work on the lower Mississippi. When the Ohio crest hit the Mississippi the river held inside its banks.—(AP).

Cheap Fares Lure Puerto Ricans

Air 'Invasion' Baffles New York

Puerto Rican youngsters get a sandwich and a bottle of milk at a morning frolic at the Casita Maria, an East Harlem settlement

By Adelaide Kerr

NEW YORK, July 5, (AP).—Puerto Rican pilgrims are pouring into the United States in rapidly growing force via airborne caravan.

Cut-rate plane fares and the fact that as citizens Puerto Ricans may come and go at will, have contributed to the influx. Many small air travel companies which have sprung up since the war offer seasonal tickets costing from $75 to $85 for the eight-hour San Juan-New York flight and $28 to $80 for the reverse trip, compared to the $130 fixed rate of scheduled airlines.

The Puerto Ricans differ from others who have poured across Uncle Sam's borders in the last 300 years in that thousands go home again.

Immigration figures show that 195,633 Puerto Ricans entered the United States from 1938 to 1946, but that 124,983 left for Puerto Rico in the same period, leaving a balance of 70,650. However, the number of those remaining each year mounted steadily from 4,254 in 1938 to 22,500 in 1946.

A large percentage of the Puerto Rican migrants converge on New York. One section of East Harlem, known as Little Puerto Rico, is reputed to house the largest group of Puerto Ricans outside the island. There are also many in Brooklyn and the Bronx. Most of them live in tenements.

Land of Milk

LET'S climb five flights to the Harlem flat of R. R., where Mr. R., his wife and their ten children, from 2 to 15 years old, live in five rooms. Little Mrs. R., who is less than 5 feet tall, opens the door in a crowded living room, in one corner of which stands an overloaded ironing board, flanked by a huge portrait of Franklin D. Roosevelt and two American flags.

"We came here because there is so much better food and opportunity for the children," says Mrs. R. in a high pitched, tense voice. "We're a little crowded, but we get along. Everybody has his own bed."

Around the corner and up three more flights is the tiny flat of J. V. L., a picture framer, and his family of five. "It's hard to get jobs in Puerto Rico and milk is scarce," he explains. "It's better here, if you can find a place to live."

As he sits in his shining kitchen with its bright flowered curtains, two white hens on the living room sofa cluck softly in the midday twilight of the room.

Puerto Ricans in New York do both skilled and unskilled work. Women make fine lingerie and costume jewelry; many men are restaurant waiters and cigar makers. A number run successful little businesses in Harlem—undertaking parlors; shops selling candy, cigars, flowers, dresses. A considerable number are entertainers and there are some doctors and university students. One Chicago employment agency brought in a number of Puerto Rican girls to do domestic work but social workers report a large number were unsuccessful because of the difference between American and Puerto Rican housekeeping methods.

Jam-Packed Isle

WHY do Puerto Ricans quit their homeland by the thousands?

The island's 2,200,000 inhabitants are packed 618 to the square mile, compared to 47 in this country. Agriculture alone cannot support them. Power and minerals are scant. Efforts to build factories presented problems. Jobs and food are scarce. Housing generally is reduced to a minimum. Even the most primitive sanitary conditions are lacking for more than half the population. Millions of dollars spent by Uncle Sam over the years have failed to solve the population problem.

Why, then, do they return? One reason is that the cold northern winters make sharp contrast to Puerto Rico's mild climate and crowded city streets present a very different picture from her flower-splashed countryside. Another reason is that Puerto Rican people raise no color bar on the island and resent it elsewhere.

The Puerto Rican influx into New York has intensified the problems arising from the housing shortage and a slackening demand for labor. Social workers report that Puerto Ricans, who have an agricultural background, find it difficult to obtain and hold industrial jobs. They generally are first to be dropped in layoffs, and increasing numbers report unemployment since December.

Doctors say that tuberculosis is high among adults and that a number suffer from malnutrition. The language barrier presents another adjustment problem, as Spanish is their traditional tongue. On the other hand, health clinic heads say that Puerto Ricans are quick to take advantage of such service and the New York City Welfare Department reports that a relatively small number of relief applicants are Puerto Ricans.

Mayor William O'Dwyer has established a committee on Puerto Ricans made up of heads of various city departments. The Welfare Council of New York established another Committee.

'Own' High School

MEANWHILE teachers, social workers and ministers in the Puerto Rican neighborhoods do what they can to help the Puerto Ricans adapt themselves. Dr. Joseph Loretan, principal of the Patrick Henry Junior High School (where 900 of the 1100 pupils are Puerto Ricans); Dr. Leonard Covello, principal of the Benjamin Franklin High School, and directors of other schools have launched special English classes and activities.

The Rev. Edicer Rodriguez of the First Spanish Evangelical Church, Clyde Murray of the Union Settlement and others have established English classes for adults, clubs for boys and girls and instruction for mothers on nutrition, baby care, health and prevention of juvenile delinquency.

Some of those who work with the Puerto Ricans comment on the influx thus:

This is a first-class problem; but it's not their fault. They are the victims; not the cause. Any group of people coming in numbers like the Puerto Ricans could create a problem. Their only solution for the moment is to drain the population off the island. We should not put up bars, but should make it possible for them to settle here. And we should do all we can to help Puerto Rico solve her home problem."

Those who work with the Puerto Ricans join in saying that both adults and children are polite, considerate and, though often volatile in temperament, are no harder to handle than any other group. But several workers in welfare fields say privately that officials are so anxious not to be accused of discrimination that either they will not face facts or call the situation honestly, thereby hampering any constructive solution.

Homeland Measures

WHAT is the solution of the difficulties?

Few concrete suggestions have yet materialized. But Adrian Burke, chairman of the Welfare Council's committee on Puerto Ricans makes these recommendations which reflect the view of the committee:

1. Dissemination of information in Puerto Rico giving an accurate picture of conditions in New York.

2. Extension of Federal security to give help to destitute families on the island and thus mitigate the poverty which leads to excessive emigration.

3. Federal development of a program of Puerto Rican migration and resettlement throughout the United States which would be related to Puerto Ricans' training and skills.

4. Expansion and adaptation of educational, recreational, health and welfare programs of New York City to facilitate assimilation of the newcomers.

'China Editor's' Son Has Own Rapier Pen

Young Bill Powell in his Shanghai newspaper office

By Roy Essoyan

SHANGHAI, July 5 (AP).—John W. (Bill) Powell, son of the late J. B. Powell, who lost his feet in a Japanese prison camp and died this year as a result of his wartime mistreatment, has earned his own reputation in the last two years as a fearless newspaperman.

Bill Powell landed in Shanghai two weeks after VJ-Day. He swept the carpetbaggers out of the looted offices of his father's China Weekly Review and within a year turned it into the most critical independent paper in China.

Where "J. B." had made a name for himself sniping at the Japanese before Pearl Harbor, Bill trained his editorial guns on objectives within China.

Aiming mainly at corruption and maladministration, he built up a journalistic reputation for honest criticism — and an unofficial ranking as "persona non grata" with the Chinese government. He has been accused of leftist tendencies by Chinese officials and some foreign observers, and branded as "that notorious reactionary American journalist" by New York's PM.

Beat the Blackout

PEOPLE stopped referring to Bill as "J. B.'s son" when he ducked into Taiwan (Formosa) in March this year and returned with an eyewitness account of the "blood bath" massacre imposed by the deposed governor, Gen. Chen Yi. How he managed to pierce the temporary news blackout over Formosa—torn by revolt and virtually sealed from the outside world—is an example, he says, of something he often attacks in the Review—the inefficiency of local Chinese officials.

Despite his clashes with the authorities, Powell always has been ready to give credit where he feels credit is due. He points to China's railway and postal administrations as "comparatively" model organizations, with a minimum of corruption and the maximum efficiency possible "under existing conditions."

'Mildly Liberal'

POWELL hews to no hard-and-fast line in the China Weekly Review. He follows what he calls a "mildly liberal democratic policy which he says would hardly cause a ripple in American journalism, but which, placed in his present environment, "naturally finds more causes for protest" and has earned him the reputation of a muckraker.

For his age Powell is one of the best-informed newspapermen on China conditions. He was born in Shanghai 28 years ago July 3—his mother was rushed to the hospital in a rickshaw. He came to the United States when he was a year old. Back in China at the age of 5, he was evacuated two years later when Chiang Kai-shek came hammering at the gates of Shanghai in the uprising of 1927. He returned to China in 1940, worked a stint for the Chinese-owned China Press and left again the following summer.

After we entered the war he joined the OWI, stayed in Washington and New York for a year and then came out to Chungking.

Virginia's Anti-Strike Law Has Five Months' Jump on the Taft Act

By Ken Harter
Post Reporter

ALL the recent fireworks over the Taft-Hartley Act may have blinded Washington, in its ringside seat, to the fact that for the past five months neighboring Virginia has had an antistrike law of its own. Furthermore, for almost that length of time the Old Dominion has had a "right to work" law banning the closed shop in future contracts.

Virginia's antistrike law—the Virginia Public Utilities Labor Relations Act — became effective January 28. It declares it contrary to public policy to permit any substantial impairment or suspension of public utilities deemed essential to public welfare, health and safety. These include businesses or corporations engaged in furnishing electric power, water, light, heat, gas, transportation or communication to the people of Virginia.

True, this act only applies to public utilities and has only a five-week cooling off period instead of the 80 days provided in the Taft-Hartley law, but it is significant that in five months Virginia has had only one real strike threat—the telephone dispute—and that was settled two days before the contemplated walkout.

Foresees Merger

AT the time of the bill's passage organized labor bitterly opposed it as unconstitutional, contending that it interfered with the right of contract and permitted involuntary servitude for at least five weeks. However, when queried yesterday, Jack S. Smith, president of the Virginia Federation of Labor, said that thus far "we have had little difficulty in getting agreements signed." He added that a conclusion opinion could not be given until after a test case on the act.

Charles C. Weber, president of the Virginia State CIO Council, had this to say:

"Both the utilities and right to work bills have . . . strengthened the reactionary forces in the State. These acts, together with the adoption of the Taft-Hartley law, have encouraged many manufacturers to try to break our union and also discourage employes from organizing and attempting collective bargaining to secure living wages.

"In consequence of these actions on the part of several employers in Virginia, it is my opinion that they are aiding and abetting a serious recession or depression by 1948."

Weber and other labor leaders expressed the view that these labor laws would bring together the AFL, CIO and the brotherhoods into one strong organization.

Worked for Byrd

SENATOR BYRD (D., Va.) has this to say:

"The law has been successful. It has succeeded in preventing strikes and that was its purpose. At one time during the telephone strike I could not call the capitol in Richmond, although I told the chief operator it was on important business. I had to telegraph Richmond to call me. In other words, Washington could not call Virginia but Virginia could call Washington."

To effectuate the Virginia Public Utilities Labor Relations Act:

1. The Governor is required to be notified of all disputes between public utilities labor and management.

2. A conference is required between the disagreeing parties, and if this fails a second conference must be held within 10 days. (The Governor may attend the second conference and seek to mediate.

3. If the second conference also fails and either party concludes further negotiation is futile, the Governor requests both parties to submit their differences to arbitration.

4. If the parties are unwilling to arbitrate, a strike or lockout cannot be set for a date less than five weeks in advance.

5. After notification of an intended strike or lockout, the Governor may prepare for seizure and operation of the utility; poll the employes on whether they will continue at their jobs under State operation, and train workers to fill necessary positions. Both management and employes are prohibited from interfering in such preparations.

6. During seizure, the State retains 15 per cent of the net profits for operating the company. Conditions of employment and wages continue unchanged pending collective bargaining agreement.

3-Day Seizure

THE first real operation of the Utilities Act was in the dispute between the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. and the Virginia Federation of Telephone Workers.

When the union withdrew its strike notice for May 17, Gov. William M. Tuck canceled plans perfected by the State Corporation Commission for seizing the company and told the commission:

"The success which crowned your efforts serves to demonstrate not only the desirability and feasibility of the statute under which you acted in my behalf, but proves that the Commonwealth is fully able to protect its citizens from the interruption, curtailment or cessation of an indispensable public utility by reason of a labor dispute."

Subsequently, because of failure of company and employes in two Eastern Shore counties to agree prior to a strike deadline, the State did seize and operate seven small exchanges in Accomack and Northampton counties for three days—but with all the operators who technically were on strike continuing to work for the State. The State restored the properties when the company reported it was prepared to continue normal service.

When the May 17 strike notice was withdrawn two days in advance of that date, the State reported that about 87 per cent of the telephone employes had agreed to work for the State.

The VEPCO Threat

THE other principal dispute that alerted the State was between the Virginia Electric & Power Co. and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. In fact, it was a dispute between these two in the spring of 1946 that led to Governor Tuck's recommendation for enactment of the utilities bill.

Tuck made national news at the time when he invoked an ancient colonial militia law to "draft" the workers. The strike was averted at the last minute, but Tuck set out to find more modern authority for future action.

Then in October, 1946, the VEPCO management refused to abide by an NLRB order certifying the IBEW as bargaining representative for the foremen. The union threatened a strike to force the company to accept the board's certification.

Two threats in one year were too many for Governor Tuck, who then requested action—and got it.

150 Answers to a Summer Worry

(Third of a Sunday Series.)

By Dorothea Andrews

Leapfrog requires no elaborate equipment, simply a good supporting cast. But it is advisable to practice the sport on a grassy playground rather than on knee-scuffing asphalt, for the very best leapfroggers sometimes come a cropper, not to mention the traffic hazard

ONE OF THE STRONGEST ARGUMENTS for organized recreation in summer is that it "keeps the kids off the streets."

With school just out, the District's 150-odd play areas will lift a load of anxiety off many a parent's mind.

For school-age youth, the District Recreation Department offers such pastimes as talent shows, hobby shows, pet shows, plays, kid-calling contests, costume parties, baby shows, doll shows and plays, in addition to baseball and other sports.

There is swimming at the Recreation Department's Georgetown or Rosedale pools or at the Government Service operated pools at Anacostia, East Potomac, McKinley, Takoma, Banneker and Francis.

There will be horseshoe tournaments, craft exhibits, tennis and softball tournaments. And there will be adult supervision at all these play areas.

Fences to Fountains

SINCE LAST SUMMER the Recreation Department has been able to provide more adequate facilities at 10 playgrounds—Banneker, Happy Hollow, Hamilton, Randall, Ridge, Francis, Kalorama, Chevy Chase, Watts Beach and Lincoln.

At two of them the "improvements" have consisted only of fencing, but at others there has been grading, seeding and sodding, drainage and planting, construction of multiple-use play areas and installation of drinking fountains. Two tennis courts have been added at Chevy Chase.

Actually, there is no end to the District's recreation program. It is bounded only by what people want to do with their leisure time, says Miss Sibyl Baker, who is assistant recreation superintendent in charge of program divisions.

The Recreation Department offers District residents everything from archery to bridge, from languages to orchestra practice.

There is badminton, baseball, paddle tennis, shuffleboard, softball, table tennis. There is social, folk, square and South American dancing. There is drama. There is choral singing.

War-Born Program

DURING the war, recreation officials strengthened their youth program to give restless young people an outlet for their pent-up energies. Youth canteens were begun, largely in school buildings. Last year, 40 were in operation.

This spring, the Recreation Department cooperated in the program sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and the Junior Board of Commerce to hold Walter Johnson Memorial Baseball Schools. At 22 recreation centers youngsters were instructed by members of the Washington Senators baseball club.

But while the Recreation Department is covering a lot of ground on a small budget, it is handicapped by a problem other than lack of money. The city doesn't have as many recreation units as it might have because there are too many people in town.

An example of this situation is in the neighborhood of 13th and V sts. nw., near the Harrison School. Land has been acquired there for extension of playground facilities, but on the property are 30 houses which cannot be torn down until the housing shortage eases.

Conflicting Complaints

IDEALLY, no recreation unit would be opened until sanitary facilities at least had been provided. But in keeping with its policy of stretching its facilities as far as possible, the Recreation Department is permitting the use of some areas before either drinking fountains or toilets are installed.

In these cases, the department sometimes gets complaints that "something should be done" about the areas before they are used further. But at the same time police are receiving complaints about kids playing in the streets and school officials are worrying about vandalism to their property.

As the Recreation Department continues its gradual program of beautifying its areas, it is meeting with one unexpected problem. The trees and shrubbery are not being respected.

Recreation officials report that in some cases tree boxes have been used for firewood. And children swing on young trees, skinning the bark.

Civic Leader Chairman

THE District Recreation Board is a seven-member body with both governmental and civic representation. Chairman, and a member since its authorization in 1942, is Harry S. Wender, who has been active in the Southwest Citizens Association. In 1941 he won the Federation of Citizens Association trophy for outstanding civic service.

James E. Schwab, a realtor, is vice chairman. Miss Alice C. Hunter, secretary since 1942, is an active member of the Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations and chairman of its child welfare committee. She also is a director of the Foster Day Care and Counseling Service and a member of the Day Care Board.

Newest Recreation Board member is Mrs. Andrew Saul, wife of a local realtor, who is an active member of the Board of Lady Visitors of Children's Hospital.

Walter L. Fowler, District budget officer, is the District government's representative on the Recreation Board. C. Melvin Sharpe represents the Board of Education. A Pepco official, Sharpe was one of the organizers of the local Community Chest. In his capacity as superintendent of National Capital Parks, Irving C. Root is an ex-officio member of the Recreation Board.

The Recreation Board determines all questions of general recreation policy and directs expenditure of appropriations.

Marylander Wins Friends For Himself If Not for Tax

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Walter E. Kennedy, Maryland's sales tax boss, was a dapper representative of the Free State when he began his exposition to 700 District merchants, but by the time the Q. and A. session ended even his bow tie was drooping.

"NOBODY likes taxes," a smiling Maryland official declared here last week as 700 District merchants cheered the masterpiece of understatement.

Walter E. Kennedy, new head of the Maryland Retail Sales Tax Division, came here to break the news to District merchants that they, too, were involved in the new Free State tax.

The dealers had suspected they would be entangled because of Maryland's "use tax"—a measure adopted to enforce the sales tax on State residents who did their shopping elsewhere.

Kennedy blandly informed the dealers that they would be expected to charge "known" Maryland residents the tax—just as if the Marylanders were doing their shopping within the State.

He admitted the "use tax" would be difficult to enforce and that it could be evaded by mail and express deliveries. But he said the State could stop store-owned trucks at the District Line to check on tax payments, if necessary.

When Kennedy finished, he was only half through. The questions came in volleys. But by the time he had heard them out he had won the District's dealers' respect, if not their entire agreement with some of the fine points of the law.

Kennedy said later that many District dealers already had applied for their $1 Maryland sales tax licenses that he appreciated the cooperation of the Washington Board of Trade, which sponsored the dealers' meeting and which is acting as a sort of Kennedy branch office for the distribution of the blanks and information.

Kennedy, a native Marylander and a graduate of Baltimore's Loyola College, was an accountant, securities dealer and tax consultant before he was appointed to the sales tax job two months ago. Since then he has discussed the mechanics of the tax with hundreds of Free State businessmen, and now he and two associates are making a series of one-night stands throughout the State, explaining the levy.

Nearby Prince Georges and Montgomery County merchants, incidentally, were undecided last night whether the first week of the tax had borne out their fears that it would drive business to the District. They were certain, however, that there was much grumbling the first day although sales were "about normal."

Australians Steep Stratosphere Tea

Sydney (AP).—Tea-loving Australians have been cheered by an airlines announcement that a special device has been perfected to make drinkable tea on long distance flights.

Australian National Airways is installing the tea-making device, with a capacity of two gallons, on all its planes. Complaints from air travelers of the quality and temperature of tea during air travel prompted experiments which produced the new pot.

A tea expert said the problem was not so much keeping the tea hot "as maintaining its quality, color and flavor."

Hope For Hawaii

At last the 50-year struggle of the people of Hawaii to obtain statehood has won congressional recognition. In its 196-134 vote approving preliminary legislation authorizing admission of Hawaii as the forty-ninth State, the House showed proper appreciation of Hawaii's case. These Pacific islands, which voluntarily ceded their sovereignty to the United States half a century ago, meet all the requirements for statehood. Their qualifications have been reaffirmed many times by congressional committees.

As a Territory, Hawaii has a history of financial responsibility and of constructive handling of its own affairs. It is a prosperous community of more than half a million Americans whose education and literacy standards are high, whose participation at the polls is far above the national average and whose loyalty was demonstrated beyond all question during the war. There is no racial problem in Hawaii, for the Territory is a living experiment in racial democracy. The old continental argument against encompassing offshore possessions is diminished by the fact that Honolulu is a mere 10 hours by plane from San Francisco—far closer than most State capitals a century ago. With America's vital interests in the Pacific illustrated only too clearly by the war, the State of Hawaii can well serve as a symbol of our permanent concern with that area.

It is regrettable that the Hawaiian statehood bill must go through exhaustive hearings again in the Senate, and that pressure of other legislation probably will prevent passage during this session. But proponents of statehood have won a signal victory in the House which will hold over until the next session of Congress. Then there will be time to concentrate on the Senate for the long overdue recognition of the just aspirations of this group of citizens to become an integral part of the American Union.

John Paul Jones

John Paul Jones may come into his own today, his 200th birthday anniversary, as the Father of the American Navy. The Navy has never forgotten him, but somehow he has never had the niche in our hall of fame that, because of his example and his deeds, is his due. Few navies can have had a baptism of glory such as John Paul Jones gave ours. A single engagement at sea put it so saliently on the map that Catherine of Russia stole the victor of it and gave him admiral's rank in the Turkish wars. The fault was American. A hero, like a prophet, is often forgotten by his contemporaries, and this happened to John Paul Jones, though perhaps there was reason for this neglect in the general disorder of post-Revolutionary times, as well as the fact that our naval pioneer was one of the galaxy of heroes who made America independent. However, John Paul Jones never got his proper meed of praise as time went on. This bright and particular star in our national firmament lay almost forgotten in an obscure graveyard in Paris till 1905. Now he lies in the chapel crypt at Annapolis, a constant inspiration to the young men in training to go down to the sea in fighting ships.

John Paul Jones acquired his Welsh cognomen somewhat mysteriously in the course of his dashing life. Born John Paul, he saw the light in Scotland, and, scarcely in his teens, shipped to sea for adventure's sake. He cared not what he engaged in, from piracy to slaving, and the contempt of the English for John Paul Jones was hardly concealed when the Continental Congress gave him high commissions in the naval service. The contempt turned to high respect before peace came. A natural commander, an intrepid fighter, John Paul Jones humiliated the British navy as the Dutch Von Tromp had done in Charles II's time. With tongue in cheek, he sailed in and out of British harbors, taking so many prizes on the way that he became a sore thorn in the British side. The particular exploit that gave him renown was his engagement with H.M.S. Serapis off the British coast. He had command of a squadron manned by a mixed crew that had been scratched together in France. He was left alone on his own ship, the Bonhomme Richard, to tackle the Serapis, which had double the guns of his own vessel and was much more maneuverable. John Paul Jones immediately reduced the latter advantage by lashing his boat to the Serapis and fighting it out.

It was a bloody encounter, and the Bonhomme Richard's guns were silenced one after the other, so that, at the height of the fury, Paul's officers, most of whom had been wounded, sought surrender. Only the fact that a cannon ball had carried away the ensign mast prevented them from striking the flag. In the confusion the English commodore called out to John Paul Jones whether the colors had indeed been lowered. Jones' retort, in his own words, was "the most determined negative," and history records that the negative was immortally phrased, "I have just begun to fight." So he fought on, manning a nine-pounder himself to put spirit into his disabled and exhausted crew and succeeded in bringing down the Serapis' mainmast. Eventually the Serapis had had enough and called for quarter, John Paul Jones transferring a boarding party before she went to the bottom. With that gallant action, the American Navy got its start on the high seas—equipped at birth with a tradition that is treasured and will always be treasured in our annals.

The Moral Issue

Nowhere, in our opinion, has the fundamental crisis of our time been better stated than by the Commission on a Just and Durable Peace of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ. "We believe," says the commission in its recent statement on foreign policy, "that the critical and supreme political issue of today is that of the free society versus the police state. It is not the economic issue of communism versus capitalism or the issue of state socialism versus free enterprise." The failure of American diplomacy up to the present has been in the main a failure to make this issue clear.

There exists among foreign people, says the commission, a belief that the United States, no less than Soviet Russia, is using or is prepared to use "methods of coercion to impose on others our particular form of society." Thus to many of them the conflict appears not as a moral conflict involving "the sacredness of personality which is fundamental in Christianity," but merely one of rival imperialisms.

"Our people," continues the commission, "by word and deed, at home and abroad, ought to make clear that they stand on the principle of a free society as against a police state." A free society is defined as one "wherein all men, as the children of God, are recognized to have certain basic rights, including liberty to hold and change beliefs and practices according to reason and conscience, freedom to differ from their own government and immunity from persecution or coercion on account of spiritual and intellectual beliefs." A police state, then, is one in which all these rights are disregarded, and Russia is a police state which justifies its disregard of them by an appeal to the revolutionary doctrine of Marxist communism which, in this, says the commission, "stands clearly opposed to Christianity."

Given the plain choice, the commission asserts, the peoples of the world "would "overwhelmingly prefer a free society of tolerance." But many of them also prefer to live under state socialism rather than under what they believe must be an economy based upon the old competitive principle and are therefore disposed to support the designs of the Soviet leaders. Thus our position must be restated in some way that will acknowledge "the right of all to experiment and seek by fair and tolerant methods to propagate their beliefs in the world." In other words, the foreign policy of the United States "must stand for something so simple that all can understand and so plainly right that all men of good will will agree." Then, says the commission, the futility of attempting to extend the dominion of the police state will become apparent even to the Russians themselves and the present atmosphere of fear and suspicion will be replaced by one "in which the nations could work together for a just and durable peace."

Fully as we concur in the commission's statement of the fundamental issue, it strikes us that the problem has been considerably oversimplified. We agree that the question of communism or of state socialism in other countries is wholly irrelevant unless it can be shown that there is some historical connection between these economic doctrines and the rise of the modern police states. What we are dealing with in this crisis is essentially the problem of power. The police state is in the last analysis the device of those who have seized power to extend and consolidate it. But in the modern world political and economic power are indivisible, and the seizure of political power by ambitious and fanatical groups has been facilitated by the great concentrations of economic power evident in both monopoly capitalism and state socialism. Since personal rights are by definition limitations of power, and since the existence of dissident minorities are a threat to power, they must be eradicated. The police state is of course by Christian standards wholly immoral, but power, as Jakob Burckhardt noted many years ago, "is of its nature evil."

The disregard by the masters of police states for the rights of individuals and minorities powerless to resist them is extended to the rights of powerless nations beyond the frontiers. Thus it is possbile that the progress of a police state bent upon universal dominion can be checked only by a rival concentration of power which is equal or superior to its own. But such a concentration of power may require a similar suppression of personal and minority rights, so that what in the beginning may have seemed a contest of free and slave societies may become in the end the contest of rival police tyrannies. This perhaps is the fearful dilemma in which the world may presently find itself.

May Conviction

Guilty of conspiracy and bribery is the verdict pronounced by a District Court jury against Andrew J. May and the brothers Garsson. The former Congressman from Kentucky who sold his influence to these crooked war contractors is the chief culprit in the sordid plot that was exposed a year ago by the Senate War Investigating Committee. For he not only indulged in dishonest practices, but he also betrayed the trust of the people of his district who repeatedly elected him to represent them in Congress. It is dismaying, indeed frightening, to discover that a Congressman who served as chairman of the important House Military Affairs Committee from 1938 until his repudiation at the polls last November is a petty bribe-taker. Had he been a more ambitious, more accomplished criminal, who knows what damage might have been done to our war effort!

The purpose of punitive legislation is not to punish the culprit, but to preserve a respect for law and order. Judged by such preventive standards, the criminal least entitled to clemency is the recreant lawmaker who prostitutes his office to base ends. Such men undermine the very foundations of established political institutions by destroying public confidence in the effectiveness of the existing form of Government as an agency for enforcing the will of the people. For that reason it is essential in the public interest to make sure that Mr. May does not escape the harsh penalties imposed by law for the crime which he has committed.

Shortsighted Lobby

President Truman let anger get the better of discretion in accusing the real estate lobby of activities "clearly subversive of representative government" and urging Congress to make a full investigation of the operations of "this selfish and shortsighted group." In our opinion the President has impaired the force of his justified criticism of the weak rent control bill by implying that it was inspired by the real estate lobby and that Congress itself has been a pliant instrument in the hands of an unscrupulous organized group. On its face, certainly, the real estate lobby has been no more subversive of representative government than numerous other lobbies—notably the labor lobby—that have brought strong pressure to bear on Congress to influence its decisions. The chief difference so far as the President is concerned is that the real estate lobby has been pleading for legislation that the President disapproved, while the labor lobby has been fighting legislation which he, too, opposed. If Congress were actually a catspaw in the hands of powerful lobbies, it would presumably have capitulated to the labor lobby as well as to the real estate lobby.

Senator Wherry is quite right in saying that if any real estate lobbyists have been guilty of criminal activities, the Department of Justice should be called on to conduct an inquiry. So far as is known, however, the chief crime of which the President accuses the lobby is overpersuasiveness in what he considers a bad cause. Since it is the function of lobbies to try to mould legislation—a function, by the way, that is a recognized and essential feature of lawmaking under our representative form of Government—overpersuasiveness certainly cannot be considered a crime.

If we were disposed to bring an indictment against the real estate lobby, it would be a charge of shortsightedness. For we believe that the owners of real estate will have good cause to regret the action of Congress in weakening existing controls over rentals and putting obstructions in the way of the housing program. Already landlords in various congested urban centers have begun to put the screws on tenants while nontransient occupants of hotels exempted from control under the new rent law have in some instances been served with notice of terrifyingly large rent increases. Irresponsible landlords who take advantage of housing shortages to exploit helpless tenants are not only public enemies; they are the enemies of all responsible owners of real estate who realize full well the dangers of overcharging. For unless the rent-gougers are curbed, the end of Federal rent control will inaugurate tightened State and local controls that may be more oppressive and harder to get rid of than Federal controls.

Matter Of Principle

Since the Labor Department's Conciliation Service is soon to be terminated, the Senate victory over the House in respect of its appropriation may seem academic. We think, on the contrary, that it constituted a victory of essential principle. The House, at the instance of Representative Frank Keefe, had placed in its appropriation bill for the Labor Department a clause forbidding the payment of salaries to the director of the Conciliation Service, Edward Warren, and 100 other top officials. The Senate refused to accept this vindictive provision. Senator Knowland in particular deserves credit for his insistence in conference on the Senate position that this provision was improper and inequitable. It would have amounted, indeed, as we have previously asserted, to a species of legislative blackmail and an invasion of the executive power to hire and fire.

Now that the House has yielded, agreeing to the appropriation of funds for the Conciliation Service until its transfer with no strings attached, Mr. Warren has submitted his resignation. The resolution of this House-Senate conflict constitutes complete vindication for him—a vindication which his personal integrity and the fidelity of his service to the Labor Department thoroughly warranted. He headed the Conciliation Service in a period when labor relations were peculiarly trying and contributed much to their amelioration.

Military Training News

I notice that Mr. Wayne F. Buckle, in a letter published July 1, accuses American newspapers generaly and also The Post "of much one-sided reporting with respect to the question of universal military training." He stresses the opinion that especially the opposition of the churches to the proposal is not adequately reported.

If Mr. Buckle's observation is correct, there is a relatively simple explanation of the newspapers' failure to report the views of the churches widely enough. The opposition of the churches to universal military training can hardly be called news. It is old stuff; a hangover from the rabid pacifism and provincialism (civic selfishness) which for years have marked the churches in the public eye.

The newspapers give very little space to the churches' beliefs on God and immortality either, though these are surely matters of concern to everyone. The public will not, however, find the teachings of the churches on these matters to be news. It is doctrine.

Editors of church papers may feel the beliefs about God and immortality need restating in their columns, but this is not the function of the public press. Even in church papers such columns do not pass as news. I believe the typical newspaper editor is pretty well justified in considering the churches' opposition to universal military training as doctrine, and not news. Sometimes "doctrine is news," but not often.

There may be church people who feel that because their opposition to universal military training is not featured to a greater extent in the public press, the press is therefore not free on this issue. But the press must surely be free to exclude from its columns items of information which it does not consider news. And freedom of the press means not only freedom to print, but also freedom not to print. Church papers are perfectly free to publish all they like in opposition to the proposal. At the same time, editors of church papers are also free not to publish information about universal training which strikes them as having little news value to their readers.

"Two Worlds"

Your lead-off editorial of July 3 tells me that you regard the topic of primary importance.

But its opening sentence tells me that you are overlooking all sorts of possibilities which lie between "one world" run on the Russian plan and "one world" run on the American plan.

I think every intelligent person must realize that there are mighty forces at work trying their utmost to foment war between the United States and Russia. But if there be any possible gain through such a struggle, for either Russia or the United States—or for any other nation, for that matter—I must confess that I am not sufficiently intelligent to see the gain. Nor do I see how such a war could result conclusively for either side.

The reasoning which leads to the above view has led at the same time to the corollary view that the two diametrically opposite objectives of Russia and the United States cannot be permanently at peace in the same world. So here is the situation—they cannot be at war successfully and they cannot be at peace successfully. Obviously changes are indicated.

What is not so clear to many minds is that while Russia is not in a position to make changes in the United States any more than the United States is fixed to make changes in Russia, each is at full liberty to make changes within its own domain. And maybe there should be an old saying that "changes begin at home."

I know that in between capitalism and communism there is a path to something higher than either and that the path is open to any and all comers. The nation which first finds this path can set the pace for all other nations by the very success achieved within its own borders. It will not be necessary to conquer any other nation to induce it to adopt advances which are to its obvious advantage.

In my opinion the United States is better fixed than any other nation to take the lead toward a higher economic and political civilization than has yet been experienced in human history. I think the time is overripe for a start in that direction. But I do not think that the start will be made until we want to get there badly enough to stop quarreling among ourselves over relatively trivial matters and get willing to think and act together for the benefit of all concerned.

DAVID DARRIN.
Washington.

Ayres Nomination

It seems a sad commentary on 147 million people in these United States that no person is found to succeed Mr. W. A. Ayres, nominated for reappointment as a Federal Trade Commissioner. He was born April 19, 1867. I believe his first appointment to the Federal Trade Commission was in 1934.

Editor's Note: Mr. Ayers, although 80, is very keen, keeps up to date with his work, and has a background of invaluable experience in FTC work.

Social Security Flaw

Much is being said about increasing Social Security taxes which have been frozen at 1 per cent since the war began.

I was an employe of Social Security (old age and survivors insurance) for several years. The law is good but it has many flaws in it, and there is one flaw that should be corrected. What I have reference to is not a part of the law itself, but a part of the procedure in administering the law.

The old age and survivors insurance title of the Social Security Act (Title II) provides insurance for old people who are 65 or over, in addition to benefits upon death of a person who has sufficient quarters of coverage to enable him or his survivors to collect benefits. However, a very great many of very old people cannot collect these benefits because the old age benefits are too small for a person to exist on them without money from an outside source to complement them, and a person who actually qualifies for old age insurance cannot draw such benefits if he earns over $14.99 in employment covered by the Social Security Act.

Many a person who has been paying his 1 per cent for so many years thinking he can collect when he attains age 65 finds upon making application that he cannot draw such benefits unless he stops work, and he can't stop work because the benefits are too small.

This proviso is part of the policy of the Social Security Board in administering the act. I have always felt that it is a gross injustice because, to my mind, the Social Security Act (old age and survivors insurance) was designed to help an aged employe, and the purpose is defeated in so many cases by the stipulation that an employe who is otherwise qualified is unable to draw these benefits if he is working in an employment which is covered by the Social Security Act.

Substitute For The Marshall Plan

It has always been a dominant aim of Russian foreign policy to establish an ascendancy over the Balkans, the Straits, and Constantinople. A decisive step toward the fulfillment of this aim was the elimination of Austria-Hungary as a great power.

The settlements of 1947 opened the way, again with the unintentional help of the Western Allies, to further Russian penetration. At present nearly all the countries of Eastern Europe and the Balkans—an area comprising about half of the continent and containing some 120 million inhabitants—are more or less under Russian control. So are vast expanses of Asia.

For all its generosity, the Marshall plan will not, at least in Central and Eastern Europe, achieve its object. Moreover, its execution will lead to endless complications and disputes, which will enable the Russians, for their part, to achieve their own object. Soviet diplomacy may make a specious profession of loyalty to the general scheme of European reconstruction, but this would be no more sincere than Stalin's proclamation in May, 1943, when he made credulous people believe that Russia, with the abolition of the Comintern, had genuinely abandoned its subversive activities throughout the world. Whatever assurances they may give to other countries, the rulers of the Kremlin will continue their old policy with unabated vigor.

It is therefore imperative that the Russian members of the control commissions and the Russian occupation forces in various countries of Europe return home without further delay. This can be achieved only if all the other Allied control personnel and occupation forces also quit Germany, Italy, Japan, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Finland. Russia will certainly refuse to withdraw from these countries on the plea that all of them owe her reparations for many years to come.

Only if the United States could be induced to pay these reparations on behalf of its former adversaries could so fateful a situation be satisfactorily resolved. These payments by the United States would take the place of such grants as might have been made to the same countries under the terms of the Marshall plan.

Thus delivered from the burden of reparations, the countries in question would need no further financial help. For the funds with which they would have paid reparations would then be at their disposal for purchases abroad of raw materials, foodstuffs, and machinery. Left to their own devices, the vanquished and ruined countries would rapidly recover their economic strength and would be free to choose the political and social systems best suited to their national needs and temperaments.

Such control as it might still be desirable to exercise in these countries should be entrusted not to the Allied Powers but to the unchallengeable authority of the United Nations. It is to be hoped that for this purpose only such military commanders and civil commissioners would be appointed who were citizens of countries that had taken no part in the war.

Only when political freedom has taken firm root in Europe will there be any hope of effecting the union on which its happiness and prosperity ultimately depend.

Atom Security And Europe

A Communication

DISCUSSION of the plan to rehabilitate Europe has given relatively little attention to its atomic implications. Yet these appear of critical importance to our national security when we take a long range view.

If the Soviet government continues to prevent effective international control of atomic energy, the future security of the United States against atomic attack will depend largely upon its capacity to retaliate with overwhelming force. That will depend upon offensive superiority for atomic warfare. Due to our defensive vulnerability to atomic warfare, caused by our large concentrations of industries and population and by the susceptibility to surprise attack resulting from our form of government, our margin of offensive superiority will need to be extensive.

Such a margin of offensive superiority must depend upon many factors, prominent among which are superiority in production of atomic bombs, in the means of delivering them—planes today and in the future guided missiles as well—in industrial capacity, and in dispersion of offensive bases.

At present, of course, we have a monopoly of atomic bombs. But this monopoly is only temporary. According to the War Department's report on "The Effects of the Atomic Bomb on National Security," prepared for the Legislative Reference Section of the Library of Congress last March, after "perhaps as many as 8 to 15 years "other nations will possess atomic bombs in significant quantities." That means by 1955 or a few years later.

AT ANOTHER point in this report a very significant statement is made. It is stated that "of vital importance to counteract our loss of a cushion of time is a need for allies. We cannot stand alone in the world today, if for no other reason than lack of sufficient strength to do so." When such an admission is made by the War Department, it is doubly significant.

The relation of success or failure in bringing about the recovery of western and central Europe to our future atomic security is not difficult to see. As has frequently been pointed out, if we fail, we must expect an extension of communism in Europe. Economic breakdown, starvation and despair might result in a few years in a spread of Communist governments to the Atlantic.

That would mean a vast increase in the power of the Soviet government and its satellites which would apply particularly to future offensive capabilities for atomic warfare—industrial capacity, ability to produce bombs, airplanes and eventually long-range guided missiles, and dispersion of offensive bases.

At the same time, we should be losing our potential allies, the need for which the War Department's report declares is of vital importance. It seems probable, moreover, that such developments in Europe would produce repercussions in Asia and even in parts of South America which could go far towards leaving the United States in atomic isolation.

WHETHER SUCH political developments could occur before or after the Soviet bloc had produced "significant quantities of atomic bombs" cannot be foreseen. But they could prove exceedingly dangerous to the security of the United States, leaving our country by the 1960s isolated to a considerable degree and encircled on a global scale. Unlike the 1920s, when we sought with disastrous results to isolate ourselves from Europe, we should then be isolated by others despite anything we could do.

Such developments would mean a definite crystalization of two rival blocs, facing each other in a rivalry rendered exceedingly dangerous by a race in atomic armaments. Our bloc would be far weaker in population and resources, smaller in extent and perhaps even, in the long run, inferior in industrial capacity. That kind of a situation would seem to point directly to an eventual atomic war, in which we should face such odds that, even if we could finally win, we should suffer destruction impossible to imagine. Whether, in such circumstances and fearing and preparing for an atomic war, we could maintain our free institutions would be doubtful.

The cost of rehabilitating Europe can be regarded as insurance against such a perilous situation and thus as a safeguard of our future atomic security. When the cost is regarded in this light, it does not seem excessive.

LIVINGSTON HARTLEY.

Labor Law

I was greatly disappointed in The Post's reactionary views on the Taft-Hartley bill. It was the only Washington newspaper that I felt would support the fight of the working man. I pity the poor misguided working man who by reading our capitalistic papers was led to believe that the slave bill would actually help him. I am afraid that more mistrust, discontent, hatred and strife will be caused by this bill, than any that our Congress has passed in many years.

ARLINE NEAL.

Poor Example

Nearly all newspaper space is devoted to juvenile crime, murder, war. If these papers are sent overseas, the people of the world will consider Americans to be barbarians.

We have more crime in the United States than in any other civilized country. How are we going to tell others what to do when we don't have our own country in order?

2-Man Blockade of Mine Safety

By Drew Pearson

DESPITE all the talk about mine safety after the Centralia, Ill., disaster, the coal mines were handed back to the operators last week without Congressional action on a mine safety law.

Chiefly responsible for the dilly-dallying are Republican Representatives Max Schwabe of Missouri and Wint Smith of Kansas. Another Republican, Gerald Landis of Indiana, has been pushing mine safety, but his bill is blocked in the secrecy of committee by Schwabe and Smith. They tell colleagues that the bill must be postponed until Congress can make an investigation—after it adjourns.

Schwabe even refused to hold public hearings on the Landis bill, also refused to put the question to a committee vote.

On the Senate side, GOP Senator Butler of Nebraska, chairman of the Public Lands Committee, is quite willing to pass a temporary bill continuing enforcement of Federal mine safety rules until Schwabe and Smith consent to permanent legislation.

Note—The history of mine tragedies is that after each accident the entire Nation talks about remedial legislation. Then the coal operator lobby gets busy, Congress dawdles, and mine safety is forgotten.

New Sub-Hunting Plane

THE NAVY is developing a secret reconnaissance plane, the "flying turtle," to guard American shores against fast, deep-sea submarines such as those the Germans developed near the end of the war. It will be a land-based plane with super sounding devices.

The Navy asked for 78 million dollars to manufacture this mysterious craft, but the GOP nickel-nursers in the House turned it down. Desperately the Navy appealed to the Senate Appropriations Committee. Behind locked doors, Navy technicians divulged the secret plans, stressed that the Russians had taken over the German plants where the submarines were designed.

Senate Republicans promptly authorized the Navy to go ahead with its plans, promised the money will be appropriated by the next Congress, at which time the "flying turtles" will be ready to go into production.

Note—Future war may take the form of atomic bombs carried in very deep-sailing submarines.

New Labor Tussle

THE TAFT-HARTLEY Labor Act has become law, but the shooting isn't over. GOP Senators are now rowing backstage over who will head a Senate-House committee to study labor conditions, later amend the law.

Minnesota's dour Joe Ball wants the job and has the secret support of Senator Taft. However, many Republicans consider Ball too anti-labor, prefer progressive Senator George Aiken of Vermont.

As one Republican Senator put it: "To name someone like Joe Ball to head this study commission, in the midst of all the agitation over passage of the Taft-Hartley Bill, would be like waving a red flag in labor's face."

Even such mid-road Senators as Lodge of Massachusetts, Baldwin of Connecticut anad fellow Minnesotan Thye lean against Ball. All three obviously had Joe in mind when, at a recent closed door GOP conference, they insisted that the chairman of the Labor Study Committee be a Senator "known to be friendly to labor."

Note—The joint House-Senate Committee is provided under the Taft-Hartley Act to continue studying labor problems, recommend changes next session.

Navy's Patuxent Paradise

DURING the war this column once criticized treatment of Navy enlisted men at the Naval Air Station at Patuxent, Md. Therefore, it's a pleasure to report that today this same air station, under Capt. A. B. Vosseler and executive officer Comdr. Wes Byng, has become one of the Navy's model bases.

The Navy has taken over the USO recreation club—paid for out of ship's store profits with no cost to the taxpayer—and converted it into an enlisted man's center, with library, hobby shops, etc. In addition, the Navy has given enlisted men swimming beaches, outdoor grills for picnics, a swimming pool and fishing and boating facilities just as good and better than those available to officers. Officers and enlisted men are building a golf course, supplying labor and material themselves, with no cost to the taxpayers except seed for greens. The golf course will be available to brass hats and men alike.

Only cost to the taxpayer, in addition to grass seed, is the cost of movies, one-half of which is paid for out of Congressional appropriations, one-half from ship's store.

Patuxent Naval Air Station is setting the pattern for the over-all Navy recreation program.

Labor Politics Revived

IT NOW looks as if the Taft-Hartley Labor Act had given a new lease on life to something the Republicans wanted to stop—labor politics.

It was no secret that Messrs. Taft, Hartley et al wanted to upset the CIO's Political Action Committee, so active in opposing anti-labor candidates. However, the Taft-Hartley law has now inspired certain labor leaders hitherto not so active in politics. For instance:

1. John L. Lewis plans to revive Labor's Non-partisan League.

2. The AFL, which always frowned on the CIO's PAC and wasn't too vigorous politically, is now going to jump into the political arena.

While the Taft-Hartley law prohibits unions from using their funds in political campaigns, there is nothing to prevent labor leaders from raising millions of dollars in "voluntary contributions."

The AFL plans to work on a loose State-to-State basis, mobilizing strength in each Senatorial and Congressional district. Its leaders reject any third party now, will nominate pro-labor men if the major parties nominate anti-labor candidates.

Note—The combined Lewis-AFL drive may mean an additional half-million workers ringing doorbells in 1948. Historically, if labor gets active enough politically the Republicans lose.

Merry-Go-Round

TWO CHIEF reasons for the current Midwest oil shortage: 1, John L. Lewis has been the Nation's best oil salesman, indirectly persuading many to convert from coal to oil; 2. More gasoline is used on farms than ever before in history. Tractors and other gasoline-driven motors replaced manpower during the war because of the labor shortage. . . . A lot of people in Wall Street would like to know what little angel in or around the White House is watching over the destiny of Preston Tucker, would-be Chicago auto-maker, whose bid to sell 20 million dollars worth of stock was suddenly approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission after an earlier critical SEC report.

Veto Overriding Confounds Left

WHEN President Truman vetoed the labor bill he set the pattern for an extraordinary political year—the veto on June 20, was close to exactly 12 months before the expected dates of the Republican and Democratic National conventions.

The phase "set the pattern" is about 50 per cent correct, for in the area of the two old parties, especially the Republicans, Mr. Truman's action clarified the political picture. But upon the groups outside the old parties, including the largest of them symbolized by Henry A. Wallace, the effect of Mr. Truman's veto was confusion; it was, so to speak, a multiplication of division.

During the Presidency of Roosevelt the dissenting groups in American politics attained a unity which they never before had, and which in the nature of things is usually impossible for such groups. Preceding the 1944 campaign, four groups took formal action in support of a fourth election of Roosevelt. The coincidence of the steps, taken in a single week, made the coherence almost sensational.

The four groups were the CIO Political Action Committee, the American Labor Party, the Liberal Party and the Communist Party, which, as it took this step, formally changed its name temporarily to "Communist Political Association." The only group of any consequence that remained outside this coherence in support of Roosevelt was the Socialist Party, which retained its 45 years of separate identity and had a candidate of its own, Norman Thomas.

Splintered Movement

FOLLOWING the 1944 election, the largest and most thoroughly organized dissenting group was the CIO Political Action Committee. Its purpose, as commonly interpreted, was to dominate the Democratic Party (though its head, Sidney Hillman, maintained that it was non-partisan and would function in both the old parties).

After Roosevelt died, a common judgment, sustained by much evidence, was that the CIO-PAC would try to make Mr. Wallace the Democratic nominee for the Presidency in 1948—as it had tried, strenuously and very close to successfully, to make him the vice presidential nominee in 1944. (Had that attempt succeeded, Mr. Wallace would today be President.)

But CIO-PAC in the congressional elections last November failed in attempts to elect candidates it supported and saw candidates it opposed win victories that in the aggregate were disaster for CIO-PAC. Following that catastrophe, CIO-PAC and the whole school of thought of which it was a spearhead, the whole of the left wing that had unity under the aegis of Roosevelt, fell into the condition which is the common state of dissenters—division and confusion. In the left wing today there are, in addition to the Communist Party, four organized groups and many splinters. The left wing is back where it was before Roosevelt gave it cohesion.

Balm Curdled

DURING recent months the largest demonstration of political dissent having the greatest degree of coherence has been the spectacular meetings addressed by Mr. Wallace. He and his following must now ask themselves a familiar question: where do we go from here?

If they were cheered by President Truman's veto of the labor bill they must be dismayed by the overriding of it. Any renewal of hope to dominate the Democratic Party is frustrated by the fact that more than half the Democrats in the House and Senate combined voted to override the President's veto.

If Mr. Wallace and those around him and his following as a whole think of starting a third party they face frustration, according to a study made by Dewey L. Fleming, of the Baltimore Sun, of the election laws in the various States. In 19 States, including some of the largest, a new party can get a place on the ticket only by petitions signed by a specified number of voters. The number and the process are formidable.

In California, for example, the proponents of a new party in 1948 would have to get over 165,000 signatures. Some States require both petitions and conventions. The establishment of a new party and the mechanism of getting it on the tickets in the States are so formidable as to make success in the national election a fantastic impossibility.

If they cannot have a new party of their own, with any prospect of success, what will Mr. Wallace and his associates and following do? That question sums up the part of the political picture next year which is confusing.

Hardly a Murmur

ANOTHER part of the picture has been clarified by Mr. Truman's veto of the labor bill. The veto at once caused and made vivid to the country the extraordinary solidarity of the Republicans. Out of 51 Republicans in the Senate, only 3 voted counter to party policy and in support of Mr. Truman's veto. In the House, out of the total elected last fall, 246, only 11 supported the veto.

The total of dissenters in both branches, 14, is so slight as to be negligible; it can by no possibility be called a party cleavage. And the 14 dissenters do not include any leadership of a sort likely to create serious cleavage.

England's Empty Hod

NO ONE would doubt that production has played a great role in the history of the United States. Certainly in recent decades, even before World War II, increasing attention has been paid to American production, the rate of its expansion and the relation of production to prevailing material standards of living.

The dominant American view has been that raising material standards depends on increasing output. Though our Government has gone in for progressive taxation on a large scale, there is only a minority group in this country which would look to the redistribution of income by this means as a source of a permanent rise in material well-being for the common run of people.

That explains the interest Americans show in the records of output and their preoccupation with feather-bedding, restrictions of output and monopoly.

Economy of Regulation

IT CANNOT be said that European, and English, opinion has followed this same path. In Europe, governments, important political parties and their supporters in the population have had a different view of the conditions of economic progress. They have turned for the solution of their economic problems to the redistribution of wealth and income through taxation and other governmental measures and to replacement of competitive economic systems by planned or regulated ones.

This is what England has been doing and is still in the process of doing. Between the two wars there had already been effected a major dispersion of income, which since 1940 has been carried still further. And, in moving toward the same goal, the English have gone a long way in socializing their industry and regulating, or planning, their economic activities.

Young as it is, the British experiment is far along. It would seem most important for Americans to follow this experiment and to be apprized of what people are saying about it.

The Five-Day Flop

AN INTERESTING and important record is being made in the coal industry. This industry has been socialized. To show the government's solicitude for the miners, the industry was recently put on a five-day week. The record of production is disappointing, since it was hoped, and predicted, that the miners would exert themselves and produce as much in five as six days.

At a recent conference in Yorkshire, Mr. Shinwell, Minister of Fuel and Power, chided the miners for their low production, high rate of absenteeism and even for striking. But the puzzling remarks were made by Lord Citrine.

Lord Citrine is a veteran labor leader and a man of considerable experience. He explained the failure of the miners by what he called their "divided conceptions." "Some of the men felt," he said, "that they were being asked to collaborate to make capitalism prosperous . . ."

We ought to ponder these words. In terms of our experience we ought to ask ourselves, "What makes men work when they stop working for themselves?"

Cold Spring Possible Factor

Polio a Late Starter

By Lester Grant

ALTHOUGH the incidence of poliomyelitis is lower this year than in a comparable period in 1946, another comparatively high incidence of the disease is possible in 1947 throughout the Nation, it was reported yesterday by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

The foundation reported that 1124 cases of the disease have occurred in the United States this year, against 1579 for the comparable period last year. But it was pointed out that the relatively long, cold spring may have delayed the appearance of the disease in many areas, and that certain heavily populated centers which have been free of the disease for several years constitute potential danger spots this year or next.

The foundation made it clear that such estimates are not to be construed by the general public as a warning of inevitable disaster. Infantile paralysis, in any event, attacks relatively few persons, even in epidemic years. Twenty cases in 100,000 population is usually considered an epidemic.

Foundation directors have completed a series of preparedness meetings, which are held routinely every year in areas where incidence is expected to be relatively higher than normal from June to September, the period when the disease appears to make its greatest inroads. These meetings are held in cooperation with local health authorities.

Studies show that, in general, epidemics of infantile paralysis appear to run in cycles of four to six years. Where an area has escaped such epidemics for such periods, directors of the foundation mark it as an epidemic possibility.

It is assumed among poliomyelitis experts that the population in general acquires an immunity to the disease through natural exposure to the virus in the early years of life, and it is difficult literally to run away from the disease or to attempt to isolate oneself from it.

The foundation emphasized this point in urging all persons to take the following precautions if infantile paralysis comes to the community:

1. Call your doctor immediately if any of these symptoms appear: headache, nausea, a cold, upset stomach, muscle soreness or stiffness, unexplained fever. Infantile paralysis starts in many different ways, most of them just like a lot of other childhood diseases. Be on the safe side.

2. Avoid new contacts. Try not to mingle with crowds. Local health authorities decide whether schools and other gathering places may remain open. If you can help it, don't take children to theaters, on trains, buses or boats or to beaches where they mingle with strangers.

3. Don't get overtired. Extreme fatigue makes you an easier victim. Too strenuous play, late hours, irregular schedules are possible invitations to attack.

4. Avoid chilling. Don't stay very long in very cold water.

5. Don't swim in polluted waters. Check with your health department beforehand.

6. Keep clean. Wash hands before eating. Keep flies and other insects away from food. Don't leave garbage uncovered.

7. Consult your family doctor as to the advisability of removal of tonsils and adenoids, or other mouth and throat surgery, during the usual epidemic months.

Dr. Hart E. Van Riper, medical director of the foundation, said that since there is no sure-fire preventive measure (such as vaccination, a drug or other medicine) against infantile paralysis, the best a community can do is to be prepared so that if the disease strikes there are facilities for handling the problem quickly, thus minimizing the results of infection.

For this reason the foundation makes an annual pre-summer estimate of areas where it is felt that the incidence may rise, to make sure that hospital facilities and various types of equipment, including physical therapy measures, are adequate and that nursing services will be up to the needs if the epidemic occurs. Where facilities are lacking for proper care of patients, the foundation and its affiliated chapters will provide the essentials for good medical care. Last year the foundation and its local chapters spent about $12,000,000 for epidemic aid.

Throughout the Nation last year, there were about 25,000 cases of infantile paralysis, the highest incidence since 1916 when there were about 27,000 cases. In 1945, the Nation-wide incidence was about 13,000.

Matter of Fact

Odds Shorten on AFL-CIO Union

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

IT IS not impossible that, for a curious variety of reasons, an exceedingly important event—a marriage between the AFL and the CIO—may be arranged in the not too distant future. This union of the two great labor organizations is still, in the opinion of close observers of the labor scene, a long shot. But a whole series of recent developments has measurably reduced the odds against it.

The new labor measure, which the AFL leaders resent at least as bitterly as the CIO chiefs, has acted as a sort of catalyst. It has provided the labor leaders with a mutual object of hatred, always an effective means of drawing people together. But the labor act has merely served to set the ball rolling. The other forces making for what labor men call "unity" may be briefly itemized.

The Usurper's Triumph

FIRST, there is the remarkable victory which now appears to be in prospect for John L. Lewis in the coal struggle. Lewis appears in a fair way to win from most of the coal operators, without any prolonged strike, concessions more than double the national pattern established by CIO President Philip Murray in the steel settlement. Moreover, this victory, if it comes about, will have been achieved within a matter of days after the hated labor measure became law.

There can be little doubt of the compelling ambition long nursed in the Lewis bosom to become the undisputed grand panjandrum of all American labor. A coal victory will mean that Lewis has vastly oudistanced all possible contenders for the labor throne.

Second, Lewis is being backed for the job by David Dubinsky, the able and powerful leader of the immensely rich International Ladies Garment Workers. The history of the Lewis-Dubinsky relationship has been one of violent rows and amiable reconciliations. A period of reconciliation is now in progress. The men are close on many matters, especially in that they are two of the most effective anti-Communists in the labor movement. Like Lewis himself, Dubinsky has many admirers in the CIO, and his backing for Lewis will heavily weight the scales.

Third, there is Philip Murray. The CIO president is the big question mark. For years Murray and Lewis worked closely together, when Murray was second in command of the mine workers. But much bitter water has flowed under the bridge since those days. Many in the labor movement are certain that Murray could never bear to serve again as a subordinate to Lewis, or to see his beloved CIO merged with the larger AFL. Yet there are others who disagree.

Murray is harried and tired. The atmosphere of Borgian intrigue which prevails at CIO headquarters, brought on by the constant Communist pressure, is said to exhaust him. Moreover, the Communist-engineered attempt to capture the automobile workers, biggest CIO union, has by no means been squashed. If it succeeds, Murray will be in a fair way of finding himself prisoner of the Communists in his own organization. It is probable that only the AFL and John L. Lewis could free him from this bondage.

Thus it is significant that at a recent closed meeting of the CIO's executive board Murray is reported to have made an important about turn. Some weeks before Murray had said that it was too late in the day for merger with the AFL, which would only serve to spread confusion in the CIO ranks. On this more recent occasion, however, he reversed himself. He called for unity at almost any price. One price is evident—Murray's agreement to become second in command to John L. Lewis.

The fourth important factor is the Communists. Like their bitterest enemy, David Dubinsky, the Communists are working for "unity." At first glance this seems passing strange. For they would appear to be fighting for the privilege of placing their heads in the lion's mouth—with the upper jaw David Dubinsky and the lower John L. Lewis. There is no doubt that if Lewis took first place in a combined organization he would move far more decisively and ruthlessly than Murray has ever moved to root out the Communists.

Following the Line

VARIOUS explanations have been offered of the Communists' position—the desire to hide behind the skirts of a massive united organization in the difficult days ahead; the welcome opportunity to bring pressure on the whole labor movement which a merger would offer them.

Perhaps the simplest explanation is that, as always, they have been listening to their master's voice. The Moscow line is clear. A recent Soviet English-language broadcast to North America, for example, announced that "United States workers are coming to realize ever more clearly the need for unity in their ranks."

All this adds up to a real possibility of an AFL-CIO marriage. There are enormous obstacles to such a union. Entrenched interests would be seriously threatened, and labor politicians are as zealous in protecting their empires as any other kind of politician. Yet it is not impossible that a curious by-product of the new labor measure may be a unified labor movement, 13 million strong, led by the massive, power-loving John L. Lewis.

That 28 Million Windfall Helped

Sickness Insurance Paying Way

PROVIDENCE, July 5 (AP).—Rhode Island's cash sickness compensation fund, the first State-operated health insurance program in the country, is in the black as it enters its fifth year.

The General Assembly has just declared its faith in the program by approving transfer to the fund of 28 million dollars built up in the State's unemployment compensation fund from employe contributions since 1937.

When Rhode Island legislators enacted the cash sickness law in April, 1942, they were pioneering in a field scarcely entered except by social planning reports such as the Beveridge cradle-to-grave plan in England.

Actually, the sickness fund does not provide for preventive medical care and applies only to workers. Housewives and children, for example, do not receive benefits.

Each claimant must see a doctor within five days after the onset of illness and at least once a week thereafter until ready to go back to work. No examinations are required for eligibility, but a physician's statement must accompany every application for benefits.

$18 Weekly Maximum

FOR the State's 350,000 workers—all who earn at least $100 in a year—the fund provides cash benefits for a maximum of 20 weeks—15 weeks in maternity cases. The sum varies, depending on earnings, from $6.75 to $18 weekly.

At first the payments were limited to those whose earnings did not continue during illness. Later, the General Assembly loosened the statute to make any worker eligible—ditch diggers or bank executives.

Last year the Assembly tightened this somewhat with the provision that the total of sickness benefits and unemployment compensation shall not exceed 90 per cent of a worker's normal earnings.

Benefits are based on credits built up during the calendar year preceding the claimant's illness. The weekly amount depends on the worker's highest quarterly wage in the previous fiscal year. Duration of payments depends on the length of illness and the total amount of wages earned during the previous year.

Workers contribute a percentage of all earnings up to $3000 annually. When the bill was passed, workers were paying 1½ per cent of earnings to the unemployment compensation fund. The cash sickness fund was started painlessly by shifting 1 per cent to it and leaving ½ per cent for unemployment compensation.

1 Per Cent Inadequate

IN the year between passage of the bill and initial payments in April, 1943, a substantial reserve was created. The Unemployment Compensation Board, which administers the fund, had to dip into this reserve when it was found that 1 per cent employe contributions did not equal disbursements. Consequently, the fund was operating in the red soon after disbursements began.

Payments from the cash sickness fund totaled $5,034,675 in 1944, $4,668,796 in 1945 and $4,606,211 in 1946.

The Assembly in 1945 transferred the other ½ per cent from unemployment compensation. As a result, the fund ended the year 1946 with an income surplus of $179,594 over disbursements.

That 28-million-dollar plum from the unemployment compensation fund was authorized last year by Congress. Congressional approval was needed since unemployment compensation contributions are collected by the Federal Government and held in Washington, subject to requisitions by the States. (Rhode Island and California are the only two States which collected contributions from employes as well as employers, and these States were authorized to withdraw money contributed by employes for use in State health insurance funds.)

Transfer of the 28 million dollars and earmarking of employe contributions was possible because the unemployment compensation fund, as in other States, has a big surplus. The unemployment compensation fund still has employer contributions.

The cash sickness reserve is big enough now so that the Assembly has cut employe contributions from 1½ to 1 per cent.

China's Decade of Darkness

Marco Polo 'Incident' 10 Years Ago Dropped A Pall Not Yet Lifted

A Chinese soldier guards the barricaded end of the Marco Polo Bridge near Peiping shortly after the incident of July 7, 1937

By James D. White

Associated Press Foreign News Analyst

IT BEGAN in the dark ten years ago tomorrow.

Chinese and Japanese troops opened fire near the Marco Polo Bridge, near Peiping, and the fighting had begun which was not to end until a world war had been fought.

In 1931, Japan had made a preliminary move in the approaching battle of power by quickly marching into and occupying Manchuria. There followed a period of comparative quiet as Japan consolidated her gains and the League of Nations marked time, until the Marco Polo "incident" which in retrospect stands as the spark which set off the long warfare.

Elsewhere in the world, conspicuously in Spain where civil war broke out and in the tread of Mussolini's legions in Ethiopia, other forces of aggression were reaching the boiling point that was to erupt into World War II.

The Marco Polo "incident" was bound to happen, we know now. There was no stopping Japan in those days.

China was weak, but reviving. It was then or never for Japan.

The Japanese clanked in "to stamp out communism." It has worked out that the Chinese Communists owe much of their success to Japanese chicanery and expediency.

Chinese Guessed Right

ACTUALLY the Japanese were frustrated in economic conquest by popular boycotts and the coolness of the world to Japan's "divine mission."

The Chinese resisted for two big reasons. The Communists and the government had formed a united front against Japanese aggression, which meant that the people would risk war rather than further peace at the price Japan was asking. The other reason was the Chinese conviction, born out of centuries of experience with Japan's appetite, that the great Western powers sooner or later would become involved and come to China's aid, if only because of their extensive Asiatic interests which Japan sooner or later would try to get.

The accuracy of this Chinese calculation was proved later by the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the conquest of most Western holdings in Asia.

The Chinese fell back before the invader, confident in their new internal unity and the certainty of eventual help. They could not prevent the Japanese from swarming over the fertile coastal plain, the big ports and cities, the factories and railways, but they could drag out the war and make it costly for Japan.

By late 1938 the war reached a rough balance of stalemate. The Japanese settled down to milk the country they held. The Chinese dug in to wait a while longer for help.

Smarter Strategy

BY THIS TIME the Japanese realized the error they had made in driving the Chinese Communists and government into each other's arms.

They stopped trying to knock out China and began a crafty game of divide and rule. In this sense they won their war hands down, although they lost it elsewhere to the superior Western power they were foolish enough to bring down on their heads at Pearl Harbor.

In China they fought neither government nor Communist armies to a standstill except in isolated cases. They let them alone, to rub each other raw with unhealed suspicions dating from the big split in the Chinese revolutionary tide in 1927. Even before Pearl Harbor this formula was working well, when the Japanese had the satisfaction of seeing Chiang Kai-shek's armies liquidate a Communist force along the Yangtze River.

Nevertheless, the war dragged on at staggering cost to all Chinese, and many of them today firmly believe that China won her war almost singlehanded. Aside from the deliberate propagandizing this represents, it has the excuse that a people who lost an estimated three million military and six million civilian lives in the war must be expected to consider its own contribution to victory first.

A Fumbled Touchdown

ACTUALLY, the value of the Chinese part in victory cannot easily be overestimated. China not only held the only base visible at the time for the final assault on Japan; she prevented the war from being fought on purely Japanese terms—as a proclaimed war of liberation to free East Asia from the imperialism of the white man.

Perhaps only Japan's [illegible] greed and clumsiness prevented this powerful appeal from succeeding. Its dynamic attraction for millions of hungry, illiterate Orientals was clearly recognized by the United States and Britain in 1943 when they gave up their special rights in China—rights which Japan herself had shared and abused.

It was a long pull back for the Allies, against the vast strategic foothold Japan had gained in her 1942 conquests, but by the time the atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima, Allied sea and air power already had blasted most of Japan's war industry out of production and destroyed more than two million Japanese homes in the process. Japan had lost more than a million men in her futile struggle to rule Asia.

From the Chinese standpoint, the war ended too suddenly. Had it not been for American air transport, the Chinese army could not have got back to points near the coast to accept Japanese surrender in the field.

Communist Spoils

IN THE meantime, the Japanese-nurtured dissension between the Communists and the Chinese government put forth deadly blooms. In many cases the Communists beat the government to the punch and disarmed great forces of the Japanese army, notably in Manchuria where a green Soviet Far Eastern army found it easy to look the other way, being busy meanwhile at stripping the Japanese industrial machine it wanted for Siberia.

With Japanese arms, the Communists were less inclined than ever to listen to government orders. Civil war broke out like a rash. The Communists took over most of North China, as well as Manchuria, and the picture darkened enough to attract an American effort to fix things up.

Gen. George C. Marshall was sent to China. With his reputation for fairness and competence he quickly got both Chinese sides to agree to a truce and a plan for peaceful cooperation in a modern, democratic China.

But the Japanese and the unfinished revolution in China had left too bitter a legacy of poverty, unrest and suspicion. Both sides broke the truce and ignored the peace plans. After a year of futile pleading and patching, Marshall quit in disgust and came home to become Secretary of State and turn his attention to the same symptoms of Soviet-American rivalry in Europe that were behind the trouble in China.

Fear 'New' Japan

THIS big-power rivalry, born out of mutual fears for national security despite the alternative provided by the United Nations, has grown worse on the whole, not better. It is partly responsible for keeping Japan in the suspended animation of military occupation, waiting for the dawn of the new life the Japanese hope for, under a peace treaty still to be haggled out and signed by the victors.

More and more Chinese fear, meanwhile, that this rivalry in the long run will permit a resurgence of Japan's aggressive potential unless American and Russian differences are composed around the world.

China's civil war grinds on. Her currency is almost worthless, her transport wrecked, her feeble industries producing less and less.

The decade that began in the darkness ends tonight, but not the darkness.

Egypt's King Is Linguist, Sportsman, Archaeologist

Young Farouk Idol of 80 Million Arabs

By Max Boyd

CAIRO, July 5 (AP).—In the cafes of Morocco they talk about the refuge he granted Abd El Krim, the aging Riff warrior.

In the Arab villages of Palestine, they are grateful for his sanctuary to Haj Amin El Husseiny, the exiled Mufti of Jerusalem.

In Saudi Arabia they remember his visit to King Ibn Saud, who welcomed him as a son.

In Lebanon his name recalls encouragement to a president under French arrest.

In all the Arab states he is known for bringing together their kings, princes and presidents, some for the first time since their fathers fought one another.

Wide World Photos

Enthroned at 16

KING FAROUK I of Egypt, whose reputation has spread in this manner among 80 million Arabic-speaking people of the Middle East and northwest Africa, is a robust ruler only 27 years old.

Farouk has been a King since the age of 16, when he came home from school in England at the death of his father, King Fouad.

Farouk is a sportsman who likes to shoot, fence and swim. He is a crack shot who starts out at 5:30 in the morning when hunting is on the program.

The King speaks five languages—Arabic, English, French, Turkish and Italian—plus American idioms.

He is keenly interested in archeological discoveries throwing new light on the highly-developed civilization of Egypt thousands of years ago. He is a frequent visitor at the home of Dr. Etienne Drioton, the French director of the Egyptian Antiquities Department.

The young monarch owns a vast estate reclaimed from the desert at Inchass, to which he invites other landowners to see his farming methods and the schools and medical facilities provided for the peasants.

He has a workshop in Abdine Palace, testing the idea of small industries for Egypt.

He likes automobile races and air shows, is interested in flying and automobile mechanics, collects old weapons and historic documents, and spends a good deal of time with his army. He is famous among Egyptians for his sense of humor.

Cousin Is Heir

IN 1938, a few weeks before he was 18, the monarch married Farida Zolfukar, daughter of a judge of Egypt's mixed courts. She was a friend of his beautiful sisters, Princess Fawzia, Empress of Iran, and Princess Faiza. Three daughters have been born of the marriage, Princesses Ferial, Fawzia and Fadia.

The heir presumptive is Prince Mohamed Aly, elderly cousin of the King, who was one of three regents during the first year of Farouk's reign.

On his birthday in 1942, the King visited the Aswan and Luxor districts of upper Egypt, where a malaria epidemic was raging. He gave about $40,000 to assist the stricken and, returning to Cairo, called in the ministers concerned to give them instructions.

It was during the same year that the King took the first of the steps that have led to his name being linked with Arab independence movements beyond the borders of Egypt. When French authorities arrested the president of what was then French-mandated Lebanon, he sent a message to the imprisoned official expressing sympathy and predicting liberation. Arab nationalists in Lebanon distributed thousands of copies of his telegram. Within a short time the Lebanon president was released.

Farouk I's next step was as conciliator among representatives of the Arab states who gathered in Cairo to establish the Arab League of seven Middle East states—Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Lebanon, Syria, Trans Jordan, Iraq and the Yemen.

Slick Salesman

TO WIN King Ibn Saud as an enthusiastic partner in the league, King Farouk paid a visit to Saudi Arabia in 1945. In the royal yacht, unaccompanied by governmental ministers, he sailed to the port of Yenbo on the Red Sea. There the Egyptian monarch, then 25, was greeted warmly by Ibn Saud, who was past 65.

One of the men who was with Farouk on this visit recalls that on the second day Ibn Saud said for publication:

"You may say that from today the Arab League has become a reality. What King Farouk will accept I will accept. What he will refuse I will refuse."

King Ibn Saud, one of the most powerful figures in the Arab world, was genuinely pleased by this visit from the young King of Egypt, the most modernized of the Arab states.

A year later Ibn Saud returned the visit, leaving his desert kingdom to see the cosmopolitan cities of Cairo and Alexandria, the pyramids and Farouk's estate at Inchass. He liked particularly the railroads of Egypt (Arabia's sole line had been torn up to keep supplies and reinforcements from reaching Turkish garrisons during World War I). After his return to Saudi Arabia he laid plans for the construction of a railway from the Persian Gulf to his capital at Riyadh.

Enemies Reconciled

INCHASS WAS the scene, in May, 1946, of an informal meeting of Arab kings, princes and presidents. King Farouk called this meeting to discuss the Palestine question and other problems, and to promote friendship among the top men of the Arab states.

The meeting brought together members of the Hashemite and Saud families for the first time since Ibn Saud wrested the Hejaz district of Arabia from Sherif Hussein of the Ashemites.

Emir Saud, the Crown Prince of Saudi Arabia, went to the airport to meet King Abdullah of Trans Jordan, son of Hussein, and Emir Abdul Illah of Iraq, his grandson. The second day of the gathering saw Emir Saud and King Abdullah making their Moslem devotions together.

A short time after the Inchass meeting Farouk received the praise of many Arabs for granting sanctuary to the exiled Mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amin El Husseiny. The Mufti, sought by the British as the leader of Arab fighting against the Jews in Palestine in 1936, had fled to the sanctuary of a Jerusalem mosque, thence to Syria and Iraq and finally to Germany. After the war he was exiled in France but escaped and flew to Cairo.

Moslem to Moslem

TWO ADDITIONAL developments affecting King Farouk's popularity among the Arabs occurred in the last days of May this year.

The first was French refusal to permit an Egyptian naval vessel to discharge a shipment of food sent to Tunis by the Red Crescent.

The second was the arrival of Abd El Krim in Egypt. The 67-year-old Riff leader, who fought France and Spain in Morocco from 1921 to 1926, was en route from exile on Reunion Island to France, where the French said he had agreed to stay.

At Port Said, however, he left the ship, announcing he had decided to live in Egypt. Farouk, granting sanctuary, invited him to spend several days at Inchass.

A close associate says the King told the old Riff warrior, "I never do things for political or personal objectives. I did it for God's sake and because I'm convinced it's the duty of Arab toward Arab and Moslem toward Moslem."

In recent years the King has granted refuge to a number of exiled European monarchs. Among these is aged Victor Emanuel III of Italy, whose country sheltered Farouk I's father in exile years ago. Another is deposed King Zog of Albania, the birthplace of Mohamed Ali the Great, who founded the present Egyptian dynasty. A third is 10-year-old Simeon II of Bulgaria, grandson of Victor Emanuel.

The refuge recently granted Abd El Krim created a storm in the Paris press, which criticized French officials for their handling of the transfer.

In Egypt, the Arabic language papers praised King Farouk's action almost universally. One paper, discussing the question whether sanctuary for Abd El Krim might affect France's attitude when Egyptian complaints against Britain reach the U. N., said Egypt did not expect French support anyway.

Deeply Imbedded in Charter

Zealand Still Hopeful For U. N. If Big Five Drop Shackling Veto

By Sir Carl Berendsen

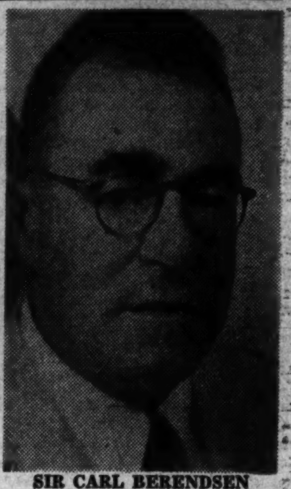
Chief New Zealand Delegate to the United Nations

(Written expressly for International News Special Service. Copyright 1947 by INS. All rights reserved.)

NEW YORK, July 5.—The fundamental problem that man must solve or perish, the one vital problem upon which depends the solution of every other problem that perplexes the mind of man, is how to preserve and enforce the peace of the world.

There are millions of people, many of them among the most noble of mankind, who believe that peace can be preserved by words and sweet reason alone.



SIR CARL BERENDSEN

. . . Sweet reason isn't enough

Even if one can admire the high principle of these people, one must at once reject their judgment.

Twice in our lifetime, the world has had to face an attack from aggressive peoples.

Surely no sensible person in the world today will deny that there is only one way in which the right-thinking peoples of the world can establish a permanently effective system of collective security.

That is by ensuring that lawless force will always be met and defeated by lawful force in whatever circumstances, and with whatever apparent justification, one group of peoples attempts or threatens to apply force against another group of peoples.

Indeed, that is exactly the basis upon which the United Nations was founded. The authors of the Charter were not among those who believe that peace can be preserved by words alone.

They explicitly recognized that force—lawful force—is as necessary to preserve law and order and justice in the international field as it has been proved to be necessary in every civilized nation. But they failed to carry that principle to its logical conclusion—because of the veto.

Empty Alternative

THE veto is the name commonly applied to that provision of the United Nations Charter which, in prescribing the voting procedure of the Security Council, specifies that the Council can make no decision whatever (except on matters of procedure) without the concurring votes of each of the following five powers:

The United States, the Soviet Union, the United Kingdom, China and France.

This principle was insisted upon at San Francisco by the five great powers. It was accepted because the United Nations, even with this grave defect, is, to any reasonable mind, infinitely better than the alternative which was, of course, no international organization at all.

What is the effect of the veto?

Each of the five big powers (and no others) reserves to itself the right in every case to decide not only whether it will take part in any United Nations security activity but whether the organization itself can act at all.

What does this mean? It means that the United Nations as it exists at present cannot take enforcement action—or indeed any other action of importance—if any one of the great powers dissents, even if all the other 54 members desire it.

It means that no action can be taken against any one of the five great powers—because of the veto.

It means that no action can be taken against a small power if that small power is supported by one of the great powers—because of the veto.

Obviously it can be taken only against a small power which is not supported by a great power. But surely that contingency presents no real danger to the world.

Surely the peace of the world can never be endangered when the five great powers are in unanimous agreement—and it is only when they are in unanimous agreement that the United Nations can act at all. That is the effect of the veto.

Double-Riveted Proviso

ONE can understand, of course, the reluctance of a great power to bind itself to accept any decision but its own, but that is the hurdle that must be taken before any permanently effective system of collective security can be established.

No power, great or small, can have its cake and eat it, too. No power, great or small, can permanently reserve to itself the right to take its own course independently of the conscience of the world.

There is no alternative: If we are to have real collective security, if we are to banish war from the world—and I am one of those who believe world peace is indeed within man's grasp if man will but grasp and not fiddle—each member of our international society, great or small, must not only claim the right to be protected against attack, but accept the duty of protecting others against attack.

While the veto exists there can be no effective system of collective security.

Is it possible, then, to eliminate the veto? No—not at present.

By a provision which was bitterly contested in San Francisco, but insisted upon by the great powers, there can be no amendment of the Charter of the United Nations—and correspondingly no amendment of the veto provision—except with the unanimous concurrence of the five great powers themselves.

In other words, there is a veto on the elimination of the veto.

Assembly Invaluable

WHAT, then, can right-thinking men and women throughout the world do about it?

They must recognize that, with all its wonderful potentialities, the United Nations, while the veto principle exists, does not yet provide an effective system of collective security against war.

And they must realize that there is much yet to be done before the battle for peace has been won. But there is no need for despair or defeatism.

There is much that is encouraging and inspiring in the United Nations. Every sensible person must agree that there are enormous advantages in the provision of a common meeting place for all nations to discuss the problems of the world.

Every sensible person will agree that the General Assembly of the United Nations—the "town meeting of the world"—offers a means of informing public opinion, of ventilating grievances, of denouncing abuses, of exchanging ideas and aspirations, of the utmost value to mankind.

And every sensible person will agree that the Economic and Social Council and many other organs of the United Nations afford an invaluable means of positive international cooperation, of rectifying economic injustices, and of safeguarding human rights of all men in all lands.

If the nations of the world approach the world's problems in the future with the full determination to do the right as they see it and to resist the wrong as they see it, this problem of world peace can in time be solved—and solved through the United Nations.

Patience and determination, and a strict adherence in every case to principle rather than to apparent expediency, are essential.

Some less stultifying means must and can be found of according to the great powers, the place and the authority that is rightfully theirs. But in some way, at some time, it is essential that the veto be eliminated from the Charter.

Paraguayans Believed to Be Stalling

By Mac R. Johnson

BUENOS AIRES, July 5.—The Paraguayan government has sufficient military power to crush the rebels, but is deliberately stalling, this reporter believes after one month in Paraguay.

Paraguayans do not want to kill fellow Paraguayans; particularly, many loyal army officers do not want to shoot their former buddies who now carry arms for the rebels.

Military casualties on both sides are estimated at fewer than 1000 in nearly four months of civil war.

The rebels, who have had several opportunities to resist advancing government forces, have retreated "for strategic reasons." Except for their successful raid on Tacuati two weeks ago, in which they took many prisoners, the rebels can point to no victories.

A study of the government's military campaign indicates it is avoiding a showdown battle for Concepcion, the rebel capital. Instead, the army has attempted through bloodless maneuver to place the rebels in a hopeless position which would force them to sue for peace.

The loyal forces have been camping on the Ypane River for four weeks without moving. They have the manpower, firepower, food and military supplies to establish bridgeheads, but they are just sitting there.

The government apparently hopes to win the war by maneuver and mediation, and will hold up its all-out offensive until the last minute.

President Higinio Morinigo is willing to grant amnesty to the rebels. He reportedly would kick them out of the army but would let them remain in Paraguay as private citizens, without prosecution for treason or subsequent persecution.

Bob Taft's Building Up a Dynasty

he shrugged. "Or just fish."

* * * *

The Green Bey Tree

SENATE Boss Robert A. Taft, recently went personally to the relief of a hungry family in Poland, with amazing genealogical results.

It all started when a genealogist in Poland wrote Taft to send him something to eat. He mentioned that he had long been interested in the Taft family and had traced its antecedents all the way back to Persia.

In fact, he told the Senator, Taft-Bey was a prominent name in Persia to this day.

Bob and Martha Taft immediately bundled up two big packages of staple foodstuffs, shipped them off and hoped they would reach the family. Their prayers were answered when they received another letter from the enterprising genealogist gratefully acknowledging the gift.

He replied that he would like to send something in return. But since no food was available, about the only thing he could send was champagne.

The champagne would be on its way, except for one obstacle. Export restrictions forbade sending out of the country anything weighing more than 1 pound. A bottle of champagne weighed 5 pounds. There was no way to deliver.

Meanwhile, he had continued his researches. Not only were there Taft-Beys in Persia, but at one time they were rulers of small Persian towns.

Friends are betting there's a Taft-Bey Shah of Persia somewhere in the background if those food boxes hold out.

Telepathic Tally

CAN AN absentee member, miles from Washington, actually cast his vote in the House? Yup, it can happen.

No one ever knows how or why. But it isn't possible to identify every voice that pipes "Aye" or "No." More often it's just a mistake.

Last week, for example, Representative James H. Morrison (D., La.) was duly recorded as voting "Aye" on the Hawaii statehood bill. At the time, Morrison was 1200 miles away in New Orleans.

More depends on many a vote slip than you'd imagine. Even this one started a rumpus.

Morrison is running for Governor of Louisiana. Earl Long, brother of the late "Kingfish," is running against him. The number of times Morrison answers roll calls is one of the issues.

Long's campaign manager is Representative Otto E. Passman (D., La.).

Passman popped up in the House the next day to correct the record.

"The gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Morrison) was absent," he said.

* * * *

Long Count

ONE of the modernizing reforms that failed to get into the reorganization bill would have averted that and many another vote slip.

Representative Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), unsuccessfully urged an electric tally system in both House and Senate. Members would vote by turning a key. Each member would be held accountable for his key. The results would be flashed on an electric panel.

Kefauver urged the device as a timesaver, but stressed the accuracy factor as well. It takes 30 minutes to run through each House roll call. Electric voting is instantaneous.

Ironically, Louisiana was one of the first States to use the electric tally in its Legislature. Huey Long ordered an extension panel wired into his Governor's office. He used that one to check on the Long votes.

Altar Vows, Baby's First Words Waxed

NEW YORK (AP).—A new firm called "Keepsake Recordings" has been formed by three former GIs who are convinced there is money to be made from such materials as electronics and sentiment.

They make recordings of weddings, anniversary parties, baby's first words and other special events people might like to remember in wax. Right now the boys mostly concentrate on weddings and they report business is fine.

They started by buying a tape recorder, some microphones and cables, all of which equipment one man can easily carry and thus not be so conspicuous as to make the bride or groom more self-conscious than usual.

Music as well as the spoken words are blended in. The use of tape permits 30 to 40 minutes of continuous recording and also editing. A spoken introduction is added to the ceremony and then the whole thing is put on records and wrapped up in an album labeled, "I Do."

The three partners are Dan Shaw, Nathan Zelikow and Milton E. [illegible]. All three are bachelors.

"We Were Utterly Fooled"

'Dark December' Fine Study of Bulge Battle

By Lewis Gannett

THE FIRST comprehensive and genuinely objective account of the Battle of the Bulge that I have ever read—and I have read all I could find—is Robert E. Merriam's "Dark December" (Ziff Davis, $3).

Merriam, son of the University of Chicago's Charles E. Merriam was a member of the Army's Historical Division, attached to the Seventh Armored Division, when the Bulge began; after the battle he was first a member, then chief, of the A. H. D.'s Ardennes section, which spent eight months analyzing the records of all the American units in the battle and, after the armistice, interviewing Keitel, Jodl, Runstedt, Dietrich, Skorzeny and other German commanders. Out of that task grew five formidable volumes now on file with the War Department

In 1946, as a civilian writing this book for civilians, he interviewed Generals Eisenhower, Bradley and Hodges. His book is calm, reflective, authoritative and without personal prejudice, which differentiates it from Ralph Ingersoll's "Top Secret," Harry Butcher's "My Three Years With Eisenhower," and Alan Moorehead's "Montgomery" as well as from the limited reports of correspondents on particular sectors of the front.

There is no doubt in Merriam's mind that "calculated risk" is a misleading phrase to apply to the American Army's blindness to the German preparations. He sifts all the "Intelligence" reports in detail and concludes: "We were completely, utterly fooled . . . We did suspect some sort of a German attack, but not in the Ardennes, and not in the strength with which it might have occurred." From top to bottom, we were overconfident. Merriam's evidence is overwhelming.

Operation Confusion

HE ALSO disposes of the myth common in our high command at the time, that this was a "professional," Rundstedt offensive. On the contrary, it was Hitler's plan, and Rundstedt opposed it. Sound Nazis were preferred to sound generals for the command posts. And the aim was to cross the Meuse River and take Antwerp, cutting off the vast American and British forces north of that route. Liege, contrary to common opinion on the American front at the time, was to have been by-passed; our misapprehension on that point cost us heavily.

What Merriam calls "Operation Confusion" — Skorzeny's program of psychological warfare—was "a howling success." The paratroop drop behind the First Army lines on December 16 failed—only 300 of the 1000 men dropped reached the assembly area, and they were forced to watch three American divisions roll down the road, oblivious of their presence, without force to stop them.

But the whole American area was filled with false paratrooper rumors, some of which have been repeated by uninformed historians. The story of a cloak-and-dagger attempt on Eisenhower in Paris was, Merriam believes, deliberately planted by Skorzeny and had no basis in fact; it achieved the desired disruptive effect. And 44 of Skorzeny's jeeps, occupied by Germans in American uniforms, got through our lines, and 36 of them returned with valuable reports. There were no paratroopers, however, along Patton's route, despite contemporary reports.

The Myth of Bastogne

THE GREAT popular myth regarding the Battle of the Bulge, of course, is the popular story that the whole campaign turned on the siege of Bastogne. That was the first success story passed by the censors and has become American folksay. But Bastogne was south of the main German drive, and the German commanders had been ordered to by-pass it if it could not be taken easily.

The first day's defense of the Eisenhower ridge by the Second Division blocked the crucial northernmost attack of the German troops. A series of local actions along the Ambleve River which cut off Peiper's First Panzer men in the Ambleve Valley was almost equally decisive.

Most of the German commanders believed that the Seventh Armored's denial of the crucial road junction of St. Vith in the first week made German victory impossible. Bastogne was heroic, but before Patton's men forced their way through the four infantry divisions of the German Seventh Army to effect its relief, the 60,000 Americans of Hodges' First Army had effectively rallied before the onslaught of four crack Panzer corps with 1200 tanks and 250,000 men.

Merriam believes that Eisenhower's decision to give Montgomery command of all troops north of the breakthrough after their wire communication with Bradley's headquarters had been cut, was justified. In the light of his studies much of the argument in Ralph Ingersoll's "Top Secret" appears like high-school debating. Merriam's book is not always easy reading, but it is satisfying in detail and wholly convincing to this reviewer who, as a correspondent, in the first week of the fighting was briefed by General Simpson at Ninth Army headquarters, the Second, First and 30th Divisions on the north flank, the 82d Airborne immediately after it was driven out of Werbomont and the battered Seventh Armored the morning after its amazing daylight withdrawal from St. Vith, and was left like everyone else, considerably mystified as to what was going on.

Commentary On Labor Act Excellent Job

The New Labor Law (Bureau of National Affairs, Inc., $4.50).

LIKE Joyce's Ulysses, the Taft-Hartley Act needs a commentary for its full appreciation. The staff of David Lawrence's Bureau of National Affairs has undertaken to provide such a commentary and have met with notable success. The product, a 300-page volume, comes as close to meeting the requirements as anything can at this time. Little more can be said this side of several months' or even years' experience with the new legislation, as administered by the National Labor Relations Board and as interpreted by the Supreme Court.

Until then, much of the law will remain enigmatic. Meantime, the new labor law presents, in convenient form, what the measure means on its face and in the light of its legislative history. For the union official, the businessman, the lawyer and even the would-be knowledgable member of the bewildered public, the volume provides the first essential—an elaborate indexing of the law, section by section and topic by topic. The law is of such complexity, with so many different sections bearing on a single labor relations subject, that without such an index the student is left floundering, uninformed or, what is worse and more probable, only half-informed.

Besides presenting all the pertinent documents—the act itself, the conference report, the Senate and House Labor Committee reports and Mr. Truman's veto message—the book gives pertinent Senate debate, divided in topic headings; a general analysis of the various elements in the law, and most important, a section by section analysis.

This latter, it may be noted, is not uncritical. Ambiguous sections of the act are so identified, along with some penetrating questions about them. There is also some keen speculation on the probable effects of the measure, in dozens of different applications.

Any Peter Cheyney tale can be counted on for excitement and thrills, along with the rough, tough characters that are essential to some whodunit fans. Secret agents are working in London, toward the end of the war, against some mighty clever and realistically drawn German operatives.

If you missed this one the first time out, you've really missed something.

MURDER HELPS. By Ines H. Oeelrichs. McKay. 247 pp. $2.

Matt Winters, amateur sleuth, has become a candy salesman traveling about the country. A tire blowout delays him at a combination tourist camp, bar and lunch counter, where he meets the Trader family. It's a combination of messes, too, with sisters in love with each other's husbands, the boss' nephew in love with the counter girl. There's a would-be composer, and his neurotic mother. No wonder the boss keeps muttering about killing them off, one by one. And naturally a couple of them are killed off.

It's a plot complicated enough to please any puzzle-solver's taste, with plenty of love and stuff as a side dish. And it will take a good guesser to get the answer before the last few pages.

A Filipino, Fabian, is a hero of this unusual tale which, but for him, might not have had a happy ending.

A Valuable Weapon Against Communism

Sartre's 'Religion' of Human Dignity

By Sterling North

EXISTENTIALISM. By Jean-Paul Sartre. Philosophical Library. 92 pp. $2.75.

AMERICAN intellectuals, basing their assumptions on mere gossip, have been chattering aimlessly about "Existentialism" ever since it was learned that a new cult by that name had swept postwar Europe.

JEAN-PAUL SARTRE

Until the publication of this book it was generally believed on this side of the Atlantic that the new philosophy (or religion) was born of despair, and stemmed from such previous perversions as Surrealism, Dadaism and other negations of common sense popular among the long-haired poseurs of the Rive Gauche.

Actually, "Existentialism" is almost the complete opposite of the self-gratifying, irresponsible, nihilistic nonsense which rotted France at the core and helped her to shameless defeat when the Germans took their pleasure tour to Paris.

Its central theme is the responsibility of the individual for his own acts. The tough-minded Existentialists are fed up with the spineless theory that "society" is responsible if you are a drunkard or a murderer or wife beater or a frustrated dilettante in the arts. (Bravo!)

Carrying this wholesome revival of personal responsibility to an untenable extreme, they deny the importance of heredity or environment as even a partial excuse for failure. With almost puritanical stoicism they tell the whiner to stop whining, get to work and make the best he can of his life.

Men are to be known entirely by their acts, never by mere "faith" or good intentions. Each man is completely responsible for the choices he makes. In fact, he is his choice just as he is his act. No crutch such as a beneficent Deity can be called upon to bolster perennial adolescents and escapists. They must stand up like men and take their medicine.

Existentialism has been accused of being logical atheism. Actually it does not deny the possibility of God, and the Catholic wing of the movement strongly asserts His existence. It merely removes His responsibility for human weakness.

But Existentialism is a really valuable weapon for fighting the Communists, since it strikes at the heart of dialectical materialism. The smarter Marxists know that in the rebirth of the individual lies the greatest danger to their "dictatorship of the proletariat," with its police terror, censorship, kept press and easy excuses for abridging democracy and the Bill of Rights.

Existentialism is a revival of the belief in human dignity and human worth. It flatly denies the subhuman, anti-intellectual doctrine that mankind and society are the mere byproducts of economic forces and the industrial system. The furious attacks leveled by French Marxists at the Existentialists show that they realize they have run up against a formidable opponent.

All this is excellent as a faith, difficult to defend as a philosophical system. In fact, although Jean-Paul Sartre is a professional philosopher, his logic is as full of holes as a sponge and is widely derivative.

Starting with the Cartesian a priori assumption: "I think, therefore, I am," it proceeds with considerable logic toward an ethic lifted without acknowledgement from Kant's Categorical Imperative. Kant's lofty demand that we act in such a manner that our conduct could be used as a blueprint for universal law is difficult enough for any but saints and philosophers to practice. But at least Kant offered a system of values whereby we might judge our own acts.

Sartre denies that any "values" exist outside the individual. In other words we must not only follow Kant's Godlike self-discipline; we must do so without any points of reference outside our own brain.

Anna Pavlova in her dressing room in the Theatre des Champs-Elysees. This photograph is an illustration in the new book edited by Paul Magriel

Luckily for the Existentialists, no such isolated ethical thinking actually occurs in real life. Even Jean-Paul Sartre, who completely denies the importance of environment, is literally soaked in the ideas of Descartes, Kierkegaarde, Leibnitz, Spartacus, Voltaire, Zola, Diderot, Hegel, Heidegger, Compte, Proust, Gide, Cocteau and several hundred other writers whose influence upon him will be immediately apparent to literate readers.

Actually of course, Sartre, like all of us, is living proof that intellectual and spiritual environment help to shape every word we utter. His denial of the past is dialectic legerdemain which cannot be taken seriously, since culture is a continuum linking us to our remotest forebears.

But within his intellectual and scholarly limitations this Frenchman has offered modern man a real challenge. Around his central thesis will be fought the battle of the world.

PAVLOVA. Edited by Paul Magriel. Holt. 78 pp. $3.50.

THIS little book proves once again that the only way to capture the essence of Pavlova was to see her dance.

The best prose that has been written about her, the almost inarticulate attempts of her most articulate admirers to convey the nature of their responses, even her photographs, portraits and films, give no indication of her power to hold an audience with the slightest movement and to bring down the house with frenzied applause.

She wasn't fat and almost ugly, as was Isadora Duncan in her later years; she was slim with an exquisite body, a humorous, sweet, almost pixyish face, a generous heart, and a dedication to her art which all but precluded romance from her life. We know that she entered the Imperial Ballet School in St. Petersburg in 1892 at the age of 10; that she became the greatest ballerina of her time; that she danced with Nijinsky, Mordkin, Volinine, Novikoff and other immortals on tours that brought the world to her feet; and that 16 years ago in The Hague her swirling grace was stilled forever.

Yet nothing that can be said about her; no recounting of her life and triumphs, no critical study of her technique can more than hint at the sense of pure emotion and form (unhampered by the laws of gravity) which made her hypnotized audiences leave the theater walking on air.

This slender volume wisely devotes more space to pictures than to prose. Harriet Monroe, a great editor and a very minor poet, is here represented by 11 lines of verse on Pavlova. Several of Carl Van Vechten's reviews which appeared early in the century express the enthusiasm of New York for the dancer's appearances in the years preceding the First World War. Marianne Moore, a very distinguished poet indeed, writes notes on Pavlova's photographs, and Muriel Stuart, once a student of Pavlova, offers a brief tribute.

More important, because the dancer herself wrote it, is the autobiographical sketch of her life by Pavlova which has the charming naivete of a fairy tale.

One feels on closing this book that the curtain has come down, the theater is dark and empty, it is time to go home. But somewhere, perhaps, Pavlova dances.

THERE AND THEN: Stories of India. By Christine Weston. Scribner's. 176 pp. $2.50.

HOW fortunate for a writer—be he Kipling or Christine Weston—to have spent impressionable years in India.

Literary ambassador from a fabulous world of vivid contrasts; beneficiary with a limitless drawing account upon an ancient and patterned civilization—the writer can continue to "exploit" the teeming subcontinent long after English politicians, bankers and industrialists have been forced to withdraw.

Christine Weston's paternal ancestors were French indigo planters. But the finest crop the family ever raised was Christine's novel "Indigo"—a distinguished best-seller some years back. Her mother was the child of an English army officer, and her father in 1900 was an official in the British Indian police. Yet Mrs. Weston's disciplined prose has brought more order out of chaos than did imperial rifles or Bengal lancers.

These 15 short stories and sketches represent some of the most sensitive writing the author has done. They seem to be based almost entirely upon her personal experiences integrated with Indian folklore.

Each of these not-so-plain tales from the hills has a special, oblique significance, from the Yearling-like story of Alexander, the pet antelope who fell in love with Aunt Eva, to the bloody double tragedy of beautiful Raziya, who married a faithless husband. Seen first through the eyes of a child, the most sophisticated of these stories retains a pristine innocence.

Many of the adventures are shared with one or another of the author's brothers. Thus together these children discovered the deserted mansion and the tomb of the girl who had once been its young mistress; together they witnessed the narrow escape of the Indian boy and his clay horse from beneath the wheels of the onrushing locomotive.

Life with Father—Indian style—ranges from the lyrical nocturnal adventure of capturing and then releasing the rarest and largest of the Indian moths, to the slaughter of the bear on the evening Bulgaria dropped out of World War I. Not even Father Day could be more irrascible than Mrs. Weston's father playing the game Halma with Vasi and the Nawab Sahib.

Those stories derived from the local folklore have a special quality of believable fantasy about them—even such tall tales as "The Emerald Dove," in which a girl turns into a boy; or "Roshan," who might have been carried away by his kite but actually was carried away by a beautiful woman; or "The Ball," in which the backward student Todar confuses the celestial spheres with an old tennis ball which actually glows in his hand.

And there is a sense of finality and timeless withdrawal from the world in "River Scene," a small drama played out between a sannyasi or holy man and the gentle murderer who believes himself to be a lapwing chased by men with nets.

The emphasis is not so much on the filth and hunger of an overcrowded and underfed land as upon the substitutions a spiritual people have made for the material comforts demanded by all Westerners. And since all true drama happens within the heart and mind of man, the writer who has lived in India is closer to the original sources of literature than those of us who have been nurtured on materialism.

TWO dauntless American women, Fannie Hurst and Ruth Bryan Rohde, are on their way to Moscow. They have no fear of the Politburo, the bad plumbing or the rising skepticism toward tourists from the Land of the Truman Doctrine. But they almost turned in their passports when informed the other evening of the extra weight Oriana Atkinson added to her ample figure "Over at Uncle Joe's."

We were all having dinner at the apartment of Willy Pogany, the artist and illustrator. Conversation covered art, literature, chess, Hungarian food, dogs and the chances of avoiding an atomic war. Most revealing bit of discussion concerned a generally ignored news story which said that scores of Soviet scientists had finally come to the conclusion that several large craters recently discovered on Russian soil were made by a wandering asteroid.

It was the most prophetic story of the week. Why did the great body of scientists madly investigate the explosion Why the obviously relieved report on their conclusions?

What must have happened was something like this. The gigantic blast was heard, seen and reported. The Russians probably thought the atomic war had started and sent scientists scurrying to the scene. If the Russians had been ready with long range projectiles and atomic bombs, this celestial accident might have touched off pushbutton planetary suicide.

Nobody has to "start" the next war. In the present state of jitters, if such a planetoid were to strike New York or Moscow we would probably be at war inside of ten minutes, and some hundred million citizens of the two nations would answer for an astronomical indiscretion. The psychopathic human race has come to the point where it is ready to fight at the drop of a meteor.

Monica Dickens, granddaughter of a really good novelist, will publish her sixth book, "The Happy Prisoner" (Lippincott), late this month . . . Dr. Margaret Mead, author of "Male and Female" (Morrow), will teach in Salzburg this summer at the Harvard Seminar on American Civilization; I fear, however, that the only American civilization Europe is interested in at the moment is a gift of about 25 billion dollars.

The one living author on the Hutchins-Adler Great Books list is R. H. Tawney, author of "The Acquisitive Society," to be reissued by Harcourt Brace in a sixteenth American printing. Several years ago this columnist asked a number of world-famous men to name one book which had changed their lives or at least deeply affected their thinking. Dr. Mutchins unhesitatingly named the Tawney classic.

Life With the Editors

EDWARD C. ASWELL has left Harper's to become editor-in-chief of Whittlesey House . . . One of his most difficult and rewarding jobs with the firm he just left was to edit the yard-high, million-word, chaotic manuscript left by the late Thomas Wolfe. The pages were not numbered, nor were they in consecutive order. Wolfe had written the massive manuscript over ten years and from time to time had changed the names of characters without bothering to indicate who was who . . . Personally I would have left the whole thing in a vault for bewildered posterity. But not Mr. Aswell; he grimly went to work and after several months had straightened out the mess and made it ready for publication.

John Fischer, youthful author of "Why They Behave Like Russians," has taken over Aswell's old job as editor-in-chief of the trade book department of Harpers . . . Harold S. Latham of the Macmillan Co., who discovered "Gone With the Wind" and countless other best sellers, is in England on a five-week trip hunting manuscripts. It is his eleventh crossing for such purposes but his first since 1939, when he brought back "How Green Was My Valley."

The Magazine Rack

THE Saturday Evening Post takes a look at Francisco Franco's Spain. Irving Wallace's article, "Will Spanish Towns Live Again?" tells of life in a village of 2000 only 45 miles from Madrid. This "typical" village has "no paved streets, no sidewalks, no restaurants, no movies, no automobiles. Its homes have no porches, no numbers, no mailboxes, no glass windows, no refrigerators, no kitchen sinks, no toilets, no Communists." Lack of Communists is not unusual, says the author, who estimates that Communists do not exceed from 2 to 8 per cent of the population.

The Franco government is viewed as thoroughly unpopular, and its collapse possible in view of the growing and unified opposition, composed of anarchists, socialists, republicans and monarchists. Clever Franco propaganda is credited with obscuring this fact so that "the general American public thinks that the only alternative to his fascism is communism."

Other Post items: If you dropped by the wayside at the beginning of Admiral Halsey's slow-starting Memoirs, this is a good week for another try. This installment moves with interest from Pearl Harbor until just prior to the battle of Midway . . . In less than a thousand words, Richard L. Neuberger gives a fascinating and practical account of how you can drive to Alaska over the Alcan Highway this summer . . . Wesley W. Stout's "Tulsa" is the thirty-fourth in series on American cities.

JAMES A. FARLEY'S unhappy recollections about FDR continue in Colliers. The current piece is mainly concerned with "the elaborate political maneuvering which led to the President's third term." While Farley presumably views this series as helping historians in evaluating his former chief, he also throws some historically significant light on himself. Witness the following suggestion about war production which he says he made to Roosevelt in 1939: "If you set up any organization to control the activities of Government and business, I could head it up and do a better job than anyone else."

Mademoiselle has some common sense talk about divorce in "Who Gets the Child?" Becky Reyher, the author, has rounded up opinions from lawyers, social workers and psychiatrists about the best methods for lessening the pain of the "displaced persons right here in our own country: The children involved in the half-million divorces secured annually."

IF YOU can take it in the summer heat, you will find the usual batch of enlightenment in the Atlantic—Fiorello LaGuardia, Eric Johnston, Archibald MacLeish, William L. Shirer, et al.

But our choice in July's moist warmth is John E. Hutton's "When Salmon Sulk." Hutton, it appears, has had over 50 years' experience fishing practically everywhere except with Admiral Byrd in Little America. And in his six pages he does everything but eat the salmon for you. Advice is given on lakes, on low-water river pools (quiet and breezy), on dry and wet flies, on use of the shrimp or the prawn or the worm, and on such other matters as the relative merits of the gaff and the net. If that sounds complicated, you've heard nothing yet. Take the question of when to strike a salmon if you are using worms. It depends. If using a single worm, you wait till the salmon "knocks" twice, like the postman. "On the other hand, when fishing multiple worms, it is imperative to act in a different manner." Our advice is to get out on the back porch with the magazine and a tom collins on any hot afternoon and work this multiple worm business out yourself.

WASHINGTON authors are predominant in this month's America, Representative Clifford R. Hope of Kansas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, heads straight into controversy with "What About Food Prices?" The Congressman says it used to cost an average family of three $340 yearly for food before the war and that it now costs $630. According to his crystal ball: I see no radical drops ahead in food prices."

Further up Pennsylvania ave., J. Edgar Hoover has written a powerful article deserving wide attention, "How Safe is Your Daughter?" Violent sex offenses are increasing, although most types of crime are on the decline. There were over 12,000 reported cases of criminal assault and rape last year. Hoover says the situation is worse than it appears, since many crimes are unreported because rape victims fear the embarrassment of publicity. This, the FBI director views as most serious, since he thinks an aroused public opinion is needed to bring about better methods of detection and handling of sex criminals. Without publicity, of course, public opinion will be unaware of this serious danger to our youngsters. Hoover's expert testimony confirms the harmfulness of the lapses in local crime reporting, which The Washington Post brought to light last week.

This Morning

To Whom It May Concern:

BOSTON, JULY 5.—AFTER Lew Worsham won the U. S. Open, the sports goods manufacturing firm whose equipment he indorses tore up the contract paying him $250 per month, and replaced it with a pact more commensurable with Worsham's new fame . . . The new agreement calls for the company to match all of Worsham's golf winnings on the tournament circuit during the next year, plus a royalty on the new-model clubs that bear his name . . . Worsham also is paid $20,000 a year by the Oakmont Club, which has given him a year's leave of absence to play tournaments and exhibitions. . . . Alarmed at the indifference of players toward the All-Star game in Chicago, Players Committee Chairman Johnny Murphy has telegraphed each team chairman to remind the players that all gate receipts go into the players' pension fund, and that the game is to be taken seriously. . . In past years, players have begged off, magnifying slight injuries, to get the three-day vacation given nonselected players. . . Under a profit-sharing plan devised by President William Cox of the Brooklyn Football Dodgers, any Brooklyn player who invests $200 a year for five years, stands to get a return of $1741 if the club averages a yearly profit of $20,000.

POVICH

BOTH American League President Will Harridge and Baseball Commissioner Chandler rebuked Larry MacPhail for offering $100 suits to the Yankees "If they won four out of five" last week, despite no public announcement of their actions . . . Those golfers who were willing to wear numbers in George S. May's $25,000 All-American Open at Chicago this weekend, got a shot at the full prize money, but those who spurned the dog tags forfeited half of any winning . . . However, the $30 entry fee was reduced to $15 for the latter group . . . The Nats are violating American League regulations by their failure to paint a circle half way between the dugout and home plate to designate the spot of the next hitter . . . Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox shipped two dozen official balls back to League President Will Harridge last week to prove his point that the balls were not uniform this year. It was a bad lot with soft covers that could be twisted by hand . . . The biggest haul of fish from Eastern Bay in Maryland was made the other day by three Washingtonians, Charles Stofberg, assistant to D. C. Commissioner Young; Automobile Dealer Jack Blank, and Restaurater Dave Posnick, who caught 324 white perch and striped bass in 3½ hours, chumming . . .

THIS is the second year in which Pitcher Joe Page of the Yanks has been selected for the American League staff in the All-Star game, but he grimly recalls that two weeks after he made the All-Star team the first time, he was farmed out to Newark . . . The Yankees this spring made a $35,000 offer to the Nats for Outfielder Gil Coan, which was rejected. Two days later Coan was released to Chattanooga . . . Allie Reynolds has won seven games for the Yanks this year, but only two of them in Yankee Staduim. He's the happiest Yank on the road . . . Spud Chandler hasn't been knocked out of the box in his last 13 starts for the Yanks . . . In addition to the $100 nomination fee, the owners of horses in the $100,000 Gold Cup race at Belmont on July 19, will pay a $1000 starting fee . . . Joe Fitzgerald, the Nat's bullpen coach, refused to take the job offered him as manager of the Charlotte farm club last week, but will accept it at the start of the 1948 season. He denies he is staying with the Nats to collect a World Series share . . . Harness racing served notice the other night that it is a big business when 25,000 fans packed the Westbury track to see Direct Express win the $25,000 National Pacing Derby.

UMPIRE BILL McGOWAN, who tossed Coach Earl Mack of the Athletics out of yesterday's game at Boston, denies he set any precedent in banishing the son of the A's owner. "I've tossed him out of a half dozen games in my time," said McGowan . . . The Red Sox thought they had title to Eddie Yost in 1943, after he was invited to work out with the club for a week in Boston. When a Red Sox scout went to the lad's New York home to sign him, he learned from the boy's mother that "Eddie's in St. Louis with the Washington club" . . . Joe Cronin, in telling the story today, said, "It serves Yost right. Any right handed hitter who would sign with Washington when he had a chance to shoot for our left field fence deserves no sympathy." . . . If the Tony Zale-Rocky Graziano middleweight title fight in Chicago grosses the $475,000 expected in gate receipts. Zale's purse will be $140,000, Graziano's $70,000 . . . They are also cut in on the radio rights which sold for $30,000 with Zale getting 40 per cent, Rocky 20 per cent . . . Another reason why the Red Sox aren't leading the league is Dom DiMaggio who is hitting .220 in contrast to the .348 average he had at this point last season.

Indians Suffer 6-5 Setback As Chisox Spoil Doby's Debut

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians dropped a 6 to 5 decision to the Chicago White Sox today and Larry Doby, 22-year-old Negro athlete, struck out as a pinch batter for the Indians in his major league debut.

Luke Appling contributed three doubles and a single to the White Sox attack, one of the two-base hits scoring the winning run.

Doby, purchased from the Newark, N. J., Eagles of the Negro National League, struck out with two Cleveland men on the bases and one out in the seventh inning.

The slim easterner was the first Negro player to appear in the American League in the circuit's 47-year history.

Eddie Smith, who pitched six innings before retiring, was the winning pitcher. It was Smith's first win of the season. A bruised finger on his pitching hand forced his departure after allowing three hits.

Mel Harder, first of three Cleveland pitchers, was the loser. It was the 37-year-old Harder's first loss of the season against four victories.

Appling's third double scored Floyd Baker with what proved the winning Chicago run in the eighth.

Joe Baksi 5-1 Choice to Defeat Tandenberg, Get Shot at Louis

Stockholm, Sweden, July 5 (U.P.).—Joe Baksi, husky Kulpmont, Pa., heavyweight contender, was expected to enter the ring a 5-to-1 favorite over Olle Tandberg of Sweden tomorrow in an international bout whose winner will get a shot at Champion Joe Louis in September.

Baksi, a former Pennsylvania coal miner who currently looms as the cream of a poor crop of aspirants to Louis' throne, concluded his workouts today by jarring several sparring partners with hard rights and left hooks.

Both he and Tandberg have been signed to contingent contracts by Lew Burston of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club of New York and the winner has been promised a title bout with Louis at at New York September 19.

An expected crowd of 30,000 will pay the kroner equivalent of $100,000 to witness the Baksi-Tandberg bout at Raasunda Soccer Ground. Today's warm sun was expected to enrich the gate receipts which will more than double that of any other sporting contest ever staged in Sweden.

At the official weighing-in ceremony today, Baksi scaled 213¼ pounds and Tandberg at 208¾. Examining physicians pronounced both boxers in tip-top shape.

Robertson Loses Popup, Nats Lose Game, 7 to 6

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Boston, July 5.—Mickey Vernon and Pinch Hitter Early Wynn swatted home runs, and Stan Spence banged a pair of three-baggers, but leap to no conclusions at this point of our tale, because the Nats didn't win.

They took a 7-to-6 beating from the Red Sox, and to be unfeelingly blunt about it, it sort of served 'em right.

They were licked by three gift runs handed over to the Red Sox in the opening inning after Sid Hudson was off to a 3-0 lead. The Nats butched that situation almost immediately. In the Red Sox's turn at bat, Second Baseman Sherry Robertson, the chief miscreant, averted a pop fly off Bobby Doerr's bat as if it was radioactive and unloosed a flood of three Boston runs.

Never Could Catch Up

Spurred by that demonstration of the Nats' bounty, the Red Sox slapped Hudson around for three more runs in the next inning, to go in front, 6-3. The Nats suddenly reformed and banged in runs that cut the Boston lead to 6-5 at one point, and had the tying runs on base in both the seventh and eighth, but couldn't catch up.

The Nats' fourth straight defeat was accompanied also by evidence that they aren't living right. They got a brutal break in the second inning when Right Fielder Wally Moses snatched a home run away from Buddy Lewis with a man on base, to the glee of the 17,050 Boston citizens.

Lewis' enormous swat was sailing on a line toward the right field bull pen when Moses scampered to the barrier, and with his shoulder blades scraping the railing, speared the ball with his gloved hand before it could drop in.

Against Joe Dobson the Nats collected three quick runs in the first inning. Spence's triple to right center scored Lewis and Vernon who had singled, and Grace's single scored Spence.

Hudson Was Breezing

Hudson had two out and was breezing when Williams suddenly singled in the Boston first. Doerr's pop-up in short right was an easy play for Robertson apparently, but for no reason at all he withdrew and beckoned Buddy Lewis to make the catch. Lewis couldn't reach it, and the bal dropped for a single. Moses singled to center for one run, and Partee singled to left for two more that tied the score.

Spence looked like no American League All-Star outfielder on Moses' blow, incidentally. He misjudged it slightly, but sufficiently to let it drop safely.

In the second inning Dodson opened up against Hudson with a single. DiMaggio beat out a bunt and when Williams walked to fill the bases, with one out, Doerr doubled against the left field wall for two runs. Against Ray Scarborough, Jones ushered in a third with a long fly.

Mickey Vernon's second homer of the year, a smash into the right field bull pen led off the third and cut Boston's lead to 6-4, and in the fifth Spence tripled to right to score Yost and make it 6-5.

Then the Red Sox came up with an important run in the sixth. Williams tripled down the right field line and with two out, Jones got him in with a single to left.

Wynn batted for Scarborough starting the seventh, and on the first pitch he belted a homer into the right field seats to make it 7-6. With one out, Lewis singled but Johnson, who took over the pitching, disposed of Vernon and Spence. In the eighth, Travis singled with one out, and Evans singled with two out, but Pinch Hitter Mancuso left them, and the Nats never did get a man to first base after that.

Welsh's Reign as Net King Abruptly Halted by Thackara

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Jim Thackara pulled the tennis upset of the season as he defeated favored Barney Welsh, perennial Washington champion, 6—4, 6—4, 6—2, to win the District of Columbia Tennis Tournament before a large crowd yesterday at Kenwood.

It was the first time that Welsh and Thackara had ever met, and the former Harvard star handed Barney one of the most decisive defeats of his long career.

In the first set both men were content to stand at the baseline and trade shots, and for most of the set play was even. Then Thackara broke Barney's serve and held his own to take the set, 6—4.

Welsh Changes Tactics

Thackara opened up a 4—1 lead in the second set as he broke through Welsh's service twice. At this point Welsh discarded his consecutive baseline tactics and began to storm the net.

Attacking behind his serve, Barney pulled up to within a game of Thackara at 5—4, but Jim, retrieving everything Barney could throw at him with maddening regularity, held his own service and took the set, 6—4.

The final set was never in doubt as Thackara stuck to his winning formula of driving deep to Welsh's backhand and then delivering a lightning cross-court smash which repeatedly pulled the tiring Welsh far out of position and left him open for the kill.

Welsh Makes 24 Errors

An analysis of the last set shows that Thackara broke Welsh's service four times, and, although he scored only 7 placements to Welsh's 13, Thackara committed but 10 errors to Barney's 24.

Welsh stated after the match that although he had played steadier players than Thackara in the past he had rarely met a man who combined Thackara's depth to the baseline and accuracy on cross-court drives.

In the doubles semifinal played yesterday, Dave Johnsen and Don Leavens walloped John Curtiss and Bill Gifford, 6—4, 6—4, to earn the right to meet Welsh and Thackara in today's final at 3:30 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Alphonso Smith downed Mr. and Mrs. Barney Welsh 6—4, 6—1 in one of the mixed doubles semifinals and Don Leavens and Libby Prince defeated the Love-McCoy team, 6—0, 6—2 in the other semifinal. The final will be held at 5 p. m. today.

Porky Oliver Slips to 71, But Clings to Tam Lead

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—Although shooting his poorest golf of the meet, a one-under-par 71, Ed (Porky) Oliver, Wilmington, Del., held a three-stroke lead over South African Bobby Locke today in their international golf showdown for the Tam O'Shanter tournaments's $7000 first prize.

Oliver drew up at the three-quarter mark with a 54-hole total of 202—14 off the regulation card—after his dazzling, record-breaking first two rounds of 66-65. He needs a closing 66 tomorrow to smash Byron Nelson's winning mark of 269 in the 1945 Tam show.

The serious Locke also required a 71 today for a 205 total.

One of the pretourney favorites, Ed Furgol, of Pontiac, Mich., banged out a 69, picking up two strokes in his challenge and moving from fourth to third place with 206.

Chick Harbert of Detroit, the 1947 PGA runner-up, joined the 71 shooters to register a 207 for fourth position. Ky Laffoon, posting the best score of the day, a 34, 32—66, which included eight pars and eight birdies, tied for the next spot at 210 with Herman Keiser of Akron, Ohio. Keiser, who with Locke and Oliver was a first-day leader, also authorized a 71.

In the feminine side of the Tam circus, professional Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex., was tied with 19-year-old Grace Lenczyk, Newington, Conn., who was medalist and semifinalist in the 1947 Western Open. Miss Jameson, recent winner of the National Open, shot a four-over-par 79 in her third trip, while Miss Lenczyk fashioned a 77, each being bracketed at 237.

The Texan must come out ahead in tomorrow's finale or lose $500 in prize money. First award for the pro winner is $1,100. If she is beaten out by the Connecticut miss—who, as an amateur, can receive only $100 in merchandise—her second-place winnings would be $600.

Wynn Subs For Feller On All-Stars

EARLY WYNN

Boston, July 5.—Early Wynn, of the Nats, today was selected for the American League All-Star team's pitching staff as a replacement for Bob Feller, no less, by Manager Joe Cronin.

Cronin announced his choice of Wynn, following notice from League President Will Harridge that Feller was incapacitated by by a muscle injury in his back and would not be available for the game at Chicago on Tuesday against the National League All-Stars.

Cronin, in exercising his prerogative of naming Wynn to fill the ranks of his eight-man All-Star staff, thus gave Washington its greatest representation in the 15-year history of the game.

Wynn is the fourth Washington player named for the American League team this year. He will accompany outfielders Stan Spence and Buddy Lewis, and Pitcher Walter Masterson to Chicago tomorrow night on the same plane that will carry Ted Williams and Bobby Doerr of the Red Sox to the game.

Shea Defeats Macks, 5 to 1, For 11th Win

New York, July 5 (AP).—Frank Shea, standout rookie righthander of the New York Yankees, stopped the pesky Philadelphia Athletics, 5-1 on three hits today in gaining his 11th win of the year as against two setbacks.

The Hefty recruit was in command throughout and yielded the A's their lone run in the seventh after two were out when Buddy Rosar doubled home Elmer Valo, who had walked to start the inning.

Another recruit, Joe Coleman, who previously had beaten the Yankees twice, started for Philadelphia and blanked the American League pace-setters on one hit until the fourth when the Yanks scored all of their runs after the first two batters were retired.

Jolting Joe Dimaggio ignited the game winning rally with a double. After George McQuinn walked, Bill Johnson, Larry Berra, Phil Rizzuto, Shea and George Stirnweiss singled in succession before Tommy Henrich, who opened the frame by flying out, fanned to end the rally.

It Floats at 200 Pounds!

Mobile, Ala., July 5 (AP).—While the thermometer played around in the 90's, rotund Allen C. Holland, 53-year-old Mobile accountant, warmed up today for a try at the world's floating record.

Describing himself as "one of the world's greatest floaters," Holland said he planned to float around for four days and night this summer in his try for the new mark. He said this would eclipse the old record by 12 hours.

In a warm-up, Holland, who tips the scales at 200 pounds, leisurely drifted around a Mobile pool for five hours and 20 minutes before knocking off for dinner.

He said a New York woman, Mrs. Myrtle Huddleston, claims the record of 82 hours for "floating and paddling in the water."

He added that he expected to better the claimed record of 82 hours by 12 hours of "floating without paddling."

Elks Book Field Day

He Passes Assault by Capturing Sussex 'Cap

Stanton, Del., July 5 (AP).—Stymie turned on his vaunted speed in the home stretch today and stepped to the front as the world's leading money winning thoroughbred by capturing the mile and one-quarter Sussex Handicap in track record time.

The Delaware Park victory, scored by a margin of three and one-half lengths over Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Natchez, was worth $20,850 aand sent the six-year-old son of Equestrian's total earnings soaring to $595,510 and past Assault in the bankroll contest.

Assault has won $576,670 for second place.

Carries 128 Pounds Easily

With little Conn McCreary handling the reins Stymie carried his top weight of 128 pounds like a feather, running the distance in 2:02 2-5 under the silks of Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs. The time was three-fifths of a second faster than the track standard held by Croydon since 1942.

The estimated crowd of 25,000 had so much confidence in Stymie that they made him the odds-on choice to take down the major share of the $29,900 purse. As the result he paid only $3.30, $2.50 and $2.30 across the board.

At the finish he had Natchez soundly beaten with the Sanford Stud Farms' Round View another half length back in third place.

Natchez Off in Front

The chances of the horse that Trainer Hirsch Jacobs claimed for $1500 didn't appear very good at the start to those unacoustomed to Stymie's style of trailing far back during the early part of the race and then pouring on the steam in the final drive.

Natchez, handled by Charlie Gixens, broke from the barrier in front with Round View right at his heels. The pair opened up lengths of daylight on the backstretch.

Heading into the final half mile, Stymie started for the leaders. He got within striking distance rounding the final bend, collared the pace setting Natchez as they neared the sixteenth pole and then really rolled as he pulled away in the final yards.

Yanks Steal British Show

London, July 5 (AP).—Half a dozen tennis stars from the United States, headed by Jack Kramer of Los Angeles, divided the honors among themselves today by sweeping four titles and sharing in the fifth as the curtain fell on the 1947 Wimbledon championships.

Kramer added a half-interest in the men's double title to the singles championship he won yesterday and Margaret Osborne of San Francisco captured the women's singles crown.

But it was Doris Hart of Miami, Fla., and Mrs. Pat Todd of Hidden Valley, Calif., a brand-new women's doubles combination, who stole the hearts of British fans with a Cinderella act that produced the only upset of the final round.

Rally Did It

Almost hopelessly behind, they came back to win the women's championship by surprising Miss Osborne and Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., defending titlists and long-time United States doubles queens, 3—6, 6—4, 7—5.

For Miss Hart, a 22-year-old Miami University player, who overcame the effects of infantile paralysis to gain world tennis fame, it was atonement for her loss in the singles finals after a gallant rally.

The 29-year-old Miss Osborne, America's top woman amateur, defeated Miss Hart, 6—2, 6—4, in the first final of the day before a crowd of 15,000 which included Queen Mary, the Duchess of Kent, Prime Minister Attlee and United States Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas.

Then on the tattered center court, torn by the feet of the world's best tennis players from 26 nations in 12 days of play, Kramer and Bob Falkenburg of Los Angeles annexed the men's doubles crown.

They defeated Tony Mottram of Britain and Billy Sidwell of Australia, unranked giant killers of the early rounds, 8—6, 6—3, 6—3, in a match so ferocious that one of Falkenburg's errant overhead drives smashed into the royal box.

Nobody Hit

The 80-year-old Queen Mary ducked, but the ball missed her and the other dignitaries seated there.

It was a repeat performance for Kramer, 25-year-old leader of Uncle Sam's Davis Cup forces and holder of all the major titles in his own country. He won the doubles crown last year, although teamed with Tom Brown of San Francisco.

While she lost out in women's doubles, Miss Brough shared in the honors when she and John Bromwich of Australia took the mixed doubles title with a 1—6, 6—4, 6—2 triumph when the Australian team of Colin Long and Mrs. Nancye Wynn Bolton. She also won the same title a year ago with Tom Brown.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

Pittsburgh, July 5 (INS).—Billy Conn put in appearance at the Dapper Dan dinner for local Sports Editor Al Abrams the other night and a lot of the regulars out this way were surprised to see him.

CONSIDINE

Billy has become virtually a recluse in the year since his deplorable showing against Joe Louis in a fight which will be remembered as the biggest build-up to a let-down in ring annals. He has steered clear of old haunts, avoided old friends, let the frolicsome life he knew pass on.

His personality has changed remarkably. Where he once was the fresh, grinning, cocky Dead End kid who grew up and learned some manners, he now is shy, diffident and given to uneasy and embarrassed chuckles.

I asked him if it was true that he has been training lately.

"I'm not that crazy," he laughed, nervously. "I'm just resting, and I think that's all I'm ever going to do. I'm okay in the dough department. Don't listen to anybody who tells you I'm ever going to fight again. I'm too old . . . and tired."

He doesn't like to talk about the ring debacle that ended his career, and those close to him, including Milt Jaffe, with whom Billy appears to be associated in some vague business enterprise, never bring up the matter. Not even the stray charges by Pittsburge fans that Billy dogged it in the Louis fight can stir him out of his lassitude.

There is a sizable segment of Pittsburgh fandom which insists that Billy was drugged before the title fight. He had difficulty recognizing old friends who visited him in the dressing room before he got his cue to go on.

Whatever the reason for his showing, Conn today is a prime example of America's appalling indifference to a runner-up, especially one who put up a bad performance. He sat obscurely in the rear of the banquet hall, just a little over a year after he was the biggest name in Pittsburgh sports history.

Had he won the title he probably would now have just come home from a third Louis fight which—recession or not—would have set an all-time high for a fistic box-office attraction. But he didn't win.

I told him that I didn't see his fight against Louis; that I was about 8000 miles away, at the Bikini A-bomb test.

ART ROONEY, owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers, lost about $50,000 a year for 13 consecutive years in the National Football League. Last year, with a record of five wins, five losses and a tie, the club struggled out of the red for the first time and netted $25,000.

The 1947 season will move Rooney and his Steelers deeper into the black. More than 28,000 season tickets already have been sold and the management at Forbes Field is enlarging the seating capacity to bring it close to 40,000.

But just as the club seems to have won acceptance in its community at long last, it seems to have lost its leading attraction, Bill Dudley. The former University of Virginia great who led the National League in ground gained, pass interceptions and runback of punts last season, has announced that he will retire.

Both Rooney and Jock Sutherland, that peerless pillar of the game, hope to coax Dudley back into a Steelers' uniform.

"An athlete should not quit just as he reaches his prime," the good doctor opined. "Bill had his greatest season last year. He was one of the highest paid men in the league and would rate a raise for this coming season."

Which is an unusual thing for a coach to say, especially with the owner sitting within earshot. But Dr. Sutherland always speaks his mind.

HANK GREENBERG is having his troubles with the Pirates, but those troubles pertain mainly to his aging legs and currently myopic batting eye. But the local fans have been more than generoues with Hank. They put the blast on him with vigor only once this season. Hank tipped his hat and the boos stopped.

One of Greenberg's greatest boosters is Jackie Robinson, Brooklyn's Negro star. Early in the season, when Robinson was the object of much cruel abuse from some players, he and Hank collided roughly at first base.

The next time at bat, Robinson singled again, and Hank came over to him and said, "I'm sorry, Jackie, but I forgot to ask you if you were okay, after we bumped."

Robinson grinned from ear to ear and a weight seemed to be lifted off his shoulders. And later he told a friend, "Hank is the first fellow who made me feel at home in the big leagues."

'Kelly' Has Mere 11,824 Things To Fret Over for the Redskins

By Al Costello
Post Reporter

HARRY "KELLY" MILLER hasn't a thing on his mind at present—except some minor details embracing 11,824 items.

"Kelly" is the equipment man for the Washington Redskin football team. Right now, when most of Washington sport fans are wondering how they're going to grab off a couple of tickets for the next big Sunday baseball game, "Kelly" is the busiest man in town.

He's been at it for two weeks. And he'll be at it for two more weeks before he assembles the astonishing total of 11,824 items that must be collected, packed and shipped to the West Coast for use when the Redskins assemble at Los Angeles, August 4, for the start of football practice.

Since pro football catapulted into big business, the equipment needs of a top-flight eleven are amazing.

IT REQUIRES 18 huge trunks and two big wooden boxes to transplant all the stuff that is necessary to weld a group of 50-odd young men into the smartly coached and well-clothed team that Washington recognizes as the Redskins. The whole business weighs approximately 4 tons.

Included are such things as a card table, two coffee cans, 10 cartons of chewing gum, a diathermy machine, whirlpool bath, combs, brushes, three sets of crutches, a saw, a case of shoe polish, and countless other items that hardly seem to be connected with football. But they are all considered necessities in a big-league football camp.

Each item has its place in the training period. To "Kelly" the mountainous job is almost routine. He's been doing it for the past five years after serving as assistant equipment manager since 1940.

He's been hanging around Griffith Stadium since he was 11, learning the business under the astute eye of Frankie Baxter of the Nats, who is said to have lived around 7th and Florida Ave., since Clark Griffith first started pitching.

Walsh Cops Pistol Honors

Quantico, Va., July 5.—Lieut. Col. Walter Walsh, USMC, of Washington, D. C., became the 1947 Eastern Regional pistol champion here today with a total score of 1742 points fired with the .22-caliber and .38-caliber pistols. He topped a field of 226 shooters to don the crown won in 1946 by Harry Reeves, national all-around pistol champion of Detroit, Mich. Walsh pinned a .38-caliber score of 874 today which, added to the .22-caliber total of 868 he fired yesterday, gave him his winning score.

Sergean Mark Walsh, no relation, of the New York City police, finished second with 1714, followed by George Lyon of Chambersburg, Pa., with 1707.

Walsh fired a 190 in the Slow Fire match, a 198 in Timed Fire, 197 in the Rapid Fire and 289 over the National Match course for the 874 he posted today.

Other Washingtonians to finish high in the master competition were Lieut. Col. N. J. Rodeheffer, USMC, of Arlington, seventh with 1698; M. I. Bridges, Cheverly, Md., eighth with 1697; Robert J. Mansell, Washington policeman, eleventh with 1659, and Dr. William Cook, fourteenth with 1636.

The .45-caliber gun will be fired here tomorrow but does not count in the championship total.

Braves Pelt Dodgers, 4 to 1, to Regain Lead

Bums Held To 6 Hits By Voiselle

Brooklyn, July 5 (AP).—Bill Voiselle, erstwhile New York Giant, hurled the Boston Braves back into first place in the National League today by stopping the Brooklyn Dodgers, 4-1, on six hits.

The big right-hander, who came to the Braves in a deal that sent Mort Cooper to the Giants, was in serious trouble only in the second when the Dodgers put together singles by Jackie Robinson, Arky Vaughan and Dixie Walker's fielder's choice in scoring their only run. The loss dropped the Dodgers into second place, two percentage points behind Billy Southworth's Braves.

Cubs Edge Pirats, 4-3

Pittsburgh, July 5 (AP).—Bill Nicholson's long double in the sixth that scored two runs enabled the Chicago Cubs to trip the last-place Pittsburgh Pirates, 4 to 3, today in the opener of a three-game series.

Earlier, Ralph Kiner hit his twentieth home run of the season with one man on in the third to give the Pirates and Pitcher Rip Sewell a short-lived 3-2 lead.

Doyle Lade scattered nine hits to gain his sixth victory against five loses.

Sheik and Gino Go Again on Mat Card

A rematch will bring Sheik Badui, the Arabian, and Gino Garibaldi, the husky St. Louis Italian, back to Turner's Arena on Wednesday night's wrestling show for a feature bout. Badui and Garibaldi grappled to a 30-minute stalemate on the Frank Sexton-Primo Carnera title show at the ball park recently.

Maurice LaChappelle will oppose George (Red) Ryan of Philadelphia in the semiwindup.

Oliver Clings To Tam Lead

on Oliver when his usually reliable putter went haywire. He welded 35-36 for his 71, but missed putts under four feet on at least three greens. On the third hole, he failed to sink one under two feet.

Oliver matched par on the first six holes, then had two birdies and one-over-par 4 to record a 35. From the tenth through the sixteenth he also equalled standard figures. On the seventeenth he rammed in a nine-footer for a birdie. His approach on the tree and creek fronted eighteenth rode over the green near the jammed grandstand. His cramped chip shot was feet away and he needed two taps for a 5 and a 36.

Behrens Defeats Bogley to Win Scholastic Tennis

Charlottesville, Va., July 5 (AP).—Buddy Behrens of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., High School won the National Interscholastic tennis singles championship here today by downing Gilbert Bogley of Landon School, Washington, D. C., in three easy sets, 6—3, 6—2, 6—1.

Behrens, seeded No. 1, was the master throughout the match, which lasted about 67 minutes. Bogley was seeded No. 3 in the tourney.

The Fort Lauderdale star then teamed with George King of the same city to take the doubles award from Sidney Schwartz and Robert Luxenburg of Brooklyn

Reds Down Cards, 7-5; Go Into 5th

Cincinnati, July 5 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds moved into fifth place today, ahead of St. Louis, with a 7-5 victory over that team in a free-hitting contest before a crowd of 14,264.

The Reds collected 13 hits from three Cardinal hurlers and, although Redleg Ken Raffensberger gave up as many blows, he pitched effectively in the clinches.

Third Sacker Grady Hatton led the Cincinnati attack with four safeties in as many trips to the plate.

The Cardinals pushed over two markers in the fourth on Marty Marion's double, a walk, a two-base knock by Starting Pitcher Al Brazle and a fly out.

The Reds tied it up in their half and went ahead with two markers in the sixth, one of them Augie Galan's homer. The Cardinals rallied for two runs in the ninth but Raffensberger weathered the storm to post his third victory against six defeats.

Alexandria Wins Va. Legion Title

Alexandria Post 124 won the District 8 Junior American League baseball championship of Virginia yesterday by plastering Goochland, 26-0, at the Municipal Stadium in Alexandria.

By winning, Alexandria earned the right to meet the winner of the District 7 championship, which hangs in the balance between Staunton, Winchester and Harrisonburg.

The Alexandrians blasted out 29 hits in scoring their second staright shutout over Goochland.

Real All-Stars

Hubbell, Williams Feats Safe Enough

By Joe Reichler
Associated Press Sports Writer

THE 1947 All-Star Classic Tuesday in Chicago between the best of the National and American Leagues promises to provide lots of thrills with such stars as Ewell Blackwell of no-hit fame, Ted Williams, Hal Newhouser, Joe DiMaggio, Johnny Mize, and others, but it is doubtful whether even these stars can approach the feats of Carl Hubbell and the Ted Williams of 1946.

No player ever so completely dominated the midsummer event as King Carl, the old meal ticket of the New York Giants, or Thumpin' Ted, the lanky flychaser of the Boston Red Sox.

In 1934, when the All-Star Classic was wearing short pants, Hubbell fanned Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Fox, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin, five of the greatest sluggers in American League history, in succession. That, undoubtedly, was the most remarkable feat of the All-Star competition.

Williams won the 1941 game with a dramatic ninth-inning home run that scored two base runners. To make the blast more painful to the National Leaguers, the senior circuit was only one out away from victory when Williams connected, enabling the American League stars to win 7-5.

WILLIAMS dwarfed his '41 performance in last year's all-star game when he wrecked National League pitching with a tremendous display of batting power that produced two home runs, two singles and a walk in five times at bat as he led the American League to a 12-0 triumph, the most one-sided All-Star contest since its inception in 1933. Ted scored four runs and drove in five while a succession of All-Star records tumbled before his mighty bat.

Manager Mel Ott of the New York Giants has played in the most All-Star games, 11. He did not miss one from 1934 through 1944. Billy Herman and Joe Medwick have played in the July classic 10 times. Joe DiMaggio of the New York Yankees has the best chance to tie Mel's mark since this will be his ninth All-Star appearance.

Herman has hit safely more times than any other player. His All-Star batting average is .433 on 13 hits in 30 times at bat. Charley Gehringer, Detroit's great second baseman of a decade ago, hit safely 10 times in 20 times at bat for a .500 average. He is the only All-Star performer to hit safely in each contest he played.

Among the pitchers, Vernon (Lefty) Gomez is the only hurler to win more than one decision. The former Yankee southpaw won three and lost one.

Icecapade Judged Tops At Culpeper

Culpeper, Va. — The hunter championship of the two-day Culpeper Horse Show, which closed here today, was won by Icecapade, owned and ridden by Mrs. Page Jennings of Charlottesville.

The 8-year-old mare, which had not scored any points toward the hunter crown yesterday, today won three blues and two seconds and placed herself ahead of Bush House, owned by Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Randle of Warrenton by the final score of 18 to 15. Bush House, ridden by Eugene Cunningham of Richmond, Va., was named reserve champion.

On Friday, Icecapade was a member of the winning hunt team and won the working hunter class, but neither counted toward the conformation tricolor.

Judges of the show were Col. Frederic W. Boyce of Washington, D. C., Miss Julia Shearer of Locust Dale, George H. Timmins of Groton, Mass., and Bernard J. Smith of Brandy, Va., scoring the walking horses.

AFTER 26 YEARS—John B. Kelly, jr. (right) of the University of Pennsylvania, receives congratulations from Carl Fronsdal, Norway, after winning the Diamond Sculls of the Royal Henley regatta on the Thames River in London yesterday. The win was the realization of a 26-year-old ambition of the Kelly family since Kelly, sr.—once a bricklayer—was barred under the since-repealed rule that athletes who had worked with their hands could not compete

Tommy Mont May Start in All-Star Tilt

For the first time in the 13-year history of the classic, a Washington collegian may be in the starting line-up when the College All-Stars meet the champion Chicago Bears in the All-Star football game at Soldier Field, Chicago, late in August.

Tommy Mont, University of Maryland quarterback in 1942 and again last year, under present plans will be the first local player to earn that distinction.

Mont, it was learned by The Post, agreed only yesterday to join the collegians for their tiff with the pros in the annual game staged by the Chicago Tribune with Catholic, Jewish and Protestant charities sharing the proceeds.

Previously, the Terp star had passed up half a dozen requests that he join the All-Star squad with the explanation that he desired to spend the full training time in camp with the Washington Redskins, with whom he hopes to play this year as an understudy to "Slinging Sammy" Baugh.

Mont told Chicago game authorities that he believed losing a month's practice with the Redskins would materially hurt his chances of winning his place on the team.

However, Frank Leahy, Notre Dame mentor who is head coach of the college squad this year, was insistent that Mont be included on the roster. Leahy is plagued by a shortage of capable "T" formation quarterbacks and is known to be "high" on the Maryland lad.

British Boo as Ex-Bricklayer's Son Wins Diamond Sculls

Hanley-on-the-Thames, England, July 5 (AP).—John B. Kelly, jr., of Philadelphia, ended his father's 26-year wait for a family victory in the Diamond Sculls of the Royal Henley Regatta today with an eight-length triumph that brought boos from British spectators.

"I've waited for this day for years," said the father, who had been barred from this meet in 1920 by a since-repealed rule that denied entry to an oarsman who had done menial labor. During one summer of his college career the elder Kelly had been a bricklayer.

He vowed then that some day a son of his would win the Diamond Sculls, rowing's highest honor, and added to his pledge by sending his green rowing cap to King George V as an act of derision.

Today he was the first to greet his son, wearing a replica of the green cap, as the winner docked.

And as they posed for photographers many of the 20,000 British jammed near the finish line booed. There was no explanation for the booes except that it is believed the fans resented the pictures of the Kelly family—father, Mother, son and two daughters—and the many cases of American food they brought to this country to insure the victory.

Young Kelly defeated Carl Fronsdal of Norway in 8 minutes, 49 seconds to make good his father's pledge in his second attempt. A year ago he was defeated in the final by Jean Sephariades of France.

Kelly's triumph and that of Kent School of Kent, Conn., over Tabor Academy of Marion, Mass., in the final of the Thames Challenge Cup races were the only non-British wins in the 12-event program.

Kelly had the race to himself and the announcer on the public address system told the crowd that "Kelly is so far ahead that he is turning around to hear the applause from the bank."

Kapilow Forced To Turn Down Fusari Bout

Danny Kapilow, New York welterweight, has found it necessary to pass up a shot with Charlie Fusari at Madison Square Garden on Friday night, July 18, in order to go through with his postponed 10-round boxing feature with Smuggy Hursey at Griffith Stadium a week from Monday night, July 14.

Nat Rogers, matchmaker for the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, had intended matching Kapilow with Fusari in the event Danny avoided injury in his battle with Hursey originally scheduled for last Tuesday, July 1, but since has substituted Eddie Giosa, Philadelphia fighter, against Fusari.

Hursey, meanwhile, checks out for New York today to conclude training for Kapilow. Smuggy, assured that the injured lower lip he received in a recent workout with Al Wright, is on the mend, will wear Henry Armstrong's "mask" when he resumes boxing there tomorrow under the joint supervision of Cotrainers Pee Wee Beale and Harry Armstroug.

Despite the recent postponment, interest continues to boom in Kapilow and Hursey, and a brisk advance sale continues in progress at the Liberty Club and at Griffith Stadium. Kapilow reports here midway of this week to conclude training at the Liberty A. C., while Hursey will remain in New York until Friday.

Schroeder Gains Clay Court Final

Salt Lake City, July 5 (AP).—Ted Schroeder, America's second-ranking tennis star from Los Angeles, today advanced to the finals of the National Clay Courts Tournament by defeating Edward Moylan of San Francisco, 9—7, 2—6, 6—4, 6—4.

In the opening match of the semifinal program at the Forest Dale courts, Barbara Krase, defending women's champion from San Francisco, was knocked out of the tournament by Mary Arnold Prentiss of San Bernardino, Calif., in straight sets 6—3, 7—5.

Wants Games

The Eastern A. C. unlimited baseball team wants games in and outside of Washington. Call Woodie Gray at Franklin 4231.

Behr Wins Navy Net Title

Annapolis, Md., July 5 (AP)—Lieut. Comdr. Jim R. Behr, representing the west-of-Hawaii naval district, today defeated Lieut. Elston Wyatt San Diego, Calif., in straight sets. 6—4, 6—3, to become the tennis singles champion of the United States Navy.

Wyatt, former captain of the Naval Academy's net team, failed to play his usual steady game, as the Pensacola, Fla., officer twice overcame a 2—0 deficit to carry off the title with plenty to spare.

Eagles Sign Two Backs

Philadelphia, July 5 (AP).—The Philadelphia Eagles announced today the signing of Pete Kmetovic and Gil Steinke, bringing their halfback force for 1947 to eight.

Fishing Is "Terrific Sport" With Striped Bass Striking

By Jack Bell

Solomons Island, Md., July 5.—Disappointed because we were unable to make reservations for ourselves and space for our car on a boat out of Washington for Norfolk last Thursday, Ben Alt and your reporter substituted a trip here for three days of black bass and surf fishing in North Carolina.

Hurried arrangements were made and we found Capt. Wallace Shuve, the skipper of the Stella at Benedict, Md. Upon arrival here we soon learned that stripers were again fighting. Capt. Roddey Langley returned to port during the late evening hours with James W. Sawyer, Van Kendrick, Arlington, and Dr. Hawfield of Washington with 96 striped bass, ranging from 1 to 14 pounds.

Roddy said his party found the sport terrific, losing many larger fish and broke both lines and rod. He said fish were caught by boating.

My soft crab bait, blue skies and a light breeze have provided for a perfect fishing condition and Cedar Point provided the fish, chumming with live shrimp. Friday we caught 100 fish consisting mostly of striped bass, weighing from 1 to 2½ pounds. However, our catch also contained five weak fish, averaging 3½ pounded each.

This morning our catch was thirty stripers and we expect to find the big fellers. This evening trolling for several hours did not produce a single fish. Fishing here it can be said, is spotty, catches consisting mostly of croakers and some weak fish which in another week should be here in large numbers.

Fight Talk

Boxing Promoters Fight Shy Of Broadcasts by Television

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Although they are inclined to take a somewhat dim view of each other, Gabe Menendez and Al Weill see eye to eye on one thing—television.

And what the two rival promoters of Washington's prize fight industry see is a horrible relapse in gate receipts as a result of the new-fangled contraption which makes a ringside seat as distant as your nearest tavern.

"It's killing the boxing business," scream Menendez and Weill in unison, speaking, of course, of the financial, not the artistic, side of their favorite enterprise.

"In New York," continues Mr. Weill, "receipts have fallen way off at Madison Square Garden. And where is it hurting most? In the general admission section. And that's where you make or lose money on a fight. Customers are not satisfied with paying three bucks and sitting in centerfield with a telescope to see a fight.

"Today they can go around the corner to a restaurant or tavern and get a ringside seat for the price of a beer. Television is certainly wonderful—but not for boxing."

Looking to the future, Senor Menendez, the Turner Arena matchmaker, predicts that in the not too distant future, television will rub out small clubs and "the television people themselves will become fight promoters.

"Why not?" he asked, peering at the screen at a recent Garden television show. "Boxing is the easiest and best thing in the world to televise and the television people know it. They won't allow boxing to die. When a club folds, the television people will open a club, hire a matchmaker and sell the television rights to a sponsor. That's right, the television people are the fight promoters of the future."

Mr. Weill added a hearty, "He's right, for once."

Both are dead serious about the "evils of television." They are so serious they both refused to have any truck with local television people who wanted to screen the last two Griffith Stadium productions.

LIGHT HEAVYWEIGHT Archie Moore, conqueror of Curt Sheppard at the ball park in his last start, is working at the Liberty gym in preparation for a July 14 outing against Bert Lytell in Baltimore . . . Harry (the Horse) Raskin, the one-time local boxing mogul and now a nightclub man in Detroit, was a July 4 visitor in the District of Columbia. Spent most of time caddying at a nearby miniature golf course . . . Gabe Menendez was trying to arrange a Joe Louis-Primo Carnera boxing exhibition here for September, but Carnera said no. "I'm doing o. k. in the wrestling business," said Da Preem. "Louis is murder; the wrestling business is a breeze. What's more, I still remember my first Louis fight" . . . Danny Kapilow received only $300 for his eight-round stand against Smuggy Hursey two years ago. Hursey got only a $150. Next Monday night they'll probably split up a $15,000 pot . . . Incidentally, only one customer requested a refund when the fight was postponed from July 1 to July 14.

Boys, Girls Sign Up for Tennis Play

Registration begins tomorrow for The Washington Post-Recreation Department tennis schools at 18 locations throughout the District.

The classes are open to youngsters 19 years of age and under and will afford every boy and girl in Washington an opportunity to learn tennis from the best players in this area.

Commissioner Bill Shreve is lining up a list of stars, including City of Washington Champion Barney Welsh, District of Columbia Champ Jim Thackara, National Boys Champion Gil Bogley, Washington Women's Champion Ann Gray, and many others to instruct the classes.

Tomorrow's registration may be made at any one of the courts listed below and Recreation Department officials will be at the locations from 9 a. m. to 8:30 p. m. Registrations will close Thursday evening.

The Post is supplying rackets and balls for those oys and girls who do not own tennis equipment. Everyone who does have a racket should bring it to class.

A uniform teaching schedule will be put into effect, and The Post will list the subject of each day's class at a later date.

Spy Song Scores In ArlingtonStakes

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—Spy Song, owned by Charles T. Fisher of Detroit nosed out William Helis' Rippey in the $25,000 Myrtlewood Stakes at Arlington Park today before a crowd of 36,000.

F. W. Hooper's 3-year-old colt Education was a distant third in the six furlong event five lengths away. Christiana Stable's Sea Snack brought up the rear, another two and a half lengths back.

Two late scratches—Fighting Don and Historian—left just four to run. Spy Song paid $3.20 and $2.60. Rippey paid $4.20. The time was 1:10 2-5. There were no show prices. Spy Song carried 124 pounds and Rippey 127.

AAC Accepts Tom Whalen As Grid Ref

TOMMY WHALEN, former Catholic University grid great and now a prominent Touchdown Cluber, has been accepted as an official in the All-America Football Conference. How come the National Football League, in which the Redskins play, doesn't hire a Washingtonian? . . . Charles A. (Buzzer) Ryan, local sportsman and former fight promoter and manager, is ill in Maryland General Hospital, Baltimore . . . Johnny Fenlon, former GW football star, and his seven brothers gather once weekly to play softball on the Monument Grounds. The ninth man on the team is Tuffy Leemans, another George Washington great, making it a 100 per cent Colonial affair. Johnny, incidentally, will finish out the year with University of Richmond before assuming the job of recreational director for the city of Fredericksburg, Va. . . . Radioman Jimmy Gibbons swears Gen. "Ike" Eisenhower and Congressional's golf pro, Wiffy Cox, look enough alike to be brothers.

Commissioner John Russell Young's right arm, Charley Stofberg, his brother Jack, Dave (Bonat) Posnick and Jack (Arcade-Pontiac) Blank, are still raving over their fishing luck at Eastern Bay on the Eastern "Sho." They snared 314 white perch and rocks in addition to throwing back 100 more, which were undersized . . . Col. Joe Escude, whose sports benefit promotions here have been classics, is up and better after a nasty tropical illness, he writes pals her. Joe is in South America on Governmental business that is strictly hush-hush . . . Clem Stralka, Redskin veteran who turned down the assistant coach job with the Wilmington Clippers, is now in line for the line coach job with the Long Island Indians of the American League, a team that is owned by Bill Shea, lawyer for Boston Yank Owner Ted Collins and Johnny Shields, former Georgetown University sports publicity livewire.

He Rides Winners

Charles Town, India Alike to Jimmy Baird

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

THERE'S a lot of land, sea and air between New Delhi, India and Charles Town, West Virginia, but those places were stepping stones in the career of James Thomas Baird.

Haight

If you are uninformed, Baird is the reigning riding sensation at Charles Town. He graduated from an apprentice to a journeyman jockey the past week.

Jimmy liked horses and rode them from the time he could walk, but he hadn't thought of being a jockey when, shortly before Pearl Harbor, he was drafted into the Army. After active service in the Chinese-Burma-India campaigns, Baird was assigned to headquarters in New Delhi.

A top sergeant, in charge of the horses owned by generals, saw Jimmy eyeing the animals and asked if he would like a job around the stables. Naturally Baird jumped into the work and it wasn't long before he was the noncommissioned boss of the area.

Several British generals owned horses and raced them on the nearby track. The jockeys were a conglomeration of natives, Australian and English riders. Baird watched their work and decided he could do as well.

* * * *

SO Jimmy Baird became the leading rider at the New Delhi track. He also became leading trainer for he bought two mares and one, Peggy, won seven of nine starts. It was tough riding, he says, and when he returned to the States, he had to accustom himself to going the other way around the tracks.

While in the Army, Baird not only acquired a desire to be a jockey, but also a wife and young Jimmy, jr., who will be 3 next month.

When Baird was discharged from the Army, there were no bands to meet him nor rich owners to boost him into the saddle. Just 13 months ago he left his wife and baby with her folks and came to Charles Town with little or no funds, but high hopes.

He asked for a license, relating his India experiences, but the powers that be asked to be shown. The word got around among horsemen and riders that the thin kid with the extra long legs had ridden in elephant races in India. Baird, not without a sense of humor, allowed that fallacy to grow.

* * * *

BAIRD was sleeping in the stables, determined not to go back to his family until he was secure in the saddle. Then he met Max Pearson, an Oklahoma boy who now calls Washington his home.

Pearson is a jockey's agent, but he was without portfolio when Jockey Webb broke a leg. He struck up a friendship with Baird. Under Pearson's guidance, Jimmy practiced coming out of the gate as well as other "musts" for jockeys.

Ten days later, Baird had a license and three days later he rode his first winner—Intelligentsia, a 30-1 shot.

Before the end of 1946, he had ridden 65 winners.

AT THIS meeting he has ridden 44 winners in 31 days.

Baird is 26 and was born in Westchester, Pa. Calls Newark, Del., his home but was raised on a ranch in South Dakota. He "would rather ride than eat." H. W. Shaffer, Virginia sportsman, has his contract, and Jimmy will continue with him and his trainer, Huppy Davis.

Then there is Jimmy, jr. The youngster meets his father at the scales after the last race of the day and Papa Baird picks him up and carries him back to the door of the jockeys' room where Mother Baird waits.

Maybe that would be out at the milers.

90-Day Ban Issued for June 30 Race

Charles Town, W. Va., July 5.—A trainer was suspended today in the first stimulating case to be disclosed here in two years.

The Ripsaw Stable's Quality Jane, winner of the third race on June 30, was found to have been "helped" in her effort. After an investigation that ended today, stewards suspended Trainer T. H. Callahan for 90 days and barred the mare during the same period.

Quality Jane, ridden by Jockey Sammy Palumbo, went to the front at the break and led all the way in the test of about six furlongs. She was an odds-on favorite and returned a $3.60 mutuel after winning by five lengths.

Drug Unidentified

The report of the chemist of the West Virginia Racing Commission failed to disclose the nature of the stimulant or drug used. Rule 240 of this State's racing rule provides a 90-day suspension in such cases.

In addition to this ruling, two other suspensions were made by stewards. Jockey R. D. Scott was suspended for five days for reporting to the jockey quarters in unfit condition to ride, while Jockey Ray Arduini of Washington was given an equal period of inactivity for rough riding astride Rolling Water in today's third race.

Another banner crowd turned out here today with more than 8000 in the plant for the second nine-race program in a row. The featured Merrill Vaughn Purse proved a romp for J. J. Ring's Dainger Girl. Jockey Willie Nertney took this filly to the front early and she stayed there, leading J. E. Crider's favored Comedy Player home by three lengths. In third position came J. K. Wynkoop's Army Belle in the field of eight going about 7 furlongs.

One Good Race

Nertney, riding his only mount of the day in contrast to his nine saddle appearances of yesterday, brought the four-year-old home in 1:25 3/5 and her backers took down an $8.20 mutuel. Despite rain here last night, the track was fast.

Carroll Lee's The Shah, which drew a steady play, continued to have hard luck at this track. In his previous race, the 5-year-old fell. Today he broke down badly and had to be dismounted after showing early speed.

Wayne Kendrick of Washington added to his list of winners here when Free Valley won the fifth race, a purse affair about four and a half furlongs. Jockey Woody Kirk booted the gelding home ahead of A. J. Pinsett's Cabin Creek and E. B. Lee's Looter. Free Valley paid $8.20 and registered the excellent time of 0:49 2/5.

Elmer Kratz's Agency and Don Galotta's Chaltic teamed to produce a $30.60 pay-off on the daily double.

Phalanx Wins Empire Stakes

New York, July 5 (INS).—C. V. Whitney's gangling colt Phalanx established himself as the country's leading three-year-old today by winning the $50,00-added Empire City Stakes at Jamaica for his fourth straight victory.

But Why Not was second and Harmonica, another filly, finished third.

Phalanx, expertly ridden by Ruperto Donoso, won by 2¼ lengths, going away, after Harmonica had set the pace to the stretch. The winner packed top weight of 126 pounds.

Phalanx paid $3.40, $2.60, and $2.40. But Why Not returned $3.70 for place and $3.10 for show, and Harmonica paid $4.80 for third.

Phalanx, who earlier in the season was beaten by a head in the Kentucky Derby, finished third in the Preakness and finally started his winning streak in the Belmont Stakes, added $48,500 to his earnings by capturing today's mile and three-sixteenths classic. He now has gleaned a total of $285,010 during his career.

Navy, Missouri Meet on Grid

Annapolis, Md., July 5.—The Naval Academy and the University of Missouri will meet on the gridiron in 1948, it was announced today by Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., U. S. N., superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy.

The game, which will be the first athletic meeting of any kind between the two schools, will be played on October 16, 1948, with the site for the game probably slated to be at Thompson Stadium in Annapolis, Md.

In scheduling the Tigers from Missouri, Navy will be placing another Midwestern representative on its schedule, already engaging in a regular series with Notre Dame and frequently meeting representative teams from the Western Conference.

Umpires Appointed For All-Star Classic

Cincinnati, July 5 (AP).—Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler today announced the umpires for the All-Star game at Chicago Tuesday, July 8.

The National umpires will be: John Conlan and Walter J. Henline American League, Art Passarella and James Boyer.

Grays Play Stars Twin Bill Today

Heartened by the return of their distance hitting first basemen, Buck Leonard, the Washington Grays open their second half schedule in the Negro National League this afternoon in a doubleheader at Griffith Stadium. Opposing the Grays will be the Philadelphia Stars, boasting the finest hurling staff in the league.

Manager Vic Harris of the Grays believes that his team will be in the thick of the second half fight. According to Harris, "if Leonard had not been injured during the first half, we would have walked off with top honors."

Johnny Wright, who has been turning in excellent performances, is slated to twirl the opener for the Grays while Thompson, who turned out a 1-to-0 victory in his last Griffith Stadium appearance, will pitch the other game. Partlow and McHenry probably will hurl for the Stars. Game time is 2 p. m.

Solunar Tables

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

The schedule of Solunar Periods, as printed below, has been taken from John Alden Knight's SOLUNAR TABLES. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory or hunting in good cover during these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major Periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

Horseman

By Don Henderson

Said a farmer friend: "You know, you've got to have a bit of breeding in them. I bought a farm-lot-raised colt the other day. Gave a thousand for him as he stood, three years and never saddled. We fixed him up a bit and he turned out a real hunter prospect, we sold him to go up North.

"What did we get for him? I'll not tell you that, but it was more than that sale of coach horses made from the whole sale. Yes, sir, you've got to have a bit of blood alright."

Here's a real horse family. Adolphe Pons for years handling the Belmont horse interests, then in his own establishment at Belair, Md., can sit back and watch son, John P., with his younger brother, carry on. A happy state of affairs that somehow or other not so many fathers are able to arrive at.

It's a satisfaction to have the acumen to go to the sales and buy a future winner. But never forget that there is a big kick behind having it said "So-and-So's HOMEGROWN won comfortably." That meant a lot more than just planking down the old dollars. If you want to know how much, buy a mare and try it once, that is sport.

JACK BLANK SAYS
WE WILL KEEP YOUR CAR IN GOOD HEALTH
Like human beings who visit their doctors and dentists at regular intervals, a car, too, needs attention if it is to be kept in good health. Regular checkups are in order every so often. Before you start out on your vacation trip or a weekend in the country, let us check your car . . . clean the motor, replace worn or broken parts, and put your mind at ease.

Homes of Steel and Aluminum To Have Local Premiere Soon

THE HARMON house has a living room, dining room, three bedrooms, kitchen and bath with optional utility room and garage. The manufacturer claims the steel construction gives maximum fire and vermin protection.

THE greater Washington area will soon get its first peek at the much-publicized, long-awaited "industralized house." Two examples are under construction in nearby Virginia and will be open for inspection within three weeks. Manufacturers of both homes were given Government support by means of guaranteed market contracts.

General Homes, Inc., of Columbus, Ohio, has one all-aluminum house under way at Tauxemont, 3 miles south of Alexandria on Fort Hunt dr., in Fairfax County. About 52 of the homes are scheduled for erection in the Tautemont area by the Tauxemont Development Corp. They are expected to sell for under $11,000, including a half-acre lot.

The William H. Harmon Corp. of Philadelphia in cooperation with the Virginia Heights Development Co., will erect 105 homes built of steel panels at Virginia Heights, 32-acre subdivision off Leesburg pike, between Shirley hwy. and Baileys Cross Roads, Va.

Steel is used in the walls, roof, and house partitions. The sales prices will be determined after the first home is completed—in approximately two to three weeks.

The Harmon Corp. was the second prefab manufacturer to obtain a guaranteed market contract from the National Housing Agency. The guarantee, for production and sale of 10,000 homes, was signed in October, 1946.

Previously NHA had received harsh words from Ray Sawyer, president of Amvets. Sawyer charged, "NHA is muffing the greatest chance of our generation to give America a low-cost factory-built home."

Sawyer accused NHA of bungling the factory-built housing program by its slowness in signing guaranteed market contracts, whereby prefab manufacturers could begin production and be assured of a market.

The Harmon and General Homes dwellings are three-bedroom bungalows. The former has one plan with an attached breezeway and garage.

At the time the Harmon Corp. received its guaranteed market contract, the estimated cost of a Harmon house, erected and fully equipped, and including a $1000 lot, was between $6000 and $7500. Rising labor, material and land costs are expected to shoot that figure well over $10,000.

Both firms ship the "packaged house to local dealers who contract for the erection. The local dealer lays the foundation and floor, and erects the prefabricated parts and assemblies shipped from the factory.

A Virginia Heights Development Corp., spokesmen yesterday expressed concern over advance publicity over the steel dwelling. He said a public unveiling would be held after completion but that the firm would appreciate it if sightseers would stay out of the building area until that time.

2 Southeast Apartments To Be Started

Construction will start next week on two apartment buildings at 1620 C st. and 1621 Massachusetts ave. se., according to Wire Associates, Inc., owner and builder.

The structures will have 12 units each and will cost an estimated $100,000. George T. Santmyers is architect. The builder said the project was expected to be completed five months after ground was broken.

Exterior construction will be of brick and concrete, semifireproof and of modified Colonial design. The builder has built similar structures at 19th st. and Maryland ave. ne.

Apartments will have one and two bedrooms. Rents have not been established.

1000 Houses Planned on 320-Acre Site

Plans for a vast community of 1000 or more homes covering 320 acres on Washington blvd., District Heights, Md., were disclosed yesterday.

Builder is Washington Estates, Inc., said to be owned by Samuel R. Rosoff, famed New York subway contractor and builder. The site is a half mile wide and a mile deep.

Foundations for the first section of homes have been poured. Crews are also cutting in streets. Homes are expected to sell in the $11,000-to-$12,000 price bracket.

Fuel Bill Lowered

Tests conducted by the Tennessee Valley Authority revealed that a house completely insulated with mineral wool reduced the fuel bill by 45 per cent.

Estate Bought For Consul In Bermuda

The State Department has purchased "Donaghmore," magnificent five-acre estate at Tucker's Town, Bermuda for $250,000 as the permanent residence for the American consul, according to Previews, Inc., marketing agent for the property. Clay Merrill, present consul, is now in residence there.

The British Colonial residence, of native coral limestone construction, is situated on a high bluff overlooking the Atlantic to the south and Castle Harbor to the north. Built in 1930, it has nine rooms and four baths. Spanish grille gates off the large patio-hall open onto a 20x50-foot living room with a complete wall of windows facing the ocean.

The grounds surrounding the residence are landscaped with oleanders, hibiscus and cedars. Among the estate's outbuildings are a guest cottage and a five-room servants' house.

Third of Cities Have No Codes

How imperative it is that standard, modern building codes be adopted throughout the nation is revealed in a survey just completed by the President's Conference on Fire Prevention which showed that fully one-third of the communities in America have no building code whatever.

Most codes which do exist are more than 20 years old, according to Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming, general chairman of the conference. "Most of these need serious revision," Mr. Fleming stated.

Plans Drawn For 250-Unit Apartments

BULLETIN

Construction of an eight-story, 250-unit apartment building has been proposed for a 100 by 200 foot site at 25th and Pennsylvania ave. nw., it was disclosed yesterday.

Real Estate Round-Up

REACTION by realtors and organized property owners to President Truman's recent blast at the "real estate lobby" was fast and furious. The President asked for an investigation of the "real estate lobby" which, he said, had much to do with congressional approval of the new Housing and Rent Act, signed Monday.

Arthur Binns, National Home and Property Owners Foundation president had this to say: "The President has heaped upon the owners of rental property a most scathing indictment. With utter disregard for the simplest justice, he has blanketed together some eight million owners in this indictment."

Mr. Truman urged an investigation of the "real estate lobby" "Nothing," said Binns, "would please us more than to have the truth spread upon the record and the American people realize the damage done to them by destructive legislation and administration and false economics, which has prevented the supply of rental housing they so badly need."

Dr. Joseph Seay, director of the foundation, said if the President's position were upheld by Congress, it would "force property owners to submit to an ever-decreasing standard of living in a period of constantly increasing wage levels."

Morgan Fitch, president, National Association of Real Estate Boards, charged President Truman was "either woefully uninformed or had been maliciously misinformed about housing conditions in the United States."

HOUSING EXPEDITER FRANK R. CREEDON has hailed the action of his Chicago regional rent office in obtaining a temporary restraining order to prevent a landlord at Hastings, Nebr., from shutting off water and electric services and dispossessing 26 tenants.

"The action, taken only a few hours after President Truman signed the new Housing and Rent Act of 1947, should give encouragement to tenants that they have certain protections under the new law which will be enforced with all the resources of this office," Creedon said.

In what is probably the first Federal Court order in the Nation relating to the new law, United States District Judge John W. Delehant at Lincoln, Nebr., acted to prevent Edwin L. Stratton, Hastings apartment house landlord, from shutting off water and electric services and dispossessing his tenants.

Office of Rent Control Enforcement officials contended that Stratton told the 26 tenants of the building during June, without proper rent office procedure, that they must vacate by July 1, since he intended to remodel the building and that he directed all water and light for the apartment to be cut off as of that date. Enforcement officials said that this was a threatened violation of both the old and new rent control law in that it meant a reduction in services.

$13,000 Home Is First Prize In Exposition

The organized home builders in greater Washington will start construction next week of a five room model home in the center of the city, it was learned yesterday.

Situated on a Federal lot on 14th st., behind the District Building and east of the Commerce Department Building, the model home will be given away in a contest sponsored by the Home Show Exposition, to be held in the National Guard Armory, October 11-19.

The Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington is sponsoring the event, expected to be one of the largest home shows in the Nation.

Materials for the home will be contributed by members of the association. When completely furnished, it will be valued at approximately $13,000.

Firm Begins Big Projects In Maryland

An extensive home construction program in nearby Maryland was announced yesterday by Joseph Light Construction Co., 1436 Kennedy st. nw.

The firm currently has two projects under way: 30 dwellings in the vicinity of Central and Garland aves., Takoma Park, and 30 new homes near 63rd and Inwood sts., Cheverly, Md.

A 1000-home development, costing an estimated 13 million dollars to construct, is planned by the firm on a 200-acre site on New Hampshire ave. extended, near the White Oak Naval Ordnance Laboratory.

The Cheverly and Takoma Park dwellings are similar in appearance. All are two-story bricks, with three bedrooms, full basement, porches and landscaped lots. The price range is from $13,400 to $14,500. Some have been completed and sold.

Heat Waves Avoid Virginia Home Cooled by New Heating Device

By Conrad P. Harness

DURING one of last winter's biting cold waves this reporter journeyed to McLean, Va., to inspect a new-fangled device which reportedly was heating the six-room Cape Cod home of Everett P. Carman by extracting heat from cold well water.

After plowing through snowdrifts we found Carman had thrown away his coal shovel, paid off the fuel company and settled down to relax in warmth. At that time he boasted: "Come back next summer when it's boiling hot. You will see the "heat pump" cool the house then."

The recent heat wave and the current 90-degree temperatures recalled Carman's statement. The office thermometer read 92 degrees when we left for McLean.

One step inside the Carman house and we were ready to apply for a dealers' license to sell the "heat pump." The entire dwelling was tantalizingly cool and the air was dry. The atmosphere invited vim, vigor and vitality.

"How did it work during the three-day heat wave last month?" we asked of Mrs. Carman.

"What heat wave?" was the retort.

Silent Iceman

A SURVEY of the "heat pump" in the basement showed it silently, automatically and efficiently keeping the inside temperature at an average of 75 degrees while outside temperature gauges were attempting to blow their tops.

Carman, a Bureau of Mines fuel engineer, is owner of the first "heat pump" to be installed in a local home. The equipment has been in operation since January 26 and the sole cost has been for electricity. It takes no coal or oil.

It operates on what is technically known as the "reverse cycle" principle.

Here's the scheme for WINTER heating: Water is pumped from Carman's well, passed through a cooling apparatus, and lowered in temperature from about 60 to 55 degrees Fahrenheit, giving up five degrees of its natural heat. The latter is compressed, and by a reverse refrigeration system, heats the family mansion.

To the layman Carman explains it thusly: "When you fill ice trays to make ice cubes, your refrigerator draws all the heat from the water, turning it into ice. The heat is dissipated through coils. This system blows the heat through the home."

Protection from wintry blasts or summer heat comes from an automatic, electric heating or cooling plant known commercially as Marvair. The cool, or hot air is blown through the dwelling by means of a conventional forced air duct system. The plant works much like the ordinary household refrigerator—in reverse.

For summertime air-conditioning comfort, the process takes heat from the rooms and transmits it to the circulating water system in the same manner as do large air-conditioning units in the theaters and commercial establishments.

The Marvair unit can be set to start cooling automatically at any given temperature. Carman starts his system cooling when the inside temperature reaches 77 degrees; at 68 degrees it reverses itself and begins heating.

Scientific recording devices dot the Carman home. Instruments installed by Virginia Electric & Power Co. continuously measure the inside and outside temperatures. A look at the chart shows that on one occasion the outside gauge measured 100 degrees while the inside one showed 75 degrees.

Since this is the first summer the unit has been in operation only an estimate can be given as to the unit's monthly electrical cost. June cost approximately $5. Carman pointed out that a month of continual sweltering weather might up the figure to $10 or even $12.

The advantages of such a device were cited by Carman: (1) One unit serves to both cool and heat, whereas the cost of a separate furnace and air-conditioning unit would be prohibitive to the average family; (2) fully automatic; (3) an even flow of cool air at a preset temperature; (4) no fuel storage space.

Disadvantages were listed as the present high initial cost of the plant, now costing $1750 at the Muncie Gear Work, Inc., plant, Muncie, Ind. Carman's unit was an experimental model. The plant is not yet in full production.

YOUNG WAYNE CARMAN observes a scientific device recording the hourly temperature in the Carman home. The Marvair "heat pump" keeps the temperature at an even 75 degrees, takes moisture out of the air. Wayne is comfortable in a wool coat.

Heat pump cools the entire home of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Carmen at McClean, Va. The device is in the basement.

More Apartments Planned for Arlington

Arlington County's vast expanses of vacant acreage are still attracting apartment house builders. Newest project is a one million dollar 132-unit development of four buildings to be built on 13th rd. south at Walter Reed dr. It is expected to get under way within 60 days.

The project will be called Walter Reed Gardens. Walter Reed dr. will be a new four-lane street on the present site of the abandoned Old Dominion Railroad right of way.

The development will cover 6 acres with two- and three-story walk-up buildings. Density will be 25 families per acre. One hundred per cent off-street parking will be provided.

Owner is Walter Reed Gardens, Inc. Martin Bros. is the builder, Arthur Anderson, architect. The latter said the apartment floor plan provided for maximum efficiency in closet space and spaciousness.

Sixty per cent of the units will be two-bedroom apartments. The latter will have a large combined living-dining room. A few will have dining alcoves. Two-bedroom units will have five closets, plus linen closet.

Shrine Protected

The home of George Washington at Mount Vernon was insulated with mineral wool as a fire protection measure more than 20 years ago upon recommendation of the National Bureau of Standards.

Plan Your Electrical Wiring For Porch or Lawn Comfort

Heat relief recipe: Move the kitchen and dining room outdoors

YOU will spend more more of your waking—and sleeping—hours on the porch or lawn this summer if you use a little foresight in planning your electrical wiring. Enough convenience outlets should be available to plug in several lamps, a radio, clock, fan and cooking appliances.

While you're about it, consider the advantages of doing some of the housework, such as ironing, in these cooler out-of-doors areas. If this provides the answer to hot-weather ironing complaints, install a heavier circuit for high wattage appliances.

As for outlet placement, home wiring experts use this rule-of-thumb:

On porches at least one duplex convenience outlet should be installed every 15 feet of house wall. A central lighting fixture, wall switch controlled, also is considered a must for every 150 square feet of porch area.

On terraces you'll need special weatherproof convenience outlets on every 15 feet of house wall. They should be placed 18 inches above the floor lining according to electrical engineers.

As for terrace lighting, you'll need one light on the building wall or, if you prefer, on a centrally-located post. Best types should be switch-controlled from the house.

Clinton Suite, E St. Building Bids Rejected

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson must sweat out the summer heat like the rest of us. The government has rejected all bids from contractors to air condition and remodel the Secretary's suite in the Agriculture building.

Also rejected was a bid to remove a terra cotta cornice and erect a parapet wall on top of the Coast Guard Headquarters building, 1300 E. st. nw. The sidewalk area surrounding one corner of the structure has been roped off for six weeks since a portion of the cornice fell from the building's top, narrowly missing a bystander.

A spokesman for Public Buildings Administration said bids on the two projects were rejected mainly because "existing funds will be spent on more important projects."

National Engineering Co., Tower Building, was the sole bidder on the Coast Guard Headquarters building job. The firm asked $56,546.

Lee T. Turner, 3616 14th st. nw., was low bidder on the air-conditioning and remodeling of Anderson's suite. He asked $105,512.

5 Bids Received On Igloo Houses

Five bids were received by Defense Homes Corporation for sale of its 12 concrete igloo houses on Lee hghwy., near Falls Church, Va., according to William Ziegler, DHC general manager.

The bids "weren't too bad," Ziegler stated. Public announcement concerning disposal of the property will be made in approximately one to two weeks, he added.

The houses were built in 1942 as an experiment in housing for war workers.

Church Shortage Riles Episcopalians; They're Planning Small, $6000 Prefabs

Trenton, N. J., July 5 (AP).—The Board of Missions of the Episcopal Diocese of New Jersey announced today it had drawn plans for prefabricated churches.

Benjamin F. Faunce of Collingswood, a board member, said the move was prompted by continued shortage of some building materials. He said the prefabricated structures—durable, inexpensive and suitable for year-round services—had a seating capacity of 150 to 250, depending upon interior arrangement.

Estimated cost of the structures, Faunce said, was $6000 each, including a heating plant and sanitary conveniences.

Work to Begin Soon on Big Trade Center

Construction is expected to start within 60 days on a 14-store shopping center with a 600-foot frontage on Columbia pike at Fillmore st., Arlington, it was learned yesterday.

Architect Arthur Anderson, 1228 Connecticut ave. nw., said the project was expected to be finished within nine months after ground was broken.

To be called the Fillmore Gardens Shopping Center, it will be owned by the owners of the nearby 574-unit Fillmore Gardens apartment development.

Leases have been negotiated with the following concerns: Giant Food Store, Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., and S. S. Kresge Co. Dr. David Sherry will operate a drug store, according to the owners.

The site is now vacant ground. A builder has not yet been selected. Working drawings are nearing completion. Some of the stores will be air-conditioned from a central heating system, Anderson stated. There will be one two-story department store. All other stores will be one story.

Each store will be given a different architectural treatment, Anderson added. Exterior fronts will be of limestone and terra cotta.

Miami Boom Mark in View

Miami, Fla., July 5 (AP).—All previous building records in Miami and Miami Beach appear likely to be broken this year on the basis of figures compiled today.

Miami's permits for the first six months this year broke all earlier records, including those during the 1925 boom, while permits at Miami Beach reached the highest figure for any June on record.

Miami permits totaled $5,762,549 for June, bringing the year's total to almost $22,800,000.

June permits at Miami Beach totaled $2,967,140, the fourth highest month in the Beach's history.

Aluminum Is King In This Modern Home

AN ALUMINUM HOUSE designed by Edwin L. Howard, Westport, Conn., architect, now completing it in that New England community. Aluminum materials used include clapboards, shingles, bathroom tiling, acoustical ceiling panels and fluted sheet wainscoting in a basement rumpus room, and foil insulation. The siding is being painted. The roof will be left unpainted to take advantage of the material's reflective insulation. The Reynolds Metals Co. says 95 per cent of radiant heat is reflected by the aluminum. The metal is applied over wood sheathing, with concealed nailing and interlocking flanges for weatherproofing. The house has a floor area of 1500 square feet including 360 square feet of basement

$5,000,000 Takoma Park Group Planned

Prince Georges County will be the site of a 450-unit multiple housing development covering 22 acres at New Hampshire and Eastern ave., Takoma Park, it was learned yesterday.

Sponsors are Sadie Milestone, Oscar Driesen and Gerald Freedman. Builder is Standard Construction Co. Norman Kertzman is architect.

The project is expected to cost five million dollars. LHA has approved the first section of 101 apartments for FHA mortagage insurance, according to the District FHA office.

Construction is expected to start within four weeks and the owners predict the entire project will be finished within a year. Also planned is a 20-store shopping center, with theater, on New Hampshire ave., at the District Line.

The apartment project, to be called "Greenlawn Apartments," will be a garden type development of two and three-story walkups. Play arena will be provided for children. Rentals are expected to be an average of $80 per apartment.

The first section will be financed by the Metropolitan Mortgage Co. with an $800,000 FHA-insured mortgage.

New Kitchen Cabinets Have Concealed Lights

Steel kitchen cabinets with sliding doors of frosted glass, also have built-in concealed fluorescent lights which illuminate both cabinet interior and working surface below.

Added conveniences are rounded edges, two appliance outlets and switch, cup hooks, pegs and extra space for tall items, large plates.

Furniture Store Started in Wheaton

Opening of a $48,000 two-story and basement furniture store at 11262 Georgia ave. extended, near Wheaton, Md., is scheduled for the latter part of September, according to John Smith, owner.

Smith now operates Smith's House of Furniture, 6900 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda. Loss of his present lease prompted the new construction. The structure will have a stucco, glass and aluminum front with show windows prominently featured.

A beauty parlor will be located on the second floor. The building is now under contruction, said Smith. Day & Heck Co. of Bethesda is the builder.

Asparagus Success Depends on Summer Care

By James H. Beattie

EARLY spring is the harvest period for asparagus, but the plants require the most attention in mid-summer. Asparagus plants are usually set during early spring. This is written in the hope that asparagus plantings in Washington gardens will receive this care. Otherwise a disappointing crop of spears may be received next spring.

Now is the time for plants to be cultivated and protected from insect injury. Nourishment for next spring's crop must be stored in the roots during the remainder of the summer. Unless they are kept in a vigorous growing condition this food storage becomes impossible and a poor yield will result.

Weed control is most important. Asparagus plants cannot fight weed competition for moisture, sunlight and plant food and make a satisfactory growth. To neglect the asparagus bed after the cutting season is over is a great mistake. Weeds make impossible the proper use of fertilizer or effective control of asparagus beetles.

Partial control of weeds in the asparagus planting may be obtained by mulching with straw, leaves, lawn clippings or any other form of similar material. If mulch is used, more fertilizer is needed to assist in the decay of the fibrous material.

Mulch left between the plants during winter provides a hiding place for the asparagus beetles, a strong enemy. In autumn the undecayed mulch may be removed from around the plants and placed in the compost pile.

Hungry After Harvest

SOME gardners control small weeds during early spring by spreading cyanamid, a concentrated nitrogenous fertilizer, between the plants, using about a pound to each 100 square feet of surface. This material not only helps to control weeds but also adds nitrogen and calcium to the soil.

Cover crops, crimson clover, cowpeas, etc., are often sowed between the asparagus rows. These help to keep down weeds and their use, accompanied by liberal fertilization and irrigation when needed, will do much to lessen care of the crop.

Compost or fertilizer should be placed in a foot-deep trench, preparatory to planting of asparagus

Asparagus requires plant food after the harvest season. Plenty of organic matter in the soil surrounding the asparagus plants is a first requirement for good results. This point really goes back to the preparation of the soil before the plants are set. Digging a trench a foot or two deep and refilling it with a mixture of well-fertilized compost should be a preparatory task for the planting of asparagus. Any time during the remainder of the summer is suitable for the site preparation for setting asparagus plants next spring.

Well-decayed manure, poultry litter or garden compost, used either as a mulch or worked into the soil around the plant produces excellent results. Without the organic matter supplied by these materials, commercial fertilizers cannot exercise their full beneficial effects.

While fertilizer may be applied at any time during the season, it is especially beneficial during midsummer. It is then that the plant is building up the food reserves for next spring. The familiar 5-10-5 garden mixture, especially those containing "trace" elements, will produce excellent results.

A pound of the mixture to each 20 square feet is a liberal application. In addition a pound of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia to each 100 square feet may well be used, especially at the beginning of the cutting season.

Insect, Disease Control

THE ASPARAGUS beetles are responsible for many asparagus failures. General neglect of asparagus beds is commonplace; it causes many failures, but neglect to control asparagus beetles, despite excellent care otherwise, always causes failure.

The beetle is a slender, blue-black, quarter-inch-long beetle which emerges from hiding, usually in trash, and starts feeding on the young shoots as soon as they are up. Brown eggs are laid on the shoots and soon hatch into "worms." These also feed on the plant. Crooked, malformed shoots are often the unexpected result. Stems of foliage are literally stripped, which weakens and may eventually destroy the plant.

The common asparagus beetle has a near relative which is almost equally destructive. If the beetles are present and a good crop is to be expected next spring, they must be checked at once. The remedy, during cutting season, is to dust or spray with rotenone. After the cutting season the rotenone treatment may be continued or calcium arsenate or DDT may be employed.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Livingston

Although the United States Steel Corp. is sufficiently bullish on the outlook for business and profits to offer John L. Lewis a big pay boost to keep his miners at work; although the stock market has been larruping for the last month and a half, up on the average a half point a day, and although the National Association of Personnel Directors anticipate fewer strikes and work interruptions from now on—although all those events suggest a change in the Nation's economic tone, nonetheless leading economists are still pessimistic. They still count on a recession or depression by a 2-to-1 margin.

To be sure, they've been put off, in their pessimism. Last December, 12 out of 13 expected a recession, or at least a readjustment. They figured it would be clearly visible by now. Their hunch was that the key barometer of United States industrial health, the Federal Reserve Board index of production, would be down to 162. Instead it's up to 186, down only a soupcon from the high of 190 in March. So now they've raised the ante; they're calling for a decline to 171 by December and to 166 by June, 1948.

But Then an Upturn

The trend changes in the second half of next year (see chart). By December, 1948, the economists expect the index to be at 172. Presumably then the country will be rounding the turn into a long-pull stretch of postwar prosperity, which is generally talked of, in a vague, offhand way, as "likely to last three to five years."

The stock market is expected to herald the upturn in business. The Dow-Jones industrial stock average, now around 180, is expected to slip to 162 by December but then move up to 169 by June, 1948, and 179 by December, 1948. Thus, the forecasters can hardly be classed as stock market bulls. Probably they're still under the influence of the break last spring and fall.

Disunity grows. A full year ago—in June, 1946—all the economists were bullish, and hit the production index on the nose. Six months ago, the economists were 90 per cent bearish. But now they're mixed, though bearishness still preponderates. Here's the tally:

WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?

Economists see bear market in stocks near end; production is to drop, then turn up.

Data: Dow-Jones, Federal Reserve Board. Prepared for J. A. Livingston

Ten expect a depression—a drop of 20 per cent or more in the production index.

Ten expect a recession—a drop of between 10 per cent to 20 per cent.

Six expect a readjustment—a drop of less than 10 per cent.

Four are rampantly bullish, expecting a level or steadily rising trend in business.

Men of Influence

This dispersion of opinion, this tendency to shift from a depression-recession psychosis to a bullish or semibullish attitude, is significant. The economists who answered this questionnaire are in strategic positions to influence decisions of businessmen, Government officials, investors and labor leaders. They include Charles O. Hardy, adviser to the Joint Committee of the Economic Report; C. A. Sienkiewicz, president, Central-Penn National Bank, Philadelphia; Rufus Tucker, General Motors; Frank L. Valenta, vice president, Distributors Group, Inc.; Robert R. Nathan of Robert R. Nathan Associates; J. Frederic Dewhurst, Twentieth Century Fund and author of the recent monumental work, "America's Needs and Resources;" Boris Shiskin, American Federation of Labor.

Also, E. G. Bennion, Standard Oil Co. (N. J.); Alan H. Temple, vice president, National City Bank of New York; Woodlief Thomas, director of research and statistics, Federal Reserve Board; James F. Hughes, Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, members of the New York Stock Exchange; Herbert Stein, economist for the Committee for Economic Development, and winner of the $25,000 Pabst award; Donald R. Smith, partner, Scudder, Stevens & Clark, investment counsel, and others.*

Expect Farm Price Drop

The economists unquestionably took the oncoming boosts in coal and steel prices into account. Anticipating such things is what they're paid for. So it's natural that they'd bet on a larger drop in agricultural prices than in industrial pricese. Thus, they see all wholesale commodity prices off 9 per cent by the end of this year, 12 per cent by mid '48, and 14 per cent by the end of '48, but prices received by farmers are expected to be down 9, 16 and 20 per cent on the respective dates. These declines will not be fully translated to the cost of living. Rents will rise from now on, controls having been slackened. So the cost of living index is expected to drop only 4, 8 and 9 per cent by the above dates.

Merchandise profits are due to drop. The economists figure that department store sales will be off about 15 per cent during the next year and a half. But actual volume of goods moving over retail counters is expected to be unchanged. Bearing on this is the expectation that unemployment will more than double from current levels of two million. One economist estimates it will rise to 7½ million. Naturally that would shrink purchasing power.

But car-buyers will be as avid as ever. Passenger car output is expected to increase from 284,000 per month to 360,000. Despite the fact that newly built homes have recently been hard to sell, residential building contract awards will continue at about current levels. The forecast calls for a drop between now and December and again from next June to next December, but that's seasonal.

Interest rates are expected to rise moderately. Moody's Triple-A bonds, now selling to yield 2.53 per cent will yield 2.69 per cent at the end of 1948 and the cost of money in the commercial paper market will rise from 1 to 1.2 per cent. This has already been indicated by the recent action of the Reserve Board and the Treasury to free the bill market.

Consensus—Moderate Deflation

The summary of it all is simple enough. According to the consensus, we're in for a moderate deflation. The total production of goods and services, now at 209 billion dollars will drop to 187 billion dollars. And that will leave Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder worrying about a deficit again at the end of next year—assuming the election returns in November, 1948, don't install a Republican worrier in his place. But it will be small worry—69 million dollars a month as against 19 million dollars now. And in between, there'll be moderate Treasury surpluses.

Corn Reaches New All-Time Peak at $2.13

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—July corn soared 7½ cents to another all-time peak of 2.13 a bushel today in heavy trading. Wheat and oats also showed substantial gains, with July oats also hitting a new seasonal high of 1.02½.

There was considerable short covering and commission house buying. July corn continued tight, with almost 14 million bushels of contracts outstanding at the close of trading Thursday, and only about 400,000 bushels believed available for delivery.

Bullish factors in corn included forecasts for rain in parts of the corn belt, and a forecast by C. M. Galvin, crop statistician for James E. Bennett & Co., for a relatively small corn crop.

Wheat closed ¾ to 2⅝ cents higher than the previous finish. July 2.18¾@2.18⅝; corn was up 3⅜ to 7½ cents, July 2.12¾@2.13, and oats were 1⅛ to 1⅝ cents higher, July 1.02@1.02⅛.

Galvin predicted a corn crop of 2,682,000,000 bushels, compared with 3,287,927,000 harvested last year. He tentatively estimated corn acreage at 82,522,000, the smallest since 1894. The first Government estimate of the corn crop will be issued next Thursday. Traders said Government officials had been suggesting a possible crop of about 2,800,000,000 bushels.

There was considerable short covering and commission house buying. July corn continued tight, with almost 14 million bushels of contracts outstanding at the close of trading Thursday, and only about 400,000 bushels believed available for delivery.

Bullish factors in corn included forecasts for rain in parts of the corn belt, and a forecast by C. M. Galvin, crop statistician for James E. Bennett & Co., for a relatively small corn crop.

Wheat closed ¾ to 2⅝ cents higher than the previous finish, 2.18¾@2.18⅝; corn was up 3⅜ to 7½ cents, July 2.12¾@2.13, and oats were 1⅛ to 1⅝ cents higher, July 1.02@1.02⅛.

Galvin predicted a corn crop of 2,682,000,000 bushels, compared with 3,287,927,000 harvested last year. He tentatively estimated corn acreage at 82,522,000, the smallest since 1894. The first Government estimate of the corn crop will be issued next Thursday. Traders said Government officials had been suggesting a possible crop of about 2,800,000,000 bushels.

Gotham Hosiery Leases 3 Mills

New York, July 5 (AP)—Gotham Hosiery Co. has leased for long terms three homestead mills in the South built by the United States Government and bought in 1945 by the Hess-Taylor-Kreiss interests.

The mills, equipped exclusively with 54-gauge machines, are located at Jasper, Ala.; Crossville, Tenn., and Eleanor, W. Va.

1947 Production Of Auto Trucks To Set Record

Detroit, July 5 (AP).—The automobile industry this year expects to build 4,700,000 vehicles, including a new record of 1,100,000 trucks, according to the Automobile Manufacturers' Association (AMA).

Largest output in the industry's history was 5,360,000 vehicles made in 1929.

In its 1946-1947 automobile facts and figures yearbook issued today the AMA says last year's output of 3,090,000 vehicles in the United States was two-thirds of the 1941 total, but that replacement parts production to keep old cars running, exceeded all past levels with a wholesale value of $1,750,000,000.

June Freight Car Production Hits 5-Year Record

New York, N. Y., July 5.—Production of domestic freight cars reached a 5-year high in June with construction and delivery of 5514 units, compared with 3,929 in May, it was announced today by S. M. Felton, president of the American Railway Car Institute.

Of these, 4,217 were constructed in shops of the railway car builders and 1,297 in railroad shops. The June total represents a gain of 40 per cent over May production, and an improvement of 140 per cent over the 2,293 cars built in February, the 1947 low month.

Felton pointed out that June freight car production was the best since May, 1942, when the car company and railroad shops built 6,614 cars.

The month's figures for railway car construction reflect a substantially improved flow of steel and other materials to the car shops, Felton said.

The backlog of domestic freight cars now on order and undelivered reached 107,476 as of July 1, Felton said.

Stocks Score Gains Despite Profit Taking

New York, July 5 (AP)—Financial markets continued to press forward during the past short week while the lengthy advance inspired a certain amount of profit selling. It was well absorbed. The share division Thursday recorded its seventh successive average upswing.

All securities exchanges recessed Friday for the celebration of Independence Day and observed the usual Saturday suspensions.

Throughout the week stocks were benefitted by rising business optimism, hopes for a quick settlement of the coal controversy, and brightening chances for a tax relief bill and belief that the odds were for a normal summer rally.

The market has moved up in the majority of Julys over the past 50 years. Earnings and dividends were helpful. Oils touched peaks for the year or longer in almost every session as growing fuel shortages highlighted this group. Rails came to the fore on the outlook for favorable reorganization legislation in addition to prospects of boosted freight and passenger charges.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite showed a net gain of 2 points on the week at 66.1, best level since March 6. From the low of May 17, last, which was a bottom since Jan. 25, 1945, the index was up 7.6 points, or roughly $7,600,000,000 in quoted values. Volume for the four days was 4,191,355 shares compared with the previous five-day aggregate of 4,335,610.

Zenith Radio Reports

Zenith Radio Corp. and wholly owned subsidiaries reported yesterday for the fiscal year ended April 30 net profit of $594,452, equal to $1.21 a share, compared with a net loss of $169,506 in the 1946 fiscal year.

Continental Motors

Continental Motors Corp., and wholly owned subsidiaries reported yesterday for the quarter ended April 30 net loss of $621,430 against loss of $667,573 in the 1946 quarter.

Unscheduled Airlines Have Bleak Future

The Civil Aeronautics Administration has distributed a report on nonscheduled air carriers predicting a pessimistic future for the industry that mushroomed immediately after the war.

While there are about 3600 operators in the field, the CAA said, 15 per cent do 90 per cent of the business. Most of the remainder are "economically insignificant," it added.

It predicted that the nonscheduled operators "will carry a steadily diminishing portion of domestic passenger and freight traffic in 1947 as the scheduled airlines push sales and improve their facilities."

The import of the statement is that the newcomers to aviation achieved eminence in 1945 and 1946 to a large degree because the scheduled airlines were unable to accommodate passenger demand and did not realize the potentialities of air freight. This has changed.

The airlines, according to the CAA, have restored prewar standards of service and convenience, added new schedules and introduced new and larger planes. They are making "determined efforts to recapture as much of the small amount of traffic lost during 1946 as possilbe."

Nonscheduled carriers will expand further in the air freight field, but:

"On the other hand, the scheduled airlines have apparently now fully realized the revenue potentialities of air freight and are vigorously pushing plans to provide complete air cargo service."

By contrast, the nonscheduled carriers flew circles around the airlines in 1946 where feright was concerned. The report showed that 30 million ton-miles were flown by Slick Airways, National Skyways Freight, California Eastern, Air Cargo Transport, U. S. Airlines, Willis Air Service, Flamingo Air Service, Airborne Transport and others not listed.

The best the scheduled lines could show was 14,830,000 miles.

There are two categories of nonscheduled operators established by the Civil Aeronautics Board. The noncertificated irregular air carriers carry passenges and property on an unscheduled basis. The noncertificated cargo carriers are allowed to operate schedules. The latter are shown in the report to be the most significant nonscheduled category.

At last count, CAA said, nonscheduled carriers operated 16,850 planes; 14,460 single-engine, 2190 twin-engine, and 200 four-engine.

Because of bankruptcies, mergers and entrance of newcomers, it is difficult to keep an accurate account of the size of the industry, CAA said.

All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 22d day of April, A. D. 1948; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under its hand this 17th day of June, 1947. NATIONAL BANK OF WASHINGTON. By RALPH G. WILSON, Assistant Trust Officer. Attest: (Seal.) THEODORE COGSWELL, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. June21,28July5

LOUIS A. ZUCKERMAN, NORMAN H. BARTOW, Attorneys,
1331 G St. N.W.

Filed June 19, 1947. Charles. E. Stewart. Clerk.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Katie Lucille Hines, plaintiff, vs. Joseph C. Hines, defendant. No. CA 1009-47. The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce on the grounds of conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude. On motion of the plaintiff it is this 19th day of June, 1947, ordered that the defendant, Joseph C. Hines, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. JAMES M. PROCTOR, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By CLARA F. CONNELL, Deputy Clerk. June21,28July5

FOR BEST SERVICE PLACE YOUR ADS EARLY

The steadily growing volume of classified ads in The Post, combined with the practice of many advertisers who phone late in the day, is making it difficult to devote the time and assistance to these late callers which is needed to prepare the most effective possible copy.

To assure receiving this help from your ad-taker, please try to call during the morning or early afternoon.

BARNABY
I'm exhausted . . I'd like to get away from it all! Let's rent the cottage I heard about today . . .
All right.
It'll be good for Barnaby, too. New sights and new sounds might take his mind off that little pixie— That's VERY important.
Would you like to go to the seashore for a few weeks, son . . . ?
Yes, Pop.
My personal preference is a mountain retreat— But the seashore is nice too. Er . . . Deal me in, m'boy.

"RANLEIGH"
Southern Colonial Mansion,
On Approximately 15 Acres

1½ MILES FROM CHAIN BRIDGE, NEAR LANGLEY, VA.

CONVENIENT TO CITY, 15 MINUTES BY CAR.

One needs only an inspection to prove the desirability, beauty and restfulness of this delightful countryside so near the Nation's Capital; century-old trees, formal garden, fine shrubbery, large boxwood, tennis courts, spring and small stream (enough water to build swimming pool) comprises the grounds, with 517-ft. frontage on hard-surfaced road, but most attractive entrance to property; the mansion, set far back from the road, was built in 1929 on an old homesite, charming in design, outside and inside, spacious and immaculate throughout, the way it has always been kept; now vacant and ready for occupancy.

First floor—Reception hall, 16x17, interesting stairway, drawing room, 21x27, charming Colonial fireplace, beautiful woodwork, cornice and bookshelves, large screened porch overlooking garden; library, 17x17, most inviting; fireplace, a complete bath; dining room, 21x18, fireplace and exquisite mantel, chair rail and woodwork, opening on an arched "breezeway" to a 2-car garage; large butler's pantry, large equipped kitchen, storage cupboard, cocktail pantry.

Second floor—Master bedroom, fireplace, opening on sundeck which overlooks garden; luxurious private bath, dressing room, 3 huge, equipped, efficient closets; 4 other large bedrooms, 2 other baths (all baths have extra linen storage); rear stairway, large, insulated, floored attic; basement, bedroom, ground level, bath, laundry room, furnace room, oil h.-w. h., all pipes insulated, storage room, 2 guest or servant's rooms and bath over garage; there is an old smoke house and 2 barns.

The house is equipped with telephone jacks and servant's bells; convenient public and private schools and marketing; price and terms upon application; shown at anytime by appointment.

INVEST IN A PERMANENT VACATION HOME AT

Drum Point Beach

Washington's newest and largest beach development offers 2,200 acres of playground, including approximately 6 miles of beautiful shore front with miles of clean, wide, white sand beach bordered by tall majestic hardwood trees.

Enjoy clean wholesome living all summer long—not far from the teeming summer steaming city are sands of opportunity beckoning you to a summer of good living at DRUM POINT BEACH—an enchanting playground of 2,200 acres, including miles of white sand beach and 4 fresh-water lakes bordered by majestic hardwood trees. Here is your chance to own a home where you can retreat at the end of the business day—to relax and enjoy the restfulness of DRUM POINT BEACH.

The beauty of DRUM POINT BEACH has been preserved in the many secluded spots off the beaten path where one may place a cozy cottage and still have a wide outlook over the sparkling blue water of Chesapeake Bay.

Large beautiful wooded sites at predevelopment prices, some with riparian rights, make DRUM POINT BEACH a sound permanent vacation investment. Every property owner has the privilege and use of approximately 6 miles of shore fronting on the salt water of Chesapeake Bay and the Patuxent River, plus the use of 4 silvery, spring-fed fresh-water lakes teeming with fish.

DRUM POINT BEACH has one of the finest all-year-round harbors in the Chesapeake Bay area where yachtsmen may leisurely indulge their hobby—sun bathers and swimmers have unbounded areas for sport—Izaak Walton fans are bid welcome by the fresh-water lakes teeming with fish.

When Scholars Meet

Hessler Photos

UNDER towering trees at Mr. and Mrs. Norman Littell's house in Arlington, Va., guests gathered last Sunday to meet Lord and Lady Elton, visitors from England. Lord Elton, secretary of the Rhodes Trust, had been at Princeton for the reunion of Rhodes Scholars, the first since 1933. Many of the guests at the cocktail party are, like the host, Oxford graduates

Holcombes Keep Cool in Africa By Shifting With the Climate

By Marie McNair

AFTER more than three years' absence from Washington, Mrs. Thomas Holcombe finds it still pretty much the same city as when she left.

The wife of General Holcombe, our Minister to South Africa, skipped off yesterday for Rose Croft, her country place in Maryland. She spent a few days with her sister, Miss Dora Clover, here. Rose Croft will serve only as her headquarters. She'll be coming into town often to see her friends.

As the wife of a Marine Corps officer, Mrs. Holcombe has lived all over the world.

The Holcombes move climatically with the South African government. South from Pretoria in January to the other capital, Capetown, where they stay until June. In Pretoria they have their own house.

"The United States is buying property, and when it's feasible to build, we'll have our own legation in Pretoria," she says, adding: "What a heavenly climate!"

Comparable to Washington in the good old days, Pretoria has something of the atmosphere of the small town. There is little or no industry, and government is the principal business. The shopping center is concentrated in the valley, while in the high hills surrounding the city are private residences and state buildings.

Flowers bloom in profusion; the temperature rarely drops to freezing level.

Johannesburg, higher than Pretoria and 37 miles to the south, is the "Miracle City," as Mrs. Holcombe describes it. Only 60 years old, it is built over the fabulous gold mines and is as modern as tomorrow.

General in New York

GENERAL HOLCOMBE, incidentally the first full general in the Marine Corps, is in New York at the moment but is looking forward to joining Mrs. Holcombe at Rose Croft in a few days.

Surrounded by the quiet waters of St. Marys River, Rose Croft is a charming rambling house noted for its English box. There are more than a hundred acres too, with tobacco as its paying crop, and smaller farms of wheat and corn.

The estate fell into a state of neglect while the Holcombes were away. It's now under the management of their son, Frank, once one of Washington's popular beaux, now a real dirt farmer, and loving it. But the one thing missing at Rose Croft to make happiness complete for Mrs. Holcombe, is Slowboat, the cruiser, which was sold before they left the country.

When General Holcombe was Commandant of the Marine Corps, one of their greatest pleasures was to fill the boat with friends, and steam slowly down the Potomac to the Eastern Shore.

Farringtons Renovate Home

WHILE their house on Kalorama Circle is being renovated, Joseph Farrington, delegate from Hawaii, and Mrs. Farrington are at the Mayflower.

They gave a party in the Pan American room yesterday to say farewell to Blake and Deena Clarke, who are to take off for Hawaii tomorrow.

The Farringtons and the Clarkes had reason to celebrate yesterday. Blake Clarke's book, "Hawaii, the Forty-ninth State" came out just before the House of Representatives voted to recognize the present Territory as such.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke both lived in Hawaii, met and were married there. Both are writers and their trip this summer to the islands is to fulfill certain journalistic assignments.

Members of the journalism fraternity were among yesterday's guests, for Mr. Farrington started his newspaper career in Washington. Before being elected Hawaiian Delegate he was publisher of a Honolulu paper.

Close friends from the Hill who were in the group of 100 or more were Representative and Mrs. Leroy Johnson, Representative and Mrs. Lowell Stockman, Representative and Mrs. Joseph Mansfield, Representative and Mrs. Sid Simpson, Representative Frank Barrett and Representative Norris Poulson, whose wives have gone home for the summer; Representative and Mrs. Walt Horan.

Others there were Mr. and Mrs. George Vournas, James Landis, Jean Bellard of the French Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Eric Beecroft, Roy James, Mr. and Mrs. Rex Lee, Mr. and Mrs. C. Girard Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Silverman.

Just How Long Is a Lady's Skirt?

By Peggy Preston

WHITHER goest the hemline? Is it to be 10, 12 or 15 inches from the floor? Or dare we leave it where it is? Just what is the leveling-off spot in this latest scramble for feminine chic?

One guess is as good as another at this writing, for the fact is the ladies are confused. Regardless of violent protests from the male population, women have made up their minds to "follow the herd" in this matter of longer skirts. Trouble is they don't know exactly where to draw the line.

Rebels in Ranks

Then there are those "rebels" within their own ranks who are further confusing the issue by refusing to lower their skirts at all. Like the girl who went into a local store to buy a new slip. The saleswoman urged her to get one of the new, longer length garments, to conform with fashion dictates. Unimpressed, the customer ignored the suggestion. She intended to keep her skirts right smack at the knee line.

No one can blame the girl with the goodlooking legs for clinging to the old line. In our opinion she should stick to her guns. But, alas, too few American women are so blessed. The slightly longer hemline improves the average female figure. It adds height and dignity to the short woman, conceals leg and knee defects of others.

But whatever the state of her figure, the Little Woman has another problem. There are those contrary males to wrangle with. Many a family crisis has

Syria Has New Envoy In D. C.

By Elizabeth Maguire

THERE is a new Minister at the Syrian Legation. Faiz Bey El-Khouri, brother of U. N. Representative Faris Bey El-Khouri, arrived in town several days ago. He is his country's former envoy to Moscow, and once taught law at Syrian University.

The retiring Minister, Dr. Costi K. Zurayk, was most popular in Washington. He and his attractive wife are already in New York, ready to sail for home. Dr. Zurayk has looked forward for some time to returning to his work as professor of Arabic history at American University in Beyruth.

FROM the shores of the Red Sea this week will come Prince Abdullah, defender of the faith, and sixth son of the Imam of Yemen. He will be a guest of the Government at Blair House. A colorful figure, his native costume is an ankle-length white coat, belted and worn with white turban and dagger, and a green scarf is worn across the shoulders.

The Prince, in his middle forties, is of medium height and rather plump. He wears a small beard edging his face. Since 1945 he has lived in Cairo, serving as the Imam representative handling relations with other Arab states. Last May, the first American plane to land in Yemen flew the Prince home to discuss with his 81-year-old father this trip to America.

He is coming to study methods of modernizing his country. Road, harbor, medical and irrigation projects are among those planned.

The Prince is the first Yemeni

John Paul Jones Medal To Be Presented Today

By Bessie Hackett

THE NAVY holds the spotlight in service set activities this weekend with the commemoration of the 200th birthday of that great naval hero, John Paul Jones.

Bicentennial observances are being held all over the country, but the national celebration will take place in nearby Fredericksburg, Va., where the early American sea fighter lived at the time of his appointment as a lieutenant in the Continental Navy on December 22, 1775.

Those driving down to the program this afternoon must remember to keep an eye on their watches—the observance is scheduled for 4 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, or 5 p. m., daylight time.

Gold braid and summer whites will glisten in James Monroe High School as the medal awarded by Congress to John Paul Jones in 1787 is formally presented 155 years after his death. The dies, made by the famous French medalist, Dupre, somehow survived the years and, since 1939, when they were returned to the United States Government, have been on exhibit at the Naval Academy below the crypt holding the remains of John Paul Jones.

The gold medal recently struck from the casts bears a likeness of the head of the naval hero on one side and his gallant ship, the Bon Homme Richard, on the other. The medal will be presented by Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King to Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., superintendent of the academy.

The Mayor of Fredericksburg has invited flag officers of the Navy and general officers of the Army and Marine Corps to be guests of the city and join its citizens in paying tribute to John Paul Jones. The ceremonies will take place in the stadium of the James Monroe High School and music will be furnished by the United States Navy Band under the baton of Lieut. Comdr. Charles Brendler.

Halsey, Blandy to Speak

Speeches will be delivered by Fleet Admiral William F. Halsey and Admiral William H. P. Blandy. Rear Admiral William N. Thomas, chief of chaplains, will give the invocation. The Army will be represented by the commanding officer of Fort Belvoir, Maj. Gen. William M. Hoge, and Mrs. Hoge, and the Marine Corps by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clifton B. Cates. Others attending will include Vice Admiral and Mrs. William M. Fechteler, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Earle W. Mills, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Waldon L. Ainsworth of Norfolk, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles T. Joy from the Naval Proving Grounds at Dahlgren, Rear Admiral and Mrs. J. W. Roper, Rear Admiral Glenn Davis, chief of the Potomac River Naval Command, with Mrs. Davis, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Alfred M. Pride, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas L. Sprague, Capt. H. A. Baldridge, director of the Naval Academy Museum, and Mrs. Baldridge; Capt. John B. Heffernan, director of Naval History, and Mrs. Heffernan; Capt. E. B. Dexter, assistant director of Navy information with Mrs. Dexter; Col. A. S. Quintard, USA, commanding officer of Camp A. P. Hill in Caroline County, with Mrs. Quintard. Mem-

Miss Judd, Mr. Stewart Are Married

IN A gown of candlelight satin, Miss Mary Margaret Judd, daughter of Col. and Mrs. John H. Judd of Washington, became the bride yesterday of Lincoln A. Stewart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Stewart of Des Moines, Iowa. The ceremony took place at 4 p. m., at Fort Myer Chapel, Chaplain G. J. Lock officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her full length veil of ivory tulle fell from a halo of seed pearls, and her bouquet was of white carnations and stephanotis.

Mrs. R. B. Myers attended her sister as matron of honor. Little Pamela Ann Myers, niece of the bride, was flower girl. Col. Myers was best man, and the ushers were Lieut. Richard Wright, Lieut. John H. Judd, jr., and Lieut. Joseph Davis.

Mrs. Stewart was graduated from Western High School and attended Mississippi State College. She has just returned from a year in Germany with the U. S. Army Air Forces, where she served as court reporter. Mr. Stewart attended Drake University and the University of Iowa. He was graduated from Iowa State College in 1942, receiving a BS in industrial engineering. He served as captain in the AAF four years, and was stationed overseas in the European Theater, where he met Miss Judd.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the Women's City Club.

The couple will reside in Parlin, N. J.

Town Talk

By Eva Hinton

CLUBS form a very important part of the social and civic life of modern America. There are almost as many different kinds of clubs as there are different types of people who use them. And Washington has its share of clubs, both usual and unusual.

There is the Metropolitan Club where members, all of them men, can live and where the Capital's men of distinction frequently lunch.

There's the Sulgrave Club, primarily for women, which is a favorite place for debut parties, dances and wedding receptions. It, too, of course, has living quarters.

Entirely for dining, lunching, and entertaining in the homelike manner is the exclusive 1925 F St. Club. The equally exclusive and older Alibi Club, of Washington's cavedwelling clan, can claim food as good as that served at the F St. Club plus a certain amount of quaintness. (The wooden bucket in the middle of the big table at the Alibi Club where members and their guests toss their oyster shells is, along with the oysters, a tradition of the Club.)

There's the ultra exclusive 1718 H st. Club, whose members, no doubt, would not even care for the publicity and of whom I will be sparing with words. A group of young American diplomats, all of whom became famous, organized the club many years ago. Today there are only three or four of the charter group still living. Each member has his silver cup upon the mantel and the walls of the rooms are lined with photographs of men who helped make American history.

Then there are the clubs concerned with political or intellectual pursuits such as the Cosmos Club, the Arts and Letters Club, which gives scholarships to students of music and the arts, and the Gridiron Club, limited to fifty distinguished journalists.

OF ALL the golf and country clubs in and around Washington, the Chevy Chase Club is the most exclusive, possibly because it has more rules and regulations than a boarding school, but probably because the rules, being traditional and well thought out, make it a pleasant place to enjoy sports or social life without getting mutually in your friends' hair.

But the newest and most unusual club is the Rehoboth Beach and Swimming Club for an "older group" from 13 to 17 years old. Teen-agers, themselves, manage the club and arrange semiweekly dances, picnics and oyster roasts. They are also the proud patrons of their own juke box and coke bar.

Headquarters for these activities is the spacious and attractive building which was the prewar Rehoboth Beach Club. It was cut neatly in three sections, dragged about 300 yards across the Bethany Beach road, and put together again beside sheltered Rehoboth Bay, without even a broken chandelier.

The club's activities include sailing lessons on the shallow, landlocked bay. Daniel S. Holder, popular master and rowing coach of St. Andrew's School for Boys in Middletown, Del., supervises the program.

At Harvard, Mr. Holder was a football star and member of the scull crew.

He gave up a seat on the New York Stock Exchange to follow an urge to teach. He is jolly, a good sport, and the "kind of a fellow that guys admire."

Brown-eyed, blonde Mrs. Holder, with Mrs. Virginia Sherwood, manages a nursery school.

Rehoboth has for decades been a sort of Washington summer annex, its beaches given over during the week entirely to small and not-so-small fry and their mamas; with visiting papas over the weekend.

Simple, Old-Fashioned Food Popular

'Blue Plate' Special In Society . . . .

By Ruth Davis Silcox

DID you see what we saw? Right smack between the Filet Mignon and the Lobster Newberg on a recent $100-a-plate-dinner menu was, of all things, old-fashioned cornbread! It seems that the high-priced chefs realize the importance of the old-time foods to satisfy the inner man, even the inner man who is clothed in white tie and tails.

Right after that menu appeared, we noticed that Dr. George Gallup, in his Nation-wide poll, proclaimed steak and apple pie the Nation's favorites when deciding what to have for dinner.

About the time when we were wondering if we were observing a trend toward the old-fashioned foods, we saw something which convinced us. We saw a well-known newspaper editor grow misty eyed at the mere mention of cream pie. As he gazed wistfully into the past, he regretfully said, "I haven't tasted cream pie in 20 years."

That did it! We knew the old-fashioned foods were in.

Homey as Apple Pie

WHEN we refer to old-fashioned foods we are speaking of those that mother and grandmother, in their better moments, used to make. Mother probably did take a swing at Croutes of Caviar or Eggs a la Dijon, but that phrase, "Like mother used to make" was never applied to those dishes. No, indeed, mother is fondly remembered for her cinnamon rolls, her apple pie and creamy, crisp cole slaw.

But to get back to that cream pie. Of course, we could never prove this, but we suspect that the very first cream pie was made when somebody's Aunt Abigail, on a trip to her shadowy cave or basement, discovered that she had just lots of sweet cream on hand, and no dessert for supper. By running her finger around the several crocks of milk covered with thick, golden cream she would determine the one which must be used first, lest it sour. That cream on the cool crock of milk was used to make the very first cream pie.

Real old time cream pie contains no fancy ingredients,—just those found in all kitchens 50 years ago. And it is just as simple as anything to make.

GRANDMA'S CREAM PIE

Just line a pie pan with pastry and make a nice fluted edge. Now, stir together these ingredients for the filling:

6 tablespoons of flour; level, that is ½ cup of sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups of coffee cream or rich top milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix the flour, sugar and salt together well. Gradually add the cream, a little first and stir so there will be nary a lump. When the filling is smooth and creamy, add the vanilla and pour into your uncooked pie shell. Sprinkle with a little cinnamon and bake. Start it baking in a hot oven, 425 degrees F., and after 10 minutes drop the temperature to 350 and bake for 30 minutes.

They Eat It Anyway

IT IS A toss-up in our minds as to whether cream pie is better served warm from the oven or chilled before serving.

It seems that many of our old time recipes were heavy on the cream. Grandma may not have had fruits and vegetables flown in before breakfast with which to embellish her salads, but she usually had lots of cream. Occasionally she didn't get it all used up before it soured, refrigeration methods being what they were. When this happened she made sour cream dressing—and along with it, a reputation for herself.

As the weather turns hot, we honestly can't think of anything more refreshing to eat than chilled finely shredded cabbage which has had some equally chilled sour cream dressing poured over it just before it is brought to the table. If you really want to do this cole slaw as grandma did it, shred your cabbage thinly with a sharp knife, add a hint of minced onion and place in a closed refrigerator dish for an hour or two before serving. If you are a forehanded lass, you may mix your dressing at the same time and store in the refrigerator in a separate closed container.

SOUR CREAM DRESSING

½ cup of sour cream
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
(pepper too, if desired)

Mix all of the ingredients thoroughly and chill. You may substitute sweet cream for the sour cream in the recipe with excellent results. If you do use sweet cream however, it is better, to mix the dressing immediately before use to avoid curdling and separation.

Come Friday, grandma usually baked bread. In order to have a delicacy for the weekend she would save out some of the dough and make cinnamon rolls. And what cinnamon rolls!

'Goo-ie' Cinnamon Rolls

PREPARE roll dough by your favorite recipe. When dough is ready to make out into rolls proceed, as follows: Roll dough out into a rectangle approximately 6 by 14 inches and not more than ¼-inch thick. This amount will make two 8-inch round pans of rolls. Spread the dough with softened butter or margarine, cover with brown sugar and sprinkle with cinnamon. Roll so that the roll is 14 inches long when finished.

Now, to prepare the pans: Melt 2 tablespoons of butter or margarine in the bottom of each baking pan, add 6 to 8 tablespoons of brown sugar, sprinkle with cinnamon and add enough water to make the sugar the consistency of maple syrup. Go slowly, it doesn't take much. Cut the cinnamon rolls about ½-inch thick and dip to top of each into the syrup in the pan before setting them in the syrup. Put them far enough apart so they can double in size. If sugar is a problem, ½ cup of syrup—pancake or maple, could be used in the pan instead of the brown sugar and water.

Set in a warm place to rise and when double in size bake at 375 degrees F. for 20 to 25 minutes. Turn out of pan immediately so that all of the syrup will stick to the rolls.

A creamy smooth dessert, enlivened by the tartness of strawberries and the crunchiness of macaroons, is macaroon strawberry whip. This dairy delicacy can be frozen in your own refrigerator and will provide a cool, refreshing finale for the meal

Ask Anne ' Your Questions on Homemaking

Just how safe is the use of carbon tetrachloride as a dry cleaning fluid? D. G. M.

Carbon tetrachloride is not recommended for use in large quantities—as, for instance, in the immersion of a garment—because the fumes are harmful if breathed continuously. However, when properly used in small quantity as a spot remover, this solvent is perfectly safe. It should be used in a well-ventilated room or out-of-doors. Carbon tetrachloride is an excellent grease solvent and, in contrast with gasoline and benzine, is noninflammable.

Can you tell me how scorch from ironing may be removed from a pair of brown wool trousers? W. A. P.

Woolen material that has been scorched can seldom be restored to its original condition. If the fibers are not badly damaged, it may help to brush the scorched place with emery paper. Sometimes scorch marks disappear with repeated dry cleaning, but the material is more vulnerable where it was scorched.

Please tell me how I may restore the antique bronze finish on the pulls of my corner cupboard. I cleaned them with brass cleaner, not thinking that it would remove the bronze finish. S. B. A.

Paint which will give the pulls an antique bronze finish can be purchased in paint stores. It usually comes in the form of a powder to be mixed with a bronzing liquid.

How can you remove dye spots from a fabric without injuring the original color? I have a pink chambray dress with white polka dots. Another dress, which I had just dyed bright yellow, ran into the pink dress while I was washing them. The pink dress now has two large yellow spots which are most noticeable on the white polka dots. M. L. T.

You may be able to remove the dye stains by soaking the dress in water for 10 to 12 hours, then washing in heavy soapsuds and spreading it in the sun to dry. If this isn't effective, try hydrogen peroxide. Test first on an inconspicuous part of the dress as it may affect the pink dye. Use the "bowl method" in bleaching with peroxide. Here's how: Stretch the stained fabric over a bowl of water, securing with an elastic band. Moisten the stain with clear water applied with a medicine dropper. Drop hydrogen peroxide on the stain, using a different dropper. Let stand for one minute. Follow with water, using original dropper. Then rinse thoroughly in water.

How can I get paint (or perhaps it's Kem-tone) off the bricks in my fireplace? I have already tried a commercial paint remover prepared especially for bricks. It loosened the paint in one spot, but that's all. N. E. S.

It seems likely that the spots aren't paint, since the commercial paint remover did not prove effective. Working on the theory that they're Kem-tone, try using a stiff brush and very hot water to remove them. Dip the brush in the water and hold against the spots for several seconds. Repeat the process until the spots are loosened. Then scrub well.

Kindly tell me how to restore the original luster on the outside of aluminum pans. I submerged a couple of pans in water to soak prior to washing, and the outer surfaces now look quite dull. G. A.

Fine steelwool pads and soap provide the best and easiest method for cleaning and polishing the outside of most aluminum cooking vessels. However, if the aluminum is of the very shiny, highly polished type, use silver polish.

I am making a black faille suit and, in pressing it, have made one seam shiny on the right side. Is there any way I can remove this shine? How should I press this suit?

Rubbing the seam with a cloth dipped in vinegar may be effective in removing the shine. Air the suit well afterward to get rid of the vinegar smell. It's best to press your faille suit on the wrong side, using a pressing cloth for touching up the right side wherever necessary. Be sure your iron is not too hot. Always test the tip of the iron on a free edge of the fabric before going ahead with the pressing to make sure the iron is not too hot. When pressing pockets, seams, or other double thicknesses, using light pressure on the iron. A well-padded ironing board will also help to prevent shine.

How can I remove gold radiator paint from a plaster portrait in relief. I am sure there is a thin coat of shellac under it. I tried to remove it with alcohol. It did take the paint off the smooth places but not out of the crevices. C. N. J.

Did you use a brush in trying to clean the relief portrait with alcohol? A stiff toothbrush should be helpful in getting the paint out of the crevices. If the paint still remains after a thorough cleaning with alcohol, try a commercial paint and varnish remover.

Please advise me how to remove a spot on a yellow chambray dress which was caused by a greasy particle of food. Also, please tell me how to clean the bottom of my iron when starch sticks to it.

Use gasoline, benzine, or carbon tetrachloride on the greasy spot on your dress. Place a pad of clean cloth or a white blotter beneath the stain and sponge with a clean cloth, moistened with the grease solvent. Work from the wrong side of the material in order to push the grease out rather than to rub it into the material. Use light, brushing motions, working from the outside of the spot toward the center. Spread or "feather out" the solvent into the cloth around the stain until there is no definite edge. Then pat dry with a clean cloth.

You can remove the starch from the working surface of your iron with beeswax. Apply to the cold, disconnected iron, then remove the wax with soapsuds or a mild scouring powder. Rinse with a damp cloth and dry. Be careful not to get any water in the electrical connections.

You stated in your column of June 19 that the various vaporizers are not effective in a closet which is opened daily. Will you please suggest something which would be effective? L. B. H.

A "residual" spray of 5 per cent DDT solution is most effective in ridding clothes closets of moths. Residual sprays are those which leave a number of poisonous crystals on surfaces, making them deadly for insects crawling over them. Numerous sprays of this type are on the market. Check labels before buying to be sure the spray you select contains 5 per cent DDT. Spray the floor, walls and ceiling of your closet well. You can also spray DDT solution lightly on clothes without injuring any fabric that can be drycleaned. Too much of the solution may leave a white deposit on dark fabrics, but it can be removed by brushing or cleaning. A thorough spraying with DDT solution every few weeks will keep your closet free of moths.

Recreation Rests Mother

It is well for Mother to get away from the home for recreation with women of her own age, but it is also well for her to consider the things outside from which she will derive the most pleasure and not fill her days with things that crowd her to the point where she is nervous. This is one place where it will pay Mother to be a bit selfish in her activities so her value to the home is not impaired and she herself a bit bored when she gets out.

Silent Treatment Bad

Never try punishing the child by the method of not speaking to him for a length of time. This is a childish cruel way that the child will never forget. It means he has lost his parent for the time being and he cannot understand it or figure out the reason of it all if he is a straightforward boy. Surely there is a more intelligent method to replace this that will not take away a child's respect for his parent.

Girl Has Uneasy Feeling That Her Fiance Doesn't Really Love Her; Though He Swears Devotion, He Seems Closer to Her Mother

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I go with a grand young man who is liked and admired by everyone. I love and respect him very much; in fact, I often think, too much.

The trouble is that often I feel he doesn't love me. I feel as if something were missing when I'm with him. I like little attentions and a few moments to ourselves, which Don says aren't necessary if we love each other.

Don works for my father, which means I see him quite often and never tire of it. I'd like to see him alone, but there's always the family. True, we've had some very sweet evenings alone, but they have been few and far between.

My mother has a habit of telling me at dinner how ungrateful I am, etc., and Don is always there and agrees with her. I asked him once if he ever thought I was right, and he said that if he ever did, he would speak up for me; but he never has. Quite often I think he forgets me and once I offered to return his ring.

Mother, Fiance Talk Down to Her

HE INSISTS that he loves me and says the last thing he wants is for us to break up. If we were to break up I know I'd be very sorry, because I love him more than anything. Mother and Don get along wonderfully. He pays her the little attentions which I feel should be mine.

At first I didn't mind this so much, because Don's mother is dead; but they have long talks together and leave me out. Why? Because they think of me as a child. I've tried to "have it out" and convince them I'm not; but I'm afraid my revolts have only strengthened their belief.

If I'm wrong, what can I do to make myself see the whole situation through rose-colored glasses? E. C.

Girl's Feeling Seems Justified

DEAR E. C.: Your intuition is sound, of course. Don doesn't love you, really and truly. His courtship of you is motivated chiefly—thus far at least—by his interest in your mother. It gives him socially orthodox opportunity to spend much time in her company.

If he is in love with anybody, he is in love with her for the time being. This may seem to you a flabbergasting statement, but after all, it's not uncommon for young men—anywhere from 18 to 35—to be fascinated by, or strongly attracted to, a much older woman.

In such cases it sometimes happens that the woman is old enough to be the man's mother, but that doesn't detract from her emotional appeal in the young man's eyes. "Beauty lies in the eyes of the beholder," you know; and not infrequently, a young man's love-ideal is unconsciously associated with the mother-image.

You've noted that Don pays your mother those little attentions you feel should be yours; also that they have long talks together, such as he never engages with you, etc.—all of which proves that he is decidedly more her courtier than yours, whether or not he is fully aware of the drift and significance of his performance.

Signs Indicate Mother Is Rival

HERE I'm reminded of an Englishwoman's anecdote about a romance in her family. A certain young bachelor amiably courted a maiden, 18, and after six months proposed. The maiden replied, "Don't be silly. You're in love with mother." He looked dashed, stroked his chin and then remarked, "By Jove! I believe you're right." A marriage followed, with mother the bride.

Back to your case, it isn't Don but rather your mother who is unscrupulously playing you false. Actually she is jealous of you in respect to Don,—jealous of your youth, which includes your right to be his sweetheart.

She is voicing catty rivalry in habitually disparaging you at dinner when Don is present; also being dishonorably competitive in pointedly treating you as a child and encouraging him to do the same. And sad to say, such behavior on the part of mothers isn't too uncommon, either. Many a girl's matrimonial chances have been spoiled for years by a slyly beau-snatching mother.

There's no point in feeling aggrieved with Don; but neither any value in trying to wear blinders to what goes on. I've stated my views mainly in the hope of unmasking your mother to herself,—thinking possibly if she sees her ignoble behavior through disinterested eyes, she may change her tactics and help you win Don's whole heart. M. H.

Admiral, Mrs. Rawlings Feted Before Leaving for New Post

Rear Admiral and Mrs. N. L. Rawlings have gone to Newport News, Va., to live, where the admiral has accepted an executive position with the Newport News Shipbuilding Co. He was separated from the Navy July 1st, after more than 30 years of service.

A party was given in his honor before he left at the Officers' Service Club by members of the Naval Shipyard Division. Among the 80 guests present were Vice Admiral and Mrs. E. W. Mills, Vice Admiral and Mrs. E. L. Cochrane, Rear Admiral and Mrs. G. C. Klein, Rear Admiral and Mrs. C. L. Brand, Rear Admiral and Mrs. P. B. Nibecker, Commodore W. A. Sullivan, Commodore ~~H. C.~~ Gary and Capt. and Mrs. B. M. Coleman.

Capt. Paul W. Hains, who served as master of ceremonies at the party, presented Admiral Rawlings with a framed plaque, bearing the signatures of each member of his division beneath an artist's conception of naval shipbuilding activities. The opposite side of the plaque held an aerial photograph of Hunters Point in California, which Admiral Rawlings had supervised for many years.

followed the appearance of longer skirts.

"I won't have you covering your lovely limbs," storms the husband tactfully, with more thought to the family budget, or—

"Go ahead and wear one of those gloomy, long dresses —but don't expect me to be seen with you!"

Designers Differ

And our designers are not being much help in solving this crucial question of where to halt the hemline. Some are dropping hems a fraction; others are letting them down to ankle length. It's reached a point where a girl doesn't know whether she's more fashionable in last year's pinafore, let down 2 inches or 1945's dinner dress turned up 10.

But judging from the way things are shaping up for the fall season, you'll be safe (and in fashion) if you lower your skirts 2 inches. This isn't going to break anybody's heart or pocketbook. Almost all your old clothes can be let down at least that far and faced.

Use Good Judgment

SENSIBLE women will take careful stock of their figure proportions before selecting any definite skirt length, even after the picture is stabilized. It's foolish to accept a blanket rule about a matter such as this. Wear your skirts 12, 14 or 15 inches from the floor according to your height. A tall girl with long legs can still expose a goodly length of shinbone if her skirts are well below the knee. A short woman will look sadly out of proportion in a dress that is too long.

Safe rule to follow is to wear street-length clothes at mid-calf length, which may vary from 12 to 15 inches, according to the wearer. High-style is favoring longer lengths for cocktail outfits and other dressy clothes. But here again, use your good common sense and hem the darn things up if they don't suit your figure.

Peruvian Minister Arriving Tomorrow

The Foreign Minister of Peru, Enrique Garcia Sayan, will arrive in Washington Monday for a four-day visit. He will be a guest of the Government, stopping at Blair Lee House. # NCPT Hits Liquor Ads

THE Board of Managers, National Congress of Parents and Teachers, yesterday advocated the prohibition of alcoholic beverage advertising at its annual conclave now in session in Chicago.

It was one of several recommendations submitted to the NCPT for inclusion in its active legislation program.

Other recommendations of the board were: Appropriations to carry on the Federal school lunch program; support of American participation in the resettlement of displaced persons; national legislation to aid in reducing juvenile delinquency; legislation to provide "equal education advances" for Indian children and Federal aid in demonstrating public library services to persons lacking it.

Mrs. L. W. Hughes of Arlington, Tenn., NCPT president, said that the School Lunch Program now receiving Federal aid had been "seriously curtailed' because the Federal Government and some State governments had failed to appropriate sufficient funds.

The alcoholic beverage recommendation urges support of a Senate bill which would prohibit the transportation in Interstate Commerce of liquor advertisements or radio broadcasting of such advertisements.

Dorothy Lamour Supports Peacetime Recruitment

Film star Dorothy Lamour and Mrs. Walter Harrington Boyd of Long Beach this week announced plans for a national drive to get American mothers, wives and sweethearts to back the Army's drive for peacetime manpower.

MISS LAMOUR

Mrs. Boyd, retiring national president of the Gold Star Mothers of America, who was in Washington recently, says, "the mothers of my organization are wholeheartedly behind defense measures which insure national security and help to prevent loss of American lives. Her organization indorsed the Government's military training in the first resolution to be passed at the recent national convention held in Long Beach.

She pointed out that compulsory military training is a misnomer. "The correct term is universal training," insists Mr. Boyd, "for, the program is no more compulsory than education, which we prefer to call 'free'."

On the Hollywood front, Miss Lamour, who is headlining an Army recruiting program on the air this summer, will enlist the aid of film and stage personalities in the campaign.—Genevieve Reynolds

Gardner—Farmer

In Emmanuel Baptist Church, Richmond, Va., on June 28 Miss Geraldine Farmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Tyler Farmer of Richmond, was married to Dr. Raymond Jacob Gardner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Solomon Gardner of Hillsville, Va., formerly of Arlington. The Rev. W. E. Sampson officiated.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a white satin wedding gown and long veil attached to a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a white Bible with an orchid. Attendants were her sister, Mrs. Virginia Sesler, matron of honor; Miss Alice Tice, maid of honor; Mrs. Beverly Van Cannon, and the Misses Faye Hines, Jean Clemmons and Joyce Martin, bridesmaids, and Nancy Jeanne Sesler, flower girl.

Dr. Curtis P. Gardner of Arlington was his brother's best man and ushers were William M. Field, Thomas E. Farmer, Rufus G. Gardner, Dr. James F. Hulin and Wilbur Payne.

After a Northern wedding trip, Dr. and Mrs. Gardner will make their home in Hillsville.

Regis-Elliott Vows Repeated

Woodside Methodist Church in Silver Spring was the scene of the wedding on June 17 of Miss Frances Ann Elliott and Peter Regis. The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Marion Michael.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs Benjamin S. Elliott, Silver Spring, and Mr. Regis is son of Mr. and Mrs. Dominic Regis, Milwaukee, Wis. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore dusty pink with matching picture hat and a corsage of orchids. Miss Rubye M. Bresnahan, maid of honor, was costumed in blue and wore a corsage of pale yellow roses. Ralph O. True, jr., served as best man and ushering were Benjamin Elliot and Robert Benbow.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents and the couple left later for a brief honeymoon in Virginia. They will make their home in Rome, Italy, where the bridegroom is an attache at the American Embassy.

The bride attended the University of Maryland and spent several years in Madrid, Spain, where she was associated with the State Department. Mr. Regis attended the University of Wisconsin and served in the European theater during the war.

Introducing—

Mrs. Dannemiller, Who Handles Two Full-Time Jobs Smoothly

Harris & Ewing

MRS. ROBERT J. DANNEMILLER

By Genevieve Reynolds

(This is another in a series of articles introducing the club presidents of Washington and vicinity.)

BLUE-EYED, silvery - haired Mrs. Robert J. Dannemiller, newly installed president of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., is well versed in international relations.

Convinced that more women should take part in world affairs, she hopes to step up the club's already active international relations section. Previously she served two years as chairman of that department.

Queried about further club projects, she said that she would stress better pictures and radio programs by cooperating with the Motion Picture Council and the proposed Radio Council soon to be organized.

Has Three Children

Slender, 5 feet 6½ inches tall, Mrs. Dannemiller wears her tailored clothes well. Black is her favorite color. She has three children. Robert, jr., was shot down early in the war while serving with the Eighth Air Force. He was held prisoner in a Baltic prison camp for 1½ years. Daughter Ada served in the Waves. Barbara, now in Germany with her husband, who is a captain with the Occupation Forces, was a nurses' aide.

During the war Mrs. Dannemiller served on the Operating Committee of the USO and put in long hours at the information desk at the United Nations Service Center. She also headed the club's War Service Committee, which sold over one quarter million dollars in War Bonds.

Born in Canton, Ohio, Mrs. Dannemiller was graduated from Goucher College. She came here in 1930, and immediately became active in the community and club circles of the vicinity. She also chairmanned the international relations departments of both the Montgomery County and Maryland State Federations of Women's Clubs. Recently she was elected second vice president of the county federation.

Back in her home town, Canton, she was on the board of the Instructive Visiting Nurses Society and one of the charter members of the Women's Club of the American Association of University Women.

Interested in Journalism

IF she had chosen a career instead of early marriage, it would have been journalism. "I've always had a yen to go into newspaper work," she said.

She has had to make so many talks on international relations in the past couple of years that she has had little time to peruse other subjects.

Home, family and church are her first interest. Outside of home and club affairs, she is especially fond of the theater.

Elinor Goertz Becomes Bride Of Dr. Elder

The wedding of Miss Elinor Jean Goertz, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. J. Philip Goertz, this city, and Dr. Fred Kingsley Elder, jr., son of Capt. Fred K. Elder, USN (retired), and Mrs. Elder, Annapolis, Md., took place yesterday in Garden Memorial Presbyterian Church, of which the bride's father is pastor.

The bride was escorted by her father, who also performed the double-ring ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Robert E. Shields of Kenilworth Presbyterian Church.

Gowned in white satin with finger-tip veil held by a tiara of seed pearls and carrying white roses and baby's-breath, the bride was attended by Miss Gene Carol Severance, maid of honor, who was costumed in aqua taffeta with bouquet of yellow roses. Miss Doris Anne Barnum and Miss Mary Alta Hogin, bridesmaids, wore yellow taffeta and carried talisman roses.

James Tait Elder served his brother as best man and ushers were Samuel Adams Elder, Dr. Clarence Legerton, Joe Burton Linker, jr., and Earl Martin.

After a month's honeymoon in the North Carolina mountains, Dr. and Mrs. Elder will make their home in Philadelphia, where the bridegroom will be on the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania.

Formerly stationed at the Naval Research Laboratory in Anacostia as a lieutenant, Dr. Elder, a member of Phi Beta Kappa, is a graduate of the University of North Carolina and recently was awarded a Ph.D. in physics at Yale.

Navy Net Tourney Sets Pace As Party Parade Continues

Annapolis, Md., July 5.—The all-Navy tennis tournament which began Monday and closes with final matches today, got the pre-holiday week off to an auspicious start. Winners will probably compete in the Army-Navy Country Club tournament at Arlington, Va., July 26. The Army and Navy will both enter 10-men teams in the Leech Trophy competition.

A number of farewell parties have been given recently for Rear Admiral and Mrs. Stuart H. Ingersoll, who left July 1 for Honolulu, where Admiral Ingersoll will be in command of Fleet Air Wing 2, Pearl Harbor.

Buffet tables were loaded with refreshments and a section of the Naval Academy Orchestra entertained.

Mrs. Holloway's aunt, Mrs. Dozier Lee of Charleston, S. C., who is visiting at the superintendent's quarters, was among those present.

Capt. Frank Ward, who relieved Admiral Ingersoll as Commandant of Midshipmen, and Mrs. Ward also enjoyed the party. The Wards, here from the West Coast, are now occupying quarters at 15 Porter rd.

Other well known couples leaving the Naval Academy during the week included Capt. and Mrs. Ephraim P. Holmes, who will make their home in Norfolk, Va., where Captain Holmes will serve on the staff of Admiral W. H. P. Blandy and Comdr. and Mrs. Magruder H. Tuttle, with their youngsters, Harry, Bobby and Courtney. Commander Tuttle, who has been a member of the athletic department at the Academy, will join the USS Wright at Pensacola, where the family will live. They are now visiting relatives at Lenoir, N. C.

Mrs. John S. Kieffer, wife of the president of St. John's College, and her mother, Mrs. Travis White, entertained on Thursday afternoon at a small tea held at the Kieffer's attractive home. Those pouring and assisting the hostesses included Mrs. James M. Magruder, Mrs. A. G. Cooke, Mrs. Coleman Rogers, Mrs. St. Clair Smith, Mrs. Ford K. Brown, Miss Louise Magruder, and Mrs. M. van Pelt Vucassovich.

Attending the party with Mrs. Cooke was her house guest, Mrs. Arthur Hitchcock of Mount Vernon, N. Y.

Capt. Alvord J. Greenacre, USN, Mrs. Greenacre, their daughters, the Misses Francine O. and Catherine M., and son, William T. Greenacre, are the guests of Mrs. Greenacre's parents, Prof. and Mrs. W. E. Olivet.

Colonel and Mrs. Claiborne A. Duval of Texas and Southdown Shores, announce the engagement of their daughter, Betty Gwyn, to Dr. Harold Francis Burton, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Burton of Hereford, Md.

Miss Duval attended Louisiana State University and the University of Maryland, and is a member of Delta Delta Delta Sorority. Dr. Burton is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, a member of Alpha Psi Fraternity, and is employed by the University of Maryland.

Mrs. Charles A. Speissegger, of Charleston, S. C., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Joyce Frost Speissegger, to Thomas O. Tilghman, jr., son of T. O. Tilghman of Annapolis. He served as a pilot instructor with the Army Air Corps during the war, attended the School of Commerce at the University of North Carolina, and is now engaged in business here with his father, local jeweler.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Ashley Hall and attended Converse College. The daughter of the late Dr. Speissegger, she was graduated early in June from the University of North Carolina, where she was a member of Alpha Delta Pi. national women's fraternity. The wedding will take place in the early fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Everett Waters were hosts Sunday at their home, Severn Waters, Winchester, at a reception honoring Mr. and Mrs. Brice Duvall Duckett, who were married in June at St. Anne's Church, Annapolis. Mrs. Duckett is the former Miss Mary Louise Waters.

Vice Admiral and Mrs. Thomas L. Gatch have left to motor to San Francisco, after a visit to Mrs. Gatch's mother, Mrs. Robert B. Dashiell. Also visiting his grandmother was Lieutenant T. L. Gatch, USA, a graduate of West Point, who recently completed a paratrooper course at Fort Benning. He will sail this month for Ebrea.

Commander and Mrs. Richard S. Craighill of Uphur rd. are on a month's leave, visiting in Portsmouth, Virginia Beach, Va., and Cape Cod.

Woodwards on Trip

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward sailed on board the Santa Maria from New York on June 27 for a three-month visit with friends in Lima.

To Be Married

Miss Nancy Lee Baker, whose engagement to Lieut. Col. Alexander Archer Vandegrift, jr., USMC, has been announced by her grandmother, Mrs. Francis Baker of Fairfax, Va. Miss Baker is the daughter of Robert Oliver Baker and the late Mrs. Baker. Her fiance is the son of Gen. Alexander Archer Vandegrift, Commandant of the United States Marine Corps, and Mrs. Vandegrift, of Lynchburg, Va.

Lieut. Phillips, Miss Morrow Wed in Chapel

BEFORE an altar decorated with baskets of flowers and palms yesterday, Miss Martha Morrow and Lieut. Cushing Phillips, jr., USN, were married in the Naval Chapel at Massachusetts and Nebraska aves. The Rev. James Albertson of Bethesda Presbyterian Church officiated, assisted by Chaplain John Moore, USN, District chaplain of the Potomac River Command.

Mrs. Phillips is the daughter of Mrs. T. L. Morrow and the late Dr. Morrow of the United States Navy, and her husband is the son of Capt. Cushing Phillips, USN, and Mrs. Phillips. Dr. T. Lacy Morrow of Baltimore, gave his sister in marriage.

MRS. CUSHING PHILLIPS, JR.
. . . New Hampshire honeymoon

The bride wore a gown of white satin made with fitted bodice and full skirt. Her long veil of illusion, which fell from a halo of seed pearls, covered the train. She carried a white prayer book overlaid with white orchid and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. William Land, jr., cousin of the bride, was matron of honor, and Miss Jean Melrose and Miss Marcia Morell were bridesmaids. William Raines Land, 3d, was ring bearer.

Warren B. King was best man, and the ushers were Vance A. Morrow of Raleigh, N. C., brother of the bride, Lieut. Comdr. C. Hutchins, USN, and Paul Simmons of Washington.

A reception was held following the ceremony at the home of the bride's mother.

Mexican CAA Head And Mother Visit Military Attache

The director of Civil Aeronautics of Mexico, Lieut. Col. Javier Gonzalez Gomez, is the guest of Capt. Fernando Hernandez Vega, Assistant Military Attache of the Mexican Embassy. The colonel is accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Emilia G. de Gonzalez.

Colonel Gomez is also aide to the President of Mexico. During World War II he commanded various patrol squadrons on the Gulf of Mexico and Pacific Coast. During his brief sojourn in Washington, he will visit the Civil Aeronautics Administration and several other places of interest.

Rev. and Mrs. Welbourn Fete Newlyweds

Leesburg, Va., July 5.—Rev. and Mrs. J. Armistead Welbourn entertained at a lovely party last Saturday evening at their home in Leesburg, honoring Mr. and Mrs. Sterling B. Lacy, who have recently returned from their honeymoon.

The party, planned for out of doors, was held inside due to the heavy rains. The Welbourns' house was as flower-filled as their garden for the affair. Huge vases of delphiniums, bowls of pink roses, fern, and masses of hollyhocks filled the rooms. The centerpiece on the table in the dining room was of white rhododendrons. The only disappointing note on this gay occasion was that illness prevented Mr. Lacy from being present.

Over 200 guests from Loudoun, Clarke and Frederick Counties, The Plains and Washington were present. The crowd overflowed to the porch where many of the guests enjoyed the cool of the summer evening. Notable among those present was Secretary of State George C. Marshall, who was surrounded throughout the evening. Mrs. Marshall, also the center of an animated group, is the sister of Mrs. Lacy.

Presiding at the punch bowl and the coffee urn were Mrs. M. C. Grenata, Miss Mary Conrad, Mrs. J. Manly Cobb, Mrs. Harry Gibson and Mrs. W. O. Bailey. A younger group, consisting of Misses Mary Lillington Bailey, Michaela Grenata, Helena Fletcher and Vivianne Hooppaw, served the guests who lingered on the porch.

Wentworths Here

Mr. and Mrs. A. Reynolds Wentworth and small son arrived Monday from New York to spend several weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Kenworthy. Mrs. Reynolds is Mr. Kenworthy's niece. Mr. Reynolds is connected with the Chase National Bank of New York.

Miss Mary Conrad entertained at bridge followed by tea on Friday in honor of Mrs. T. Blackwell Smith of Georgetown, who has been her guest for several days.

Rev. and Mrs. J. Manley Cobb and their three daughters left Monday to spend several weeks in Blacksburg, Va. During their absence the Rev. Howard Cady will conduct the services in St. James Episcopal Church.

The Rev. J. Armistead Welbourn will occupy the pulpit at Christ Church, Millwood, during the month of July, while the Rev. G. Peyton Craighill and family are at their camp, Goshen Pass, Va.

Mrs. Lucy D. Brooke of Englewood, N. J., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Pickens. Guests of Mrs. Josephus Carr are Mrs. R. K. McKlintock of Flushing, N. Y., and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carr and their family of Birmingham, Ala. Col. and Mrs. M. C. Grenata have with them Colonel Grenata's sister, Mrs. Mary Parelli of New Jersey. Mr. and Mrs. John Janney of Pioche, Nev., are now the guests of the former's sister, Miss Lillias Janney.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sheetz of Pittsburgh were the weekend guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Murray Rust.

Alfred di Zerega 3d, George J. Durfey, jr., and Douglass Fletcher left this week to enter the University of Virginia.

Miss Florence Manning entertained at luncheon Friday for Mrs. Hayden Harris of New York, who is spending some time at the Leesburg Inn.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Loeffler entertained at dinner on Tuesday for C. M. Imhoiffi, American correspondent of the Swiss paper, Newe Zwericher Zeitung, and Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Wilson of Middleburg and Comdr. Peter Lindsey, USN.

Yaps Entertain for New Ambassador

The new United States Ambassador to the Philippines and Mrs. Emmet O'Neal were the guests in whose honor Dr. and Mrs. Diosdado M. Yap entertained at dinner Thursday evening at the National Press Club. Other members of the party included the Ambassador's two daughters, Miss Lydia O'Neal and Miss Mary O'Neal.

Dr. Yap is editor and publisher of Bataan Magazine, and is also chief of the Washington Bureau of the Manila Chronicle.

The O'Neals expect to leave for Manila shortly.

D. C. DAR Announces Many Changes in Chairmanships

The District of Columbia State Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has announced several changes in both State officers and State committee chairmanships.

The resignation of Mrs. Alexander H. Ruhl, because of ill health, from the office of State vice regent brought about two changes on the State board. Mrs. Ruhl was a past regent of the Dolly Madison Chapter.

Mrs. Wells New Regent

The office of State vice regent has been filled by the election of Mrs. David L. Wells, who served the State board for one year as State recording secretary. She is a past regent of Captain Wendell Wolfe Chapter and has served her chapter in other offices as well. Mrs. Wells' other service to the State society has been as assistant state treasurer and state chairman of junior membership committee and also as State vice chairman of several committees.

Miss Mildred Carter Sherman has been elected to fill the office of State recording secretary. She is a past regent of Abigail Hartman Rice Chapter and past president of the Regents Club. At one time she served the State as vice chairman of the Flag committee.

There have been three appointments to State chairmanships made by the State regent, Mrs. Winifred J. Clearman. These committees are all standing committees of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

The State committee of Ellis Island is now under the leadership of Mrs. S. Dolan Donohoe. She is a past regent of the Judge Lynn chapter.

Occupational therapy is the program now carried on there and the Daughters of the American Revolution have three full-time workers and one part-time worker serving an average of 150 patients monthly.

The filing and lending committee will be headed by Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, a past regent of Captain Molly Pitcher Chapter. She is president of the Washington Club and wife of the President of the George Washington University. This committee writes papers on definitive history. Much of the material presents facts not found in the textbooks used in the schools of the country.

Diplomatic Circling . . .

official to visit this country, and until 1946 only seven Americans had ever visited Yemen. A State Department mission, headed by Col. William Eddy, made the trip by destroyer down the Red Sea, thence by jeeps through 10,000-foot mountain passes to the capital of Sana'a. They were greeted by two regiments of troops, three bands and six princes.

No foreign diplomats reside in Yemen as yet, but the United States Minister to Saudi-Arabia, Rives J. Childs, is also assigned to that country. Sana'a is a city 200 miles from the coast, 7600 feet above sea level and boasts about 70,000 inhabitants. Its pink stone buildings are six and seven stories high with windows of half plain and half stained glass. At night shutters are drawn over the clear portion, and the city becomes bejeweled with lights shining through colored glass.

In the afternoon, natives gather for an hour of ghat chewing, similar to the American cocktail hour. After chewing the ghat leaf, a drink of water produces a kick like benzedrine. To date, however, Yemen is most famous for its mocha coffee and the Queen of Sheba.

WASHINGTON is losing one of its bachelors. Robert Vaes, 28-year-old Belgian attache, who arrived here about two months ago, will marry Miss Ann Albers July 22. Miss Albers is a Dutch girl, who has lived in Belgium for many years. She will arrive by plane the latter part of next week. It will be her first visit to this country. The wedding will take place in New York, and there will be a party at the embassy when they return from their honeymoon.

The Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Aminoff entertained a group of friends at the Chevy Chase Club Friday evening at dinner. Afterwards fireworks for the Fourth were viewed on the lawn.

At the home of the Assistant Military Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Fernandez yesterday there gathered 150 friends to bid farewell to Rear Admiral Carlos Saravia, retiring Naval Attache, and his wife.

LORD INVERCHAPEL, the British Ambassador, scurried down the pier just before the Queen Elizabeth sailed Wednesday afternoon, to buy butter and bacon from a nearby shop. He had paced the deck waiting for an order that didn't arrive, and at the last minute took things in his own hands. The envoy will return in the fall after a summer in the Highlands of Scotland.

The Minister of Ireland and Mrs. Nunan are leaving for a visit to Dublin and Tipperary the end of the month. They will fly to Ireland, and hope to take a trip around the north coast during their stay. To the lakes and hills of County Donegal will go the five happy children of the First Secretary of the Irish Legation, Joseph D. Brennan. They sail with their mother on the America July 9. The United States Minister to Ireland and Mrs. Garrett will be on board also.

At the party given by the Tarchiani twins last week, there was dancing in the grey and gold room for a group of 20 or 30 young people. Popular Miss Theresa Muniz, daughter of the Brazilian Ambassador to the Pan American Union, wore pale blue bouffant. Miss Marsha O'Brien was there and Miss Cornelia Langer. Among the men were three of Washington's handsomest, Paul Jolle of the Swiss Legation, Jean-Claude Winckler of the French Embassy, and Lieut. Col. Peter Molloy of the British Embassy.

bers of the naval committee assisting the citizens of Fredericksburg are Rear Admiral Felix Johnson, Commodore E. M. Eller, Capt. W. C. Chambliss, Comdr. R. H. McIlwaine and Miss Helene Philibert.

Reception at Kenmore

Social highlight of the Fredericksburg celebration will be the late afternoon reception and tea to be held at Kenmore, the Colonial mansion built in 1752 as a home for Col. Fielding Lewis and his wife, Betty Washington Lewis, sister of Gen. George Washington. The house later was purchased and occupied for several decades by the Gordon family who came to Virginia from Kirkcudbright, Scotland, birthplace of John Paul Jones. Invitations to the reception have been issued by the Kenmore Association, which now maintains the estate as a historic shrine.

Guests will be escorted through the house by hostesses in Colonial costume and tea will be served on the lawn.

THERE'LL be a decided military note to the wedding bells at Fort Myer Chapel next Friday night when Anne Alicia Jones becomes the bride of Lieut. Paul Washington Phillips. Both the bride-to-be and her fiance are service juniors and belong to families steeped in Army tradition from 'way back.

The lovely dark-haired Anne, with enormous brown eyes, is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. H. Crampton Jones and granddaughter of the late Maj. Gen. Robert L. Howze and Mrs. Howze and the late Col. William K. Jones. She's just back in Washington following graduation from Northwestern University with a bachelor of science degree in speech and radio.

Lieutenant Phillips, who flew up Friday night from his station in San Juan, Puerto Rico, was graduated from West Point in 1944 and served with the Sixty-fifth Infantry Division in Europe. His parents, Col. and Mrs. Robert E. Phillips, arrived last night from Fort Revere, Mass., together with another son, Capt. Albert F. Phillips, just returned from duty in China, and his wife.

Other members of the family gathering in Washington for the wedding are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ray from Owensboro, Ky., Mr. and Mrs. H. Crampton Jones, jr., Fort Wayne, Ind., and 17-year-old Robert Howze Jones from West Point.

This afternoon there'll be a get-together at the home of the bride-elect's great-uncle and aunt, Gen. Hamilton S. Hawkins, USA, (retired), and Mrs. Hawkins, and Thursday night following the rehearsal, Anne's grandmother, Mrs. Howze, will give a dinner party on the roof of the Army-Navy Club.

JUST JOTTINGS . . . Informal and lots of fun was the "beer bust" given at their Andrews Field quarters the night before the Fourth by Maj. and Mrs. Frank Henry as a welcome to Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Yantis H. Taylor and farewell to Col. and Mrs. Frank L. O'Brien, who'll be leaving soon for Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala., with their 21-month-old son, Michael . . . a large group of Andrews Field friends gathered last night at the O'Briens' popular outdoor fireplace for an old-fashioned barbecue . . . Blond Comdr. Charles Snowden Arthur and his tall, attractive, brunette wife Anne, drove in this week from California and have taken a house for the summer on Ditmar rd., Arlington, but are on the lookout for more permanent quarters. Commander Arthur, just back from Tokyo and duty on the staff of the commander of Cruiser Division No. 1, will attend the Naval Intelligence School of Languages . . . the Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Lemuel C. Shepherd with daughter, Virginia, and son, Wilson, are spending the holiday weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thompson, their cousins, near Hopewell, Va. . . . Marine Corps Col. and Mrs. Randolph Pate were hosts Wednesday night at a cocktail party at their home on Connecticut ave.

Emily Kirkpatrick Becomes Bride of David Touchette

Miss Emily Jo Kirkpatrick, daughter of Mrs. Millie M. Scott of Washington, became the bride yesterday of S/Sergt. David J. Touchette, son of Mrs. Antonio Touchette of Putnam, Conn. The ceremony took place in National City Church at high noon, the Rev. James Warren Hasting officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her mother, wore a blue suit and carried an arm bouquet of roses.

After a wedding trip to New York City, the couple will make their home in Washington.

Marple-Ladd Wedding Scheduled Today

The marriage of Mrs. Beatrice Greenough Ladd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Greenough of New York and Newport, to John A. Marple, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Verne B. Marple of Denver, Colo., will take place today at the Greenough home in Newport.

The bride attended the Chapin School and studied at the Sorbonne in Paris. She is the granddaughter of the late Whitney Warren, noted architect, and the niece of Whitney Warren of San Francisco.

Mr. Marple attended Georgetown University School of Foreign Service and was with the Eighth Air Force as pilot observer with the rank of captain. He is associated with Leland Brinkerof in the export business in Washington.

Flannel-Cleaned Floor

Should you spill a few drops of water on the hardwood floor when watering the plants, rub the spots with a cloth dampened with turpentine, using a circular motion when rubbing. Dry with a piece of clean flannel and all spots will be gone. Then go treat yourself to a long-spouted watering can that does away with those spilled spots.

Here Are Tips To Help Mother Enjoy Vacation

A tip to Mother as to how she can enjoy her holiday at the shore with the rest of the crowd and still have a nice dinner for the hungry bunch after the bathing is over. Put the roast on in the morning while clearing up from breakfast and let it cook all but the time it will take for the vegetables. Have the vegetables ready for the stove and when returning from bathing, start all the flames. By the time everyone is dressed for dinner the meal is ready to serve and everybody has had a good time, including Mother.

If you like to make a time schedule of your housework, be sure to allow time in it for interruptions. They are bound to happen and if not given a place in your schedule you will have that discouraged feeling of always being behind in your work. Those interruptions will probably do you good in the long run as they will serve as rest periods.

A Cleaner Floor

If the canary is a very busy little fellow and constantly scatters seed over the floor, made a cheesecloth bag with an elastic at the top and pull this up over the bottom of the cage, just covering the feed cups.

Tricks for Teens

By Nancy Pepper

What they do on a rainy night in Rio is dull and dreary compared with what you do on a clear night in your town. Seems that parties have moved outdoors; those dainty winter sandwiches have changed to rugged weenies, and "going formal" now means putting on a clean pair of jeans. No wonder you're "moon-faced and starry-eyed" these days!

PUPPY LOVE—Just to make sure that no Jill is left alone to mingle her tears with her mustard, you see that couples are matched up at the beginning of the party. The newest "mixer" is to have each boy pick a string of four weenies from a basket without looking. To the dogs is attached the name of the girl with whom he is to share them. From then on, it's share and pair alike.

GOING, GOING, GONE—Raising funds for your pet charity is fun if your club or sorority gives an auction picnic. Every girl must prepare a picnic basket of lunch with her name on a slip of paper inside. Before going out on location, an auction is held with the boys doing all the bidding. Each basket goes to the highest bidder and the girl whose name is inside goes with it.

PLATTER PARTY—The best idea for a small get-together on your front porch or in your back yard is a Platter Party. Everybody is asked to bring his or her favorite records, and you sit around listening. Here's hoping your neighbors are musically inclined.

PATCH PARTY—Because everybody loves to jive in jeans these summer evenings, why not give a patch party? Send patches of fabric to your guests, with instructions that they are to sew them on their jeans before they come. When they arrive, girls and boys match patches for partners.

FAD FARE

If you read the title of this item out loud a few times you'll sound as if you had a cold. Try it. But when you read on, you'll find that we're really referring to those strange phenomena known to a puzzled world as "teen-age fads." We're kept busier than a girl on a date with two boys just following them up in our hi style scout reports.

STRIPED SPECS—Everybody's wearing the biggest, bulkiest, gooniest sun glasses she can find. And almost everybody's wearing them in white, striped with red nail polish. Makes you look like a cross between a peppermint stick and a barber pole. Well, you certainly get around!

GIDDY GARTERS—In one town the teens are wearing a single garter on one leg, either just below the knee or around the ankle. They prefer the "oo-la-la" kind made of ribbon and lace and they have them in colors to go with every outfit. It's a fad you could start in your crowd.

NECKLINE NEWS—With your off-shoulder blouses it's now considered really smooth to knot a small silk or cotton square around your neck. You might stick a flower through it, if it's glamour you're striving for. And who isn't?

CHARM CHAT—Your favorite necklace is a slender chain with one single charm hanging from it. Makes it more interesting if the charm has some special significance, or if everybody knows someone special gave it to you.

Last Woes of Summer

Dishwashing, bed making, cleaning—Gee Whiz;
From nothing can this little mouse shirk——
All that vacation has meant to me is Changing from HOMEwork to HOUSEwork.

Quasy Question

Do you know why the Little Moron Saved all his money? Because he wanted to play safe!

Odd Ditty

Hush, little handkerchief,
Don't you cry——
You'll be a bathing suit

Please pass the salt—the corn is almost popped!

Handy Dandies

Don't think you're electric light bulbs, just because you have bright ideas. We not only marvel at your ingenuity—we like to pass it on to other intrepid teens who read this column. We also like to warn you that you try them out at your own risk.

WAX WORK—Nothing looks dingier than that Mexican silver jewelry after the turquoise stones fall out of their settings. So—you just melt together a green and orange candle, and while the mixture is still hot and gooey, you fill up the empty setting with it. When dry and cool, coat with colorless nail polish. We're told that the result looks like a turquoise. Who has the recipe for diamonds?

HOME-BREWED BUBBLES—They tell us that the bubbliest bubble bath can be produced by mixing a spoonful of toilet water with a cupful of fast sudsing soap flakes. Pour it under the running water and watch the bubbles fly.

PICTURE PANTS—You'll attract lots of attention when you wear white shorts decorated with iron-on pictures. You can use those that came with that box of Easter egg dye, our scouts tell us. Just lay them face down on the shorts; then run a hot iron over them. Well, we always said you ought to be in pictures—and now you are!

FOR SHOW AND BLOW

So many of the new sweaters are made with little pockets—at the top or on one sleeve, that you'll be looking for cute handkerchiefs to tuck into them. Well, we found some—and they were going our way—right to the teen departments in your stores.

LOVE LETTERS—One teen 'kerchief series is inspired by your correspondence customs. All the nonsense you print on the outside of your envelopes is printed on them—like "S. W. A. K." (Sealed with a kiss) and plenty of "X's."

FLOWER SHOW—For your more conservative moments, pick pairs of matching hankies printed with large floral designs. Stick one in your pocket with a complete flower sticking up like a corsage and tie the matching 'kerchief around your hair. Especially good to hide the rubberband that binds your "horse tail" hair-do.

And, you might try dropping a handkerchief as you pass by the corner casbah. Of course, there's always the danger of losing the handkerchief and your dignity, if no one picks it up for you.

TRIXIE TEEN SAYS

You're at a party and you're holding up the wall and vice versa. This just isn't your night to howl—and you know it. Your eyes follow Susie Brown as she swings from stag to stag. "What can they see in HER?" you ask silently and scornfully. Well, you must be missing something, besides a lot of fun, so instead of wondering what they can see in Susie, why not work on what they CAN'T see 'n you? Whatever it is comes packaged together with popularity—so it's worth-while looking for.

Household Hints

Many women who use washing machines make the mistake of washing blankets too long, says the vice president of a blanket factory. This officer happens to be a woman, which makes her warning one to be heeded. Not more than two minutes, tepid water and rich, mild suds are the prime requirements, she says, plus thorough rinsing.

Watch corners and dark places under furniture for sudden and unexpected damage by moths. Methodical use of the vacuum cleaner is the first line of defense and proper use of anti-moth preparations never must be forgotten.

To Show Cooking

If the oven is very hot and you are are afraid the contents of the casserole will cook too quickly, place a piece of waxed paper under the casserole's cover. This will lessen the speed of the cooking.

Textiles of Tomorrow Will Be Tougher

Textiles we know today—rayon, cotton, and wool—will be far different and more versatile tomorrow, thanks to chemistry. They won't shrink, or crush; they will resist fire and stains, and they will clean easily.

That's what Dr. Donald H. Powers, director of the textile chemical department, Monsanto Chemical Co., told a group of home economics experts at a recent meeting in St. Louis.

"Versatility of function will keynote fabrics of the future," he said. "Those which do not possess more than one basic advantage will find it difficult to survive tomorrow's competition. Materials of the future must not only be washable but durable and wrinkle resistant. They must also resist fire and stains and be readily cleanable."

Especially significant, he said, have been the gains scored these past few years by industrial research in the field of chemical modifications. "With chemicals and plastics, we are building into natural and synthetic fabrics properties which they did not formerly possess."

As an example of the new modifying agents, Dr. Powers cited Resloom, a melamine-type plastic which enters the core of the individual fibers and is then cured through the application of heat. The treatment imparts washability and crush resistance to wool, muss resistance and stability to rayon and greater crease resistance to cotton. The resin is now in volume commercial production.

Do you know WHAT THEY'RE SAYING about the Famous, the Notorious, the Great, the Near-Great of WASHINGTON SOCIETY?

THAYER tells you in
The Washington Post

MARY VAN RENSSELAER THAYER will give you the kind of intimate, personal, inside picture that you could obtain for yourself only by being omnipresent wherever tales are told over teacups and cocktails.

The society life of Washington and of the great capitals and society centers of America and Europe is alive with more excitement than meets the eye—but not more than meets the eye of Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer.

One of America's foremost woman reporters, she has written for the World Telegram, the New York Herald Tribune, the New York Journal, the New York Times, King Features, Vogue, Ladies Home Journal, International News Service, North American Newspaper Alliance, Town and Country, Woman's Home Companion, Fortune, Mercury, Coronet, Harpers Bazaar. What she wrote about Mrs. Wellington Koo got one of her books suppressed. What she said about some of our efforts in South America has gone into the archives.

Now, she is writing a sparkling new column for The Washington Post, a column that is filled with real insight into Washington Society. You will know why capital cocktail lounges so often furnish world-shaking political news; why the lives, loves, disappointments, hopes and dreams of charming men and lovely ladies are both important and exciting. You'll know what they're saying about Washington Society when you read Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer in The Washington Post five days a week.

Starting next Sunday in The Washington Post!

British Make A Superb Film Of Dickens Tale

By Richard L. Coe

HOLLYWOOD'S feelings, which are remarkably tender considering the enormity of the animal, were very much ruffled not long ago when the New York film reviewers "overloaded" their seasonal "ten best" lists with British pictures.

Now the British screen crashes through with another splendid film, "Great Expectations," which opens this week at the Earle and Ambassador. And at the same time, the Metropolitan will be showing another of J. Arthur Rank's productions, "Odd Man Out."

We've not seen the latter, but an advance look at "Great Expectations" revealed a superb film, infinitely superior to most of the flimsy trifles. we've had out of the gold coast this year.

To check this reasonably sweeping remark, we've just gone over a list of several hundred current films, the substance of which is a grim reflection on what we call our civilization.

What the New York critical circle was admiring in these imports of the better English films was their adult quality. They do not stoop to that miserable excuse for bad pictures—"But the public likes it." They have dared to make pictures for what Hollywood calls "the discriminating" and the result has been pictures which everyone admires.

Audience Research

ONE OF THE REASONS for our leveling out process of making films to please a hypothetical average is described by Ernest Borneman in "The Public Opinion Myth," an article in the current Harper's. Borneman details the workings of that fiendish polling system, Audience Research, Inc.

This is the method whereby films are tested on preview audiences in a studio projection room. Each "average" person manipulates a little dial indicating stages of reaction to each scene from "dull" to "like very much." The dull parts are gradually eliminated and the finished product is stamped ready for release.

How many films undergo such surefire treatment we do not know, but the results of this machine age nonsense are everywhere apparent. Scientifically, of course, you can't quibble about it, but suppose Thomas Jefferson had used it while writing each phrase of the Declaration of Independence? We'd still be singing "God Save the King."

No, much as we admire British films, we wouldn't want that nor are we blind to their faults and the fact that while the best are very good, the bad ones are really terrible.

But you can't escape the fact that "Brief Encounter" and "Vacation from Marriage" are more real (and consequently more engrossing, more entertaining) films of married life than Hollywood achieves on the same subject. Or that when Britain pictures an historical episode, the accuracy isn't limited to wondrously expensive verity as to costumes and settings.

The Public Complimented

THE WHOLE APPROACH of these better British films (again, we protect ourself—we're not referring to "Bedelia" or her ilk) is away from the theory that only innocents and idiots go to the movies. The public is assumed to be smart enough to understand subtlety, to appreciate the infinitely delicate responses of grown-up relationships and to value something more than impressive homes and the rags-to-riches theme that so beguiles those who've struck it rich in southern California.

But the wonderful thing about them is that they do pay off. Not, perhaps, in the terrific grosses so many of our pictures need to get out of the red, but in modest gains on modest investments and in a growing reputation for integrity.

"Great Expectations," of course, is an exceptional picture, for Dickens was a master story teller. We don't recall seeing the Hollywood version of 13 years ago (it starred Henry Hull, Jane Wyatt and Phillips Holmes), but it was thought to be a pretty good picture. The new version directed by David Lean, however, is a real masterpiece.

And it is a screen masterpiece because it has integrity. The story has been hewn from the well-loved book with fine craftsmanship. Most of the dialogue is virtually intact. The minor parts are superbly done, both in the editing and the acting; each is an integral part of the adventure, not background or relief.

Playmaker's Eye

OF COURSE, too, Dickens loved theater and wrote with a playmaker's eye. He even took to acting himself, combining authorship with his hobby into solo performances of his own stories. He certainly wrote with an actor's point in mind and it's interesting to note that the man who first adapted "Great Expectations" for the stage was W. S. Gilbert, who later was to meet a man named Sullivan.

So, granted, then, that the Dickens novels are superior screen material, the fact remains that Director Lean and his cohorts have aimed high in their faithful transcription. The result has been, not only a film for those who are among Dr. Gallup's 75 million who do NOT go to the movies, but manna for those faithful millions of us who can't stay away.

And we'll bet little sample audiences didn't twist tiny dials from "dull" to "like very much" while "Great Expectations" was in the editing stage. The boys just wrapped it up as best they could and told scientific movie making to go hang.

'The Barretts' to Play Famed Cape Theater

New York, July 5.—One of the leading figures in the world of "little theaters" is retiring: Geoffrey Whitworth, director of the British Drama League, which he helped found 28 years ago . . . Now 65, Whitworth has given career impetus to some of the biggest British drama and film personalities . . . Released to summer theaters for the first time, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" will be performed at the Cape Playhouse on Cape Cod with Martha Scott in the role of Elizabeth Barrett Browning, all but synonymous with Katherine Cornell, who originated it. . . . Coincidentally, Miss Scott's appearance at the Cape also marks her return to the place where she made her stage debut and served her theatrical apprenticeship in the mid-thirties.

Fredric March and his wife, Florence Eldridge, are the sponsors of the Torch Theater at Noroton Heights, Conn. . . . First play on its summer schedule is "Joan of Lorraine." . . . Paul Douglas, on the eve of his departure for a four weeks' vacation in Paris after a strenuous season in an extremely strenuous role in "Born Yesterday," was stricken and had to call off the trip.

"John Loves Mary" is 175 performances old . . . Richard Arlen of the films is getting back to the stage via the summer theater, playing the lead in "State of the Union," at the Ivoryton, Conn., playhouse . . . The Lindsay-Crouse drama has been released for stock and amateur performances in certain localities which will not conflict with the business of the New York or touring companies . . .

Edward Everett Horton is doing the citronella circuit in "Springtime for Henry." . . . Bill Eythe of the movies, recently married to Buff Cobb, granddaughter of the late Irvin Cobb, will emulate the Lunts and play "French Without Tears" about the straw hat theaters opposite his pert spouse.

By The Associated Press

"GREAT EXPECTATIONS," the British film of the Charles Dickens novel, opens Thursday at the Earle and Ambassador theaters. Here is Martita Hunt as the balmy Miss Havisham, with the ypung Pip and Estella, Anthony Wager and Jean Simmons. Below is Finley Currie, as the convict, Magwitch, fighting a losing battle for freedom on the Kentish marshes

'Mad Blood Stirring'

Young Director Heats Up Romeo

By Richard Tompkins

Stratford-on-Avon, England, July 5.—Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" has been de-Victorianized—or de-Elizabethanized, maybe.

The drama critics don't like it and young Peter Brook, the director, has been reproached about the fire, violence and "sex" of the production.

Despite the critics' panning, the Shakespeare Memorial Theater, here in the Bard's birthplace, is heavily booked for the festival season.

Here is how it started.

Young Brook came from Oxford to join Sir Barry Jackson's Birmingham repertory and his production of King John was so outstanding that he was given a chance at Stratford.

Brook took himself off to study "Romeo and Juliet" in Portugal for three months.

Hate and violent passion were the themes Brook sought to distill from what he considered the play's most telling line:

"For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring." He wanted the dry, dusty heat of Verona to permeate the play.

Brook sought two young players who could act the parts of the "star cross'd lovers" with conviction. He found 26-year-old Laurence Payne, dark and "Italianate," and 18-year-old Daphne Slater, youthful and shy, who had played only one professional part on the stage.

The London Times called the production "recklessly spectacular." The Manchester Guardian said Shakespeare seemed to be "fighting a losing battle against his determined producer." The Daily Telegraph called Miss Slater "a Veronese junior miss."

Said young Brook:

"We have a mass of critics interpreting a Victorian life where sex was not to be mentioned. They are not theatrically minded, but rather are literary folk."

More 'Fact Films' Scheduled Tuesday

Another program of documentary movies free to the public—second of the weekly series sponsored this summer by The Post and the D. C. Public Library — will be shown Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the air-conditioned Department of Interior Auditorium, C st. between 18th and 19th nw.

Tuesday night's films include "Operation Crossroads," "Salmon Run," and "Expanding World Relationships," all in color, and "Music of India. No ticket or reservation is needed.

ESTHER WILLIAMS is playing a Mexico City bullfighter in "Fiesta," at the Palace," but she's best known as a swimmer, which makes this beach scene more appropriate than the musical's title suggests. The film, in Technicolor, introduces an impressive Mexican actor, Ricardo Montalban, as well as the first screen treatment of Aaron Copland's symphonic suite, "El Salon Mexico"

Doesn't Hurt Food Much

Fireworks Are Pump Room's Dish

By Lucius Beebe

CHICAGO, July 5.—The roster of restaurants favored with theatrical trade and partaking somehow of the glamour of the theatrical legend is a long one and probably was in full flower when Roscius was an actor and the Roman bobby-sexers, styluses clasped in their hot little hands, waited for his autograph as the great man hoisted prodigious hookers of Falernian in his favorite tavern.

In more modern times these restaurants have flourished in luxurious profusion: Romano's in London, Dave Chassen's and Mike Romanoff's in Hollywood, Locke Ober's Winter Place Wine Rooms in Boston, Maiden Lane Solari's in San Francisco, and right in little old New York, Jack and Charlie's, the Algonquin and the legendary Sardi's.

No single one of these, however, is possessed of what, at first consideration, might seem to be an essential qualification for a theatrical restaurant: the facility for making an entrance and the upholstered luxury of setting requisite as a background for great beauty and glamour of personality.

Without exception their premises are modest of approach and appearance, and though their menus may, and indeed do, seem positively fricasseed with plovers' eggs and cavier at Hope Diamond prices, there is little else to distinguish them from less-favored chophouses and ordinaries.

Customers Love Fire

NOT SO the Pump Room in Chicago's Ambassador Hotel East. There is no visual mistaking that Ernie Byfield's celebrity is smeared with glamour. The architecture and decoration of this restaurant are a rich plush jewel box for the display of its clientele. It is possible to make an entry in the grand manner and be ushered to one's table in a cloud of frock-coated maitres d'hotel.

Nice timing can insinuate a canny patron into a parade of knee-breeched flunkies carrying flambeaux of burning chicken livers skewered on cavalry sabers and make his arrival a triumph of Paine's Fireworks proportions.

"The customers love the fire, and it doesn't hurt the food very much," Byfield says, "and I'm constantly put to it to devise dishes that reproduce the best features of the Chicago fire without actually putting the place to the torch. Half my kitchen staff are chefs, the other half are professional fireworks handlers."

BEA LILLIE
. . . Kept the fruit

As a result of this brilliant showmanship as well as Byfield's own real affection for stage people, the Pump Room is a theatrical halfway house between the bar at Chassen's and the lobby of Jack and Charlie's, and a stage or screen celebrity of authentic proportions would as soon make snoot faces at Sam Goldwyn at a cocktail party as pass through Chicago without pausing at the Pump.

Taken Too Literally

NO celebrity passes through the Ambassador Hotel without receiving with a card from the management a handsome basket of fresh and unseasonable fruits, but Byfield, an opportunist, knows that fruit is inconvenient for most guests to take away and was outraged when Beatrice Lillie started to carry hers off to the Twentieth Century Limited one day.

"We could have used that same basket for another two months if we were careful of it," he remarked bitterly. On another occasion Lloyd Nolan took a single bite out of each peach and melon before checking out.

Ernie Byfield probably first came to the widespread public consciousness when Ben Hecht and Charlie MacArthur inserted some racy references to him as a saloonkeeper in the script of "The Front Page."

Actually, he had been known in Chicago much longer. His father, Joseph Byfield, had been proprietor of the old Sherman House, erected just after the Chicago fire and scene of the College Inn, one of the first night restaurants in the land.

When the Ambassador Hotels, East and West, were opened in the '20s, the younger Byfield was the Frank Case of what at once became the Algonquin of the Windy City, a resort to which flocked such contemporaries as Claudette Colbert, Judith Anderson, Louis Wolheim, Jeanne Eagles and Ethel Barrymore.

Miss Barrymore was presented with the first two bottles of what is now widely known as College Inn tomato juice cocktail which, being improperly processed, burst all over her bathroom. She phoned Byfield in a panic that the apartment was running in blood. That was the year that MacArthur attempted to steal one of the Ambassador's elevators for his New York apartment, but was unable to pry it loose from its shaft. Things have been more or less like that ever since.

Packed Houses See Nightly Movies In Diner-Theaters Aboard Trains

EVERY NIGHT on twin C. & O. trains running between Washington, Newport News and Cincinnati a handful of passengers packs the diner to catch the evening's movie. The Washington-Cincinnati train's theater holds 50 persons, and Chesapeake and Ohio says 2408 persons have gone to the movies on the train since the service was begun last January.

Two performances nightly are given in the diners, where a new folding contraption whisks the tables from their normal position and in a flash rigs them snug to the sides of the car.

Movies are projected on a screen 45 by 60 inches and there is an aisle next to the right wall so that laggards won't bawl things up stumbling in late. The 16-millimeter projection machines are housed in a fireproof and soundproof booth in the rear of the car.

Happen to be traveling Cincinnati way this week? The movie will be "Destry Rides Again," not a bad horse opera.

Loot and Consequences

Radio Svengali Thinks Inhibitions Don't Count

By John Crosby

RALPH EDWARDS, the scrambled Svengali of "Truth or Consequences," (WRC-NBC 8:30 p.m. E.D.T., Saturdays) has devoted the last seven years to disproving the whole field of psychiatry. According to a great deal of impressive evidence amassed on his program, there are no such things as inhibitions, at least among Americans. Without use of hypnosis, merely by waving a $1000 bill or so in front of his contestants, Edwards has persuaded them to kiss lady wrestlers at the corner of Hollywood and Vine, to ride subways wearing custard pies as hats, or to plumb the Hudson River in diving suits.

RALPH EDWARDS

It was on "Truth or Consequences" that young Ensign Richard Bartholomew won $13,500 in assorted loot for correctly identifying the voice of a mysterious "Mr. Hush" as that of Jack Dempsey. That may or may not have been the all-time record for give-away prizes. If it was, it was subsequently broken by Mrs. William McCormick, of Lock Haven, Pa., who identified "Mrs. Hush" as Clara Bow. This contest had the listeners tied in knots for eight weeks, during which the prizes mounted. When Mrs. McCormick got her hand on it, it amounted to about $18,000 worth, including an airplane, a car, a lot of jewelry and free maid service for a year.

Far From the Nuttiest

WHILE this was the most fabulous, it was far from the nuttiest stunt ever pulled by Edwards. In 1946, he told a man named Wickel that he would find $1000 silver dollars if he dug up a street in Holyoke, Mass. By the time he got there, half the citizens of Holyoke were tearing up the streets. The $1000 had been lugged off by someone else. Wickel got his $1000 by opening a two-ton safe, then opening 17,000 books to page 13.

All this, I find, is more fun to read about than to listen to. Edwards is a high-powered personality whose voice only occasionally is lowered to an ordinary shout.

I have never heard any one fail to submit to Edwards' indignities and all contestants seem to enjoy it. Whether they are a special class of people unable to say "no" to a master-of-ceremonies or whether all people have a special quirk to which Edwards has the key, I have no way of knowing.

Incidentally, these give-away shows, which infest hours of the daytime air and have appropriated much too much night-time programming too, are not at all popular with advertising men, according to an article in Tide. In a survey made by the magazine 49 per cent of the ad men said they would not advise a client to sponsor such programs, only 7 per cent said they would advise sponsorship and 44 per cent couldn't make up their minds. A trend, maybe?

Some Say They're Cheap

THE criticism of the ad men was, if anything, even more excoriating than that of the average listener. Half of the men who were against give-aways said they were "cheap." One gentleman roared: "I consider this type of program vicious and against the long-range best interests of all advertising. My own small daughter, age nine, already plans to furnish a home just by appearing on some damn program or other." Another man complained there were so many give-away shows "the very thought has become ridiculous." A more thoughtful critic charged that give-aways took attention away from the product and implied that it couldn't be sold on its merits.

The reaction of the ad men is just the latest and easily the most significant of a barrage of criticism directed at give-aways. Whether this publicity does them more good than harm is a debatable point. I still cling to the perhaps optimistic belief that give-aways are a war and postwar craze that will vanish like midget golf.

Plays by Ear

THE National Broadcasting Co., in a fit of artistic integrity, is presenting this summer a series of radio dramas called "Plays by Ear" (WRC-NBC) 8 p. m. Mondays). The plays are written by Hector Chevigny, a blind writer, whose stories, it was explained, have been heard many times on well known programs. However, up to now, the writer has been playing second fiddle to the actors. In this show, Chevigny gets the credit and even appears briefly on the program. If this is a trend, giving the writers a little attention, it's certainly a healthy one. Radio writers have remained persistently anonymous for too many years.

"Plays by Ear"—at least the story I heard—is a type of drama toward which radio authors gravitate almost inevitably. It was a drama with a twist, strong in ideas and story and weak in character development. A half-hour radio show doesn't lend itself to character building very well; conversely, heavily plotted stories come across nicely.

This particular drama was a fantasy called "Complex for Millions," a satire of sorts on the twentieth century preoccupation with psychoanalysis. The scene is Washington in 1980. Only one really impressive new structure has arisen in that time; it is the Department of Psychic Health.

This new department has gone to work with such horrifying zeal that there isn't a neurotic left in the country. Proudly the secretary tells a press conference that the Nation is so emotionally well balanced that there isn't a single young man between the ages of 18 and 24 who isn't either married or engaged. Things develop from there.

The story is possibly a little too pat and some of it sounds too much like Aldous Huxley's "Brave New World," but it certainly involved high level of imagination for radio.

Louella's Adopted Daughter

Susan Hayward Pays A Call with Her Twins

SUSAN HAYWARD
. . . remembers a vaudeville tour

By Louella O. Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, July 5.—Susan Hayward, who has called herself my adopted daughter ever since she went with me on a personal appearance tour and wowed them, came calling with her twins.

Susan, the actress, the flaming red head who in "Smash-Up" proved what we always knew she could do—become a great dramatic actress—was Susan, the mother, for the afternoon. Although she brought along the nurse, it was the fond mother of Timothy and Gregory Barker who had them sing their songs, go through their cute bag of tricks and explain the difference in their temperament.

"You know," said Susie, "Timothy is the serious one, and Gregory is the comedian."

The boys do not look at all alike. Timothy is taller and he's blond, while Gregory has the flaming red hair of his mother. He's the leader of the two and generally tells his brother what to do, but brother doesn't always do it.

I told Susie I though she looked a little tired. She'd made three pictures in a row and had four days off before she went to North Carolina for "Tap Root."

"I am tired," she said, "but I love it. This is exactly what I've always wanted. If something goes wrong on the set, I can go in and talk with Walter Wanger. He understands and he'll make it right. I think I always knew somewhere there was a producer with the understanding of Walter Wanger and who would make picture making a real joy. You know, he believes in me. I never used to feel that Paramount, any one of the men there, believed in me."

When Susan went out with me in 1939, she had just started in pictures. She had changed her name from Edith Mariner to Susan Hayward. She had come West because David Selznick was testing girls to play Scarlet O'Hara.

She didn't get Scarlet O'Hara but she got a contract with Paramount.

"You know, 'Tap Root' is also a 'Gone With the Wind' Southern story with costumes of the same period, a 24-inch waist, and full, billowy skirts.

"Isn't it wonderful what all of your children have done?"

"My children?" I repeated.

"I mean the boys and girls who were out with you on tour," she said. "Jane Wyman was an Academy nominee, Ronald Reagan became a star later. Arleen Whelan did all right for herself, little June Preisser—all of them. Aren't you proud?"

"I am indeed," I told Susie, "and proud of you, not only as an actress, but as a wife and mother. How have you worked out your problems, you and Jess?" Jess being Jess Barker, to whom she's been married for almost four years.

"We worked them out beautifully," she said. "He adores these boys. He's a good father, and I know when I go away on location, he'll do everything for the children. Of course, I have Annie, too. (The nurse who has been with them from almost the time they were born.)

Susan didn't say so, but I think she'd be the happiest girl in the world if Jess Barker would get the place in motion pictures she feels he's entitled to. He is a good actor, but in some way his career hasn't kept pace with hers. And that's always a difficult situation.

I was amused to hear Susie go on about the twins and what she planned for them.

"I think Gregory will be an actor," she said. "Don't you think he will be a fine comedian? And Timothy will write the scripts."

I looked at the two of them, 27 months old, and thought how wonderful it is to see through a mother's eye. They are the cutest things I've ever looked at. Now I ask you—how can Susie tell what they will be 20 years hence?

"I know they will both do something very important," said Susan, "but they've got to have an education, and they've got to prepare themselves."

And that's her mission in life—to see her boys have their big chance, and believe me, she'll do it, this red-haired girl from Brooklyn.

I knew from the time she went out on the stage in 1939 and said, "Anybody here from Brooklyn?" and brought down the house, she'd go far. She knew just what she wanted and she's got it now as a dramatic actress, with a producer who has enough brains to realize what he has in Edith Mariner—or pardon me, Mrs. Jess Barker—or shall I say, Susan Hayward.

Nancy Carroll Stars in Olney Play Tuesday

Screen star Nancy Carroll will have the role of Victoria ("the dear little thing") in W. Somerset Maugham's post-World War I comedy, "Too Many Husbands," at the Olney Theater for the week beginning Tuesday.

Charles Dubin, director at Olney, has rewritten here and there to build the story into a current, post-World War II situation.

The plot concerns Victoria, who, believing her husband has been killed in action, remarries. Husband No. 2 was her first husband's best man. Before the first-act curtain rings down, her first husband turns up, knowing nothing of the situation—hence some neat, double entendre lines, as: "I hope you took good care of my wife while I was away." To which husband No. 2 replies, "I did the best I could."

In the end, Victoria divorces both husbands and marries Leicester Paton (somewhat stuffy, but worth quite a few pounds!). Whereupon both husbands confess they're far better off without their wife, since she's a bit of a pill herself.

Randall Brooks does his usual good job on the setting, which is Victoria's bed-drawing room in London. The time is spring, 1946.

Film Stars to Open La Jolla Season

San Diego, Calif.—Summer theater is coming to this section of Southern California when the Actors' Company opens an eight-week run at the La Jolla Playhouse on Tuesday. The company's board of producers, Joseph Cotten, Mel Ferrer, Jennifer Jones, Dorothy McGuire and Gregory Peck, have announced that Dame May Whitty will head the cast of the opening play, Emlyn Williams' "Night Must Fall."

Following the week run of "Night Must Fall" will be Norman Krasna's comedy, "Dear Ruth," starring Diana Lynn and Guy Madison. The third play thus far announced will bring Gladys Cooper in the lead role of Henrik Ibsen's drama, "Ghosts." Miss Cooper will be supported by Louis Jourdan, the young French star who will make his first professional appearance in America here.

FIRST KISS: Elizabeth Taylor, whose rise to stardom has been rapid, gets not only her first stellar role in "Cynthia," but also her first kiss. Here's Jimmy Lydon bestowing it and Elizabeth's look of wonder after it's over. The schooldays story opens at the Capitol Thursday.

Want to Act? Try Teaching!

Hollywood, July 5 (U.P.).—School teachers, take a bow. Hollywood thinks you would make wonderful actors and actresses.

John Hoyt, who used to be a teacher at Groton, the swank prep school attended by such distinguished men as the late President Roosevelt, says school teaching is the best training in the world for acting.

It's so good, he says, that school boards almost ought to charge for the privilege.

"Where else can you find as tough an audience as the ordinary classroom?" Hoyt asks. "Maybe a kid can't walk out if he doesn't like the show, but he doesn't have to learn."

Graflex Contest Offers New Idea

A new wrinkle in photographic contests, in which entrants are classified according to age and experience rather than subject matter, will be the feature of the third annual $5000 1947 Graflex photo contest.

All black-and-white entries to the contest, which will be conducted until October 1, will fall into three groups:

1. Teen-agers, under 20 years old by October 1.
2. Non-professionals, who gain less than half their income from the sale of pictures.
3. Professionals, who earn a major portion of their income from photography.

Pictures must be made on Graflex equipment and must be from negatives taken after last October 1. Top prize in the first group will be $250, and $500 in the second and third. Color entries will be judged in one class, with a $500 award for the top winner. Additional prizes will be awarded in all groups. Entry blanks and rules are available from all Graflex dealers.

Outdoor Ice Rink Open All Summer

Sun Valley guides estimate it would take a month by horseback to cover the wilderness area that begins at the famous Idaho sports resort. The valley stays cool in summer because it is 6000 feet above sea level. An outdoor ice skating rink remains open all summer.

Taking Pictures

By Ollie Atkins

She's Melinda Mallam, 2002 S. 27th st., Arlington, with two whole years to her credit and this very pretty picture to record the event. It is a Speed Graphic shot on 4x5 Super Panchro-Press type B synchronized flash at 1/100th second, lens stop F22, two flash bulbs, one at camera and other high to right of subject

HARDENED news photographers frown upon assignments of birthday parties, but this professional scowl does not lessen the enthusiasm of proud daddies and mommies. What seems like old stuff to the "pros" is wonderful and new to the parents of children getting candles on their cakes.

Birthday pictures do tend to become stilted. Just too many birthdays happen each year for the ordinary photographer to think up enough different ideas for pictures. But, beaming parents often can think up smart picture ideas well worth pasting in the album.

You can get good pictures of children without photoflash lamps, but you're not likely to.

Here's some first-hand information on getting pictures with flash bulbs of such events as birthdays with any type of camera.

Set the camera upon tripod or some other solid rest. Bring your subject into focus. Move camera to or from subject until negative is well filled with close-up of the picture you have in mind. Refocus. Set lens to proper stop (for 5 or 6-foot shots this would be f:22 on most films). Now you are ready to make the picture. Without automatic synchronization equipment, be sure you are set on time or bulb. Pose the subject the way you want it—then open your shutter, flash your bulb, close the shutter—it all happens in an instant. The bulb lasts approximately 1-50th of a second.

Position of Reflector

WITH a single bulb it is wise to keep the reflector about 3 feet over and to the side of the camera, with reflector flashing the light directly at subject's full face. With two lights, move the side light higher and well to the side, keeping the front light over the camera but back far enough to allow the side light to produce highlights. These are standard rules for lighting, of course.

This is the technical data for making good indoors flash pictures on close-up subjects. Getting nice expression, action and composition is another part. Worry about the technical end first—without technically good negatives, the best action in the world is never seen.

Don't Shoot!

YOU can't photograph these subjects: This is an outline of the main items on Congress' "forbidden" list. Securities and obligations of the Government—i. e., bonds, Treasury notes, coins or money in any form, stamps, etc.; in some States, auto licenses, drivers' licenses, automobile titles; compensation certificates for veterans of World War I; obligations of any foreign government, bank or corporation; copyrighted material (without owner's permission); amateur radio operators' licenses; draft cards; passports, naturalization papers, immigration papers, certificates of citizenship.

Same rule applies to still and motion pictures. when in doubt get ruling from United States Secret Service, Washington, D. C.

Miss Marie Keesee of the Department of Agriculture Photographic Seminar announces a picnic for the group next Friday, starting from the Department of Agriculture South Building at 6 p. m. The outing will be in Rock Creek Park.

Gadgetman's Gadget

I SAW advertised the other day a film dryer which looks very much like a roll film developing tank. For about $10 you can get this rig, which must be mounted on the edge of a table and hooked up to the extention hose of a vacuum cleaner with the dust bag removed. You let the machine grind away for about 20 minutes and, lo, a dust-free dry roll of film comes out.

Made any good pictures of turkeys lately? Send them to Turkey World, F. R. Galer, Sandstone Bldg., Mount Morris, Ill., before August 1 and compete for $145 split into awards of first, second and third prizes in six classes.

All-Sports Magazine offers $1500 for the best sports photos of 1947. First prize brings $500, and 10 other awards are good for $100 each. Pictures must be 8 by 10 glossy, and in before December 1. Best Sports Picture Contest, All-Sports, 431 Howard st., Detroit 31, Mich.

Pictures made by Post readers and suitable for reproduction are welcomed by the Camera Column. Inclose complete technical data

Thursday 'Symphony Night'

Don Cossacks Sing Out at Watergate Tonight

TONIGHT'S Watergate concert will have a decidedly Russian flavor when the 27 members of General Platoff's Don Cossack Chorus sing and dance to the accompaniment of the National Symphony Orchestra at 8:30 p. m.

The music will range from the spiritually beautiful liturgical music of the Russian Orthodox Church to wild Cossack songs, punctuated by shouts and whistles. Howard Mitchell, conductor for the week, has also included works by Wolf-Ferrari, Wagner, Weinberger and Tchaikovsky.

MITCHELL

Tuesday night Jan Tomasow, violinist and concertmaster of the orchestra, will be heard in Tchaikovsky's Concerto in D major. Other works include Schubert's "Rosamunde" Overture, "Imaginary Drama" Overture by Bennett, "Mardi Gras" by Grofe, local composer Emerson Meyers' "Sarabande," spirituals by Gould and excerpts from "Oklahoma!"

THURSDAY NIGHT will be "symphony night," featuring Brahms' "Academic Festival" Overture and Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony. "Peter and the Wolf" has been placed on the program for the benefit of the younger set.

AT 5 P. M. TODAY there will be a piano recital at the Phillips Gallery by Eleanor Allen, pupil of LaSalle Spier. She will play Prelude and Fugue in F Sharp minor, from the "Well-Tempered Clavichord," Schubert's Sonata in A major, op. 120; a group of Chopin mazurkas, Liszt's Eighth Rhapsody, Debussy's "Estampes" and three pieces by Griffes.

AT 8 P. M. TODAY Etelka Freund, Hungarian pianist, makes her first American appearance at the National Gallery. Brahms introduced her as a member of the famous Tonkuenstler-Verein in Vienna, a unique experience for a young artist who was still a student. After Miss Freund's initial appearance with the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra under Busoni's baton, she played throughout Europe. The artist's home having been destroyed in Budapest, she has recently come to the United States.

AN EVENING of music will be sponsored by George Washington University Chapter of Hillel at Hillel House, 2129 F st. nw., Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. Harvey Horwitz, violinist, accompanied by Beverley Rozansky at the piano, will play variations from Corelli's "La 'Folia." Mrs. Ziporah Kellman will sing Palestinian folk songs. Admission free.

BAND CONCERTS scheduled for the week include the Army Air Forces Band, tonight at 8 on the steps of the Capitol, with a predominantly American program featuring a new choral work by two band members entitled "Do You Know," and the solo, "Vesti La Giubba," from "Pagliacci," to be sung by M/Sergt. Abrasha Robofsky, baritone.

TOMORROW NIGHT the United States Marine Band under Maj. William F. Santelmann will give a concert at 8 o'clock at the bandstand, Marine Barracks; another will be given on Wednesday at 8 p. m. at the Capitol steps. Musicians Oliver Zinsmeister and Dale Harpham will be soloists both nights. Lieut. Charles Brendler will conduct the United States Navy Band on the Capitol steps tomorrow at 8 p. m. Harold Brasch will give a euphonium solo. Concerts on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, 6:30 p. m., at the bandstand of Soldiers' Home, will be held by United States Soldiers' Home Band, Franklin B. Charles, bandmaster.

Organ recitals on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday are held at the Washington Chapel, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. Wade N. Stephens is organist.—BETSY WINTER.

General Platoff's Don Cossack Chorus, which will sing and dance at the Watergate tonight. Jan Tomasow (inset) will be the soloist Tuesday night

Events Call the Tune on Petrillo

NEW YORK, July 5.—The sky fell in last week on Jimmy Petrillo and his American Federation of Musicians.

The union leader had expected trouble, and for that reason had laid low on such issues as network disc jockies (who, some feel might put musicians out of work). Whatever the squat, crusty musicians' head had fearfully anticipated, he got it—fortissimo!

The deluge, in three successive doses, practically drowned the fearsome boss of American music.

First AFM set-back was passage of the Taft-Hartley bill which undermined the union's welfare fund and eliminated "stand-by" musicians which the union required under certain circumstances.

Then the Supreme Court ruled that the lower courts had no right to call the Anti-Petrillo bill (Lea Act) unconstitutional. The law forbids the union to require radio stations to hire more men than the stations feel are needed. Petrillo's deliberate violation of the act in order to test the law may even send him to jail.

To top all this, the Supreme Court next declared that the "Form B" contract used by musicians since 1941 are illegal. The contract, by which bands are hired, provides that for tax purposes promoters rather than orchestra leaders are considered the employers of musicians. Under Form B, the ballroom operator, for example, must pay social security taxes for the horn men, rather than the orchestra leader in whose band the horn men play. The many leaders who used the Form B must pay thousands of dollars each in back social security taxes. Since the leaders used the form on the advice of the AFM, the union is on the spot.

JAMES PETRILLO

. . . His world's off key

BRING DOWN: The Louis Armstrong movie proved to be a stinker. Louis showed he was an excellent actor, as well as a great musician. The band sequences were fine, too. The rest was horror, especially a typical Hollywood ending that found a symphony orchestra, the Woody Herman band and a soprano all working over "Do You Know What It Means To Miss New Orleans" in Carnegie Hall. Honest?

QUARTER NOTES: Stan Kenton thinks he will be well enough to return to the band business October 1 . . . The Record Changer, magazine for hot disc collectors all over the world, will still be published by Gordon Gullickson in Washington; but beginning with this month's issue it will be edited in Hollywood by Nesuhi Ertegun, son of the late Turkish ambassador to the United States, Munir Ertegun . . . Biggest sensation on records in months is Ella Fitzgerald's remarkable scatting on "Lady Be Good." It's the ultimate in the use of a voice as a horn . . . Glenn Miller's widow is suing Rainbow records for using Glenn's name and picture on the diskery's recent memorial album to Miller . . .Decca will shortly have a 50-cent Blue Label, which will make it the lowest price disc in the market. This will not take the place, however, of its higher priced platters.

Tribute to Gershwin Today at 3

AN hour-long program devoted to Gershwin's music on the tenth anniversary of the composer's death will be presented over WGAY and WGAY-FM this afternoon at 3. The memorial program will include recordings of Gershwin melodies as they were played in the era for which they were written—some 27 years old. Some of the recordings feature the composer himself at the piano.

Program notes have been prepared by Chester Rhodes, a student of Gershwin lore.

Race Prices On Radio Stir Queries

By Sonia Stein

IT is perfectly possible for people to listen to a broadcast of race results because they love the "sport of kings" for itself alone. It is even more reasonable for people to listen when they've got pennies on the ponies.

But a high percentage of the radio audience tuned in to complete racing results may have no interest in the horses at all—less than no concern with who romps home a winner. Yet this part of the radio audience listens as avidly as any, even keeping pencil and paper score on three very critical races.

What's all the interest? The "numbers game," which is illegal but which flourishes for all of that, gets its number for the day from a neat little arithmetic procedure involving the parimutuel prices for the first three races at a designated track.

Consequently, any radio station carrying the complete price reports can count on more than somewhat of an audience.

Is It Unfair?

NOW comes the poser. Is a station which broadcasts the prices engaged in unfair competition?

The middle of last month station WWDC filed a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission pleading that very point, and asking that the commission issue a cease-and-desist order restraining station WGAY in Silver Spring from broadcasting these results.

(WWDC has also filed a complaint with the FTC asking that WARL in Arlington be enjoined from broadcasting a money giveaway show which WWDC claims has all the elements of a lottery.)

To date, the commission has not decided whether the problem falls in its jurisdiction.

Meantime, it's interesting to review some background. Until about a year ago, WWDC was offering an afternoon sports roundup which included the pari-mutuel prices. When the company asked the Federal Communications Commission for an FM license, indicating that it would broadcast many of its standard band shows on FM to begin with, it found itself put off for "further study."

'Public Interest'

ONE OF the points the FCC meant to study, was whether WWDC-FM would be operating "in the public interest, convenience or necessity" if it devoted as much time as the standard band station did "to a program which appears to give considerable emphasis to horse racing information which, admittedly, has a particular appeal to the betting element."

After a consultation with the Police Department, WWDC decided to drop the parimutuel prices from its daily sports program. And what with this and some other persuasive arguments, received its FM license.

Curiously, WWDC noticed no drop in its Hooper rating for that sports show after the price information was dropped. Straight race results—who won the race—continued to be reported.

But even with this evidence that listeners like a straight sports show, WWDC feels that "stations in competition with WGAY suffer from the unfair practices of WGAY in attracting listeners and advertisers with methods other stations are unwilling to adopt for moral or ethical resaons."

WGAY, which started these broadcasts April 10, considers the parimutuel prices legitimate sports news. Since parimutuel betting is not only permitted in the State of Maryland, but actually yields taxes to the State, reporting the prices, in its view, becomes straight news reporting.

Official Opinion

BEFORE WGAY began broadcasting race results it checked with the Silver Spring police and the State's attorney about the propriety of what it planned. In replies received both then and after the program had started, neither offered any criticism.

Although horse race betting as well as numbers gambling is illegal in the District, a police official said that "since the information is disseminated publicly, the police are not apt to make specific objection to radio's dissemination of the information." (Local newspapers give the prices for the critical three races, a telephone service is provided for subscribers to a racing paper, and it's reasonable to suppose bookies for the numbers have their own information service.)

There has always been some method available for figuring a number. It started about 10 years ago with the number of shares transacted on the stock exchange being used as the lucky figure. Later it shifted to the treasury balance for the day. Then, a dice arrangement was used.

"They can always improvise some method for finding a number," say the police. So from their point of view, this is as good as any.

New Show to Give Prices

THERE is more than an academic interest in this case among other area stations. WEAM in Arlington has been reporting the prices as well as the results for a month but has tried NOT to be FIRST with the information. WOL's afternoon sports and platter show which starts tomorrow will include the prices.

The case brings up the FCC's limitations of power. Having no authorization to compel stations to broadcast or to refrain from broadcasting any particular program (unless it violates the Communications Act and is liable to court action), the FCC is authorized to estimate a station's operations when it comes up for license renewal every three years and deny it a renewal on the basis of programs it is powerless to order off the air in the interim.

They Say It's A 'Stang' Year

YOU THINK this is 1947? Well, it is. But it's also Arnold Stang year.

That's what they say in radio circles. Stang, now 23, has been in radio since 1935 when he borrowed money he was saving to buy his mother a present, and traveled from Chelsea, Mass., to New York for an audition. Frightened and untrained, Stang put forth his best dramatic efforts. They proved to be pure comedy. The station invited him back for weekly comedy stints, inaugurating a career which has just blossomed into something to make other comedians weep with envy.

Stang is the weird little jerk, "Girahd," on the Henry Morgan shows Wednesday nights over WMAL-ABC, Milton Berle's suicidal son on the Tuesday night WRC-NBC show, the only guest star to stretch one visit to 12 on the Hildegarde show, and guest very-much-in-demand on all the other comedy shows. He is being considered as star for six different radio shows being lined up for fall, and is the inspiration for a play now being written in which he will appear if his understudy can take over on Wednesday nights so he can stay with the Morgan show.

Stang is the voice of Little Lulu's boy friend, Fatso, and "Hoiman, the Mouse" in the cartoon series and both model and voice for a character in the Popeye series.

As for salary, he has jumped from the "$10 with deductions" for his first show to the second highest salary on the Berle show.

And just what tower of strength, what self-confident giant has accomplished these things? Stang is 5 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 96 pounds. His comedy is "a psychological compensation to cover over a complex." Self-conscious about wearing glasses and not being able to partictpate in sports, Stang tried to compensate by being the "witty guy in the crowd."

Now he exploits his glasses—never appears publicly without glasses and a bow tie. His hobby is a collection of spectacles including a pair worn by Harold Lloyd, whom Stang has always admired. His "dream" is to get a pair of Bobby Clark's glasses in his collection. (Clark's are drawn on with grease pencil.)

Comedians traditionally want to play "Hamlet." While Stang claims he "doesn't carry a torch for a part he can't play" and has no designs on Shakespeare, he does want to play serious roles.

Inside Out

HIS movies have all been comedies—"Seven Days Leave," "My Sister Eileen," "They Got Me Covered," "Let's Go Steady," "Hep Cats" and "Sweet and Hot"—and so have his Broadway shows. But occasionally he has played a serious part on the air. This is something of a tour de force, since Stang's normal speaking voice is not unlike his comedy voice.

His approach to his work gives promise of success in any kind of acting, however. He believes the best comedy is based on being a "good actor" and uses a Stanislavsky "from the inside out" approach to his comedy roles. He tries not to pick up tricks from other actors and fights to get rid of them if he accidently picks them up as good mimics are apt to do.

Stang calls the "I'll use stock character No. 703 for this part" method of radio acting—a suspension of intelligence, or drugged approach.

He gets a kick out of realizing that he was using the famous Stanislavsky method of acting without realizing it when he wandered through a lonely cemetery in Chelsea as a child, making up scenes as he went along.

Strictly the Actor

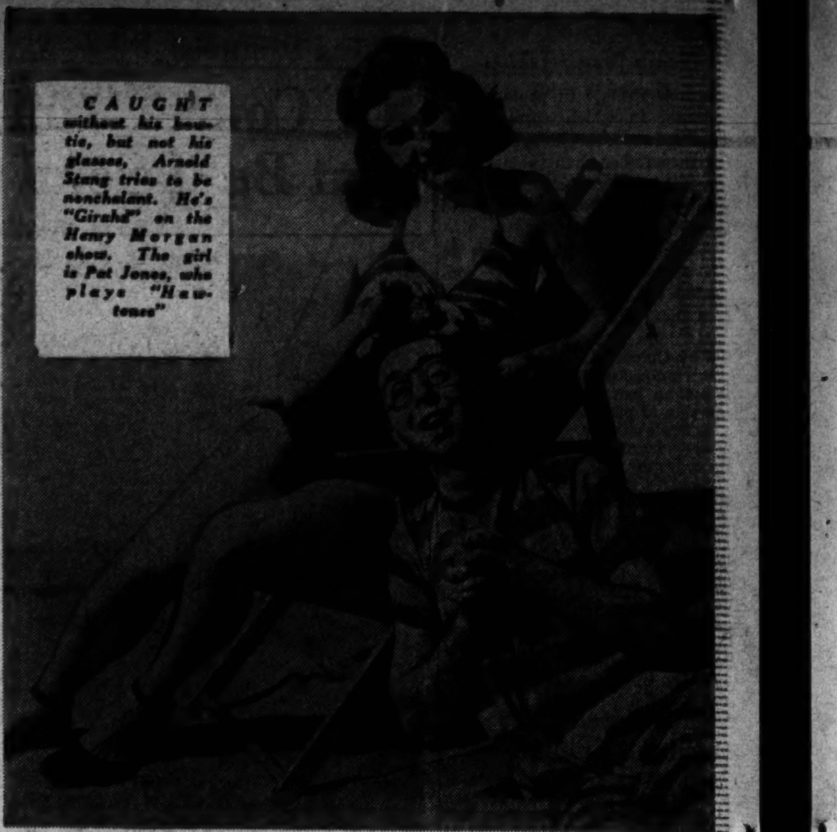
STANG is so thoroughly an actor that he objects to sitting on the stage throughout the broadcast period. He considers it unprofessional to be on stage when not acting and he says he "will not be in front of an audience and not give what they expect."

This has led him to hide himself as best he can behind the other performers when Morgan insists he stay on stage. Morgan's insistence is somewhat justified, since Stang always gets a laugh out of the studio audience as soon as he appears and Morgan would rather get it over with at the beginning than have it break into the middle of a comedy sequence that is being built with words for an air audience.

With an unconscious poignancy which marks so many great comedians, Stang says he likes to think the laugh is one of familiarity and recognition—not the result of his personal appearance.

Stang writes poetry but he keeps it locked up. He feels so strongly about not wanting others to see what he writes that he used to write all of his school themes twice—the serious version he would keep for himself, the comedy one he would hand in.



CAUGHT without his bow-tie, but not his glasses, Arnold Stang tries to be nonchalant. He's "Girahd" on the Henry Morgan show. The girl is Pat Jones, who plays "Hawtense"

WOL Begins 'Story Time' Tomorrow

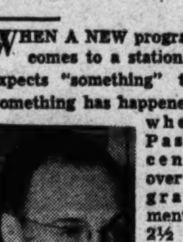
WHEN A NEW program director comes to a station everybody expects "something" to happen. Something has happened at WOL, where Roy Passman recently took over the program department after a 2½ year stint with WTOP.



PASSMAN

Passman, may his tribe increase, is planning to buck the soap operas with something cerebral. Beginning tomorrow, WOL will carry a 15-minute reading from some book, tried and tested through the years. The program, "Story Time," will be on at 10 a. m. with one of the staff announcers reading from a classic, starting with "Wuthering Heights" and taking its tack thereafter from listeners' suggestions.

In fact, best letter each week on "My Favorite Story and Why" will win a set of books.

The program will be similar to WQQW's afternoon "Chapter-a-Day," except that Esther Hotton uses current literary material for her WQQW show.

There will be a few musical bridges and occasional mood-producing sound effects, but the books will not be dramatized. The narrator will preserve the author's style and "maintain all the creative art he has put into it."

OTHER changes afoot this week include a listeners' exchange show at 12:45 p. m. with Marion Sexton reading letters asking help and letters offering it, from housewives, mothers, working girls or anybody else who wants to play.

Marion will shorten her daily "Spice in Life" show to 15 minutes starting tomorrow, but it will still be aired at 9:30 a. m. The second 15-minute segment will feature hymns.

At 10:45, Mike Hunnicutt and Organist Charlie Keaton will present a daily "Your Name in Music" show, with Keaton improvising melodies based on letters in names of listeners. A copy of Keaton's tune will be mailed to the listener whose name is used.

Tomorrow is also the day Hunnicutt begins his morning man duties for WOL (coffee and donuts free to anybody who shows up at the first show) and Art Brown starts his afternoon sports, platter and organ programs.

Young Bumstead's a Cover Boy

FROM the dizzy pinnacle of his ripe 12 years, Larry Simms can look back on the panorama of a full and fruitful life—more than 10 years alternating as magazine cover boy, baby film actor and, now he's grown up, as the Bumsteads' son Alexander on Columbia network's Sunday "Blondie" series.

Larry's also honorary Mayor of Venice, Calif., and an honorary member of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

At the age of 14 months Larry was boldly modeling diapers in a Santa Monica department store window. Photographer Ivan Dimitri sent one of the pictures to the Saturday Evening Post. Larry and his triangle blossomed on the cover.

Larry's mother was deluged with film offers and her youngster made his screen debut in "The Last Gangster," which starred Edward G. Robinson. Eighteen months later he was given the role of "Baby Dumpling" in the "Blondie" movie series.

Through the years Larry has grown up from the role of "Baby Dumpling" to the adolescent Bumstead scion, "Alexander." It was in this role that Larry joined the "Blondie" broadcasts in 1946.

The enterprising 12-year-old is not putting all his eggs in these two baskets, however. When away from the sound stage and the radio studio, Larry concentrates on learning the Morse code so that he can get a radio operator's license. His mother has promised him a shortwave transmitter.

Beauty Contest Deadline Is Postponed One Week

IF YOU despaired of losing that extra 5 pounds by last midnight, but can manage it by next Saturday, all is well. Contestants may enter the "Miss Greater Washington" contest as late as midnight next Saturday, instead of July 5.

Contestants are urged to enter early, however, so they may take advantage of all the rehearsals which are scheduled for Tuesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, and Monday of next week. All rehearsals begin at 8:30 p. m.

WWDC is handling the event again this year, and entries should be sent to that station.

With a Smile

AN AVID "Janice Grey" fan missed an episode in the WTOP daily serial and called the station for a fill-in. The switchboard operator had missed the show, too, and was reading a script to catch up when the fan called. So she gave a one-man repeat performance, complete with sound-effects, for the delighted caller.

Two Fifths

LEONARD FRIENDLY, WWDC's organist, celebrates his fifth anniversary with the station tomorrow. It's his daughter's fifth birthday, too . . . Tommy Phillips, WBCC platter jockey, is offering record albums as prizes for identifying mystery tunes and bands presented on his Saturday 2 to 5:45 p. m. show. Weekly winners will get a chance to complete for a $98 phonograph.

Stars Plan Project For Disabled Vets

Sixty prominent Americans headed by Jack Benny have announced plans to provide tens of thousands of bedside and pillow-type radio receiving sets for hospitalized ex-servicemen.

Benny said the project would be conducted by the Hospitalized Veterans National Radio Foundation, a nonprofit, nonsectarian, nonpolitical association which has been in the process of formation for several months.

Founders include Eddie Cantor, Perry Como, Herbert Marshall, Joseph Cotten, Art Linkletter, Sophie Tucker, Larry Adler, Walter Pidgeon, Rudy Vallee, Louis Bromfield and Sammy Kaye.

A Tolerant and Broadminded Man

Lazzari Puts Heart, Head, Hands Into Work

By Jane Watson Crane

THE works and the company of Pietro Lazzari are stimulating, even on a steaming summer day. We found him on the American University campus hard at work on installation arrangements for his new show. He talked as he worked, and it was good talk.

Lazzari spoke first of his impending trip to Italy for a short visit with his mother and sisters, whom he has not seen since he came to this country in 1929. Now an American citizen, he doubts that he will ever return there to live, but the ties are still strong not only in his personal life, but also in his work.

He has always been greatly interested in the early wall paintings in Italy, such as those found at Pompeii, which his own paintings often reflect. Drawing, however, was his first love, and he has remained true to it, as the present exhibit will testify.

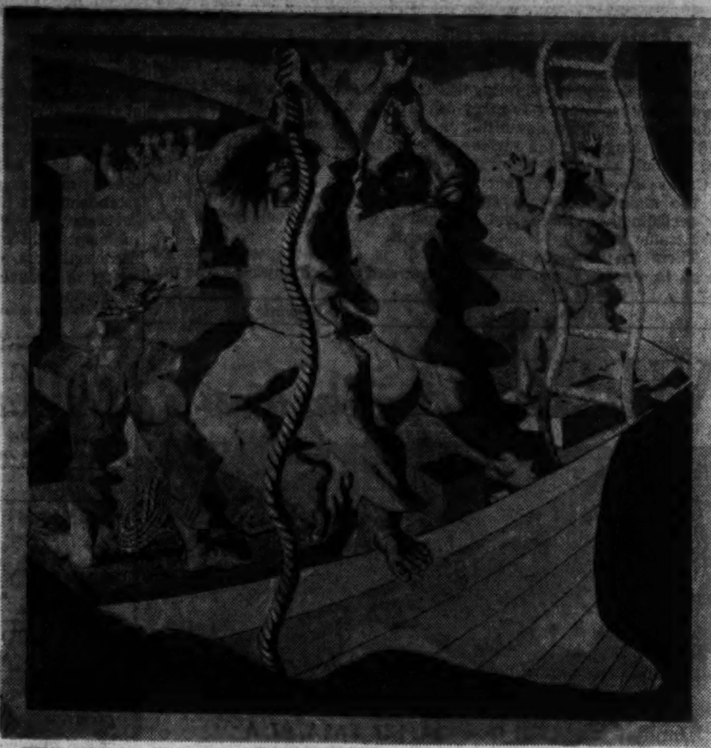
Even when he worked on the last Roman newspaper to hold out against Fascism, Lazzari was never strictly a propogandist. A man who deals in ideas rather than personalities, he is one of the most tolerant and broad-minded people we know. A prime example of the artist who puts his heart as well as head and hands into his work, he is disturbed and puzzled by the "cerebral" undertakings of some of his contemporaries. An all-around craftsman, working in a variety of materials, he is equally at home in a drawing of classic simplicity or a nonobjective painting. The arbitrary lines drawn these days between conservative and progressive, root of so much misunderstanding and antagonism, are, he feels, dividing the nation artistically.



THIS MURAL, "Discovery of the Land," by the Brazilian artist, Candido Portinari, is currently on display at the Pan American Union

Nobody 'Arrives'

THE real antagonisms, as Lazzarri sees them, are quite different, as, for example, where a painting has fine color but no line or organization, where varying elements battle each other in a canvas, leaving the spectator weary and bewildered.

Lazzari constantly uses similar subject matter; he has, for instance drawn horses, painted flowers, sculptured female figures exhaustively. But he is one of those rare people who approaches each work as if it were an entirely new experience. His work is never static and he himself believes that an artist never really "arrives."

Lazzari feels that he has "developed slowly" as an artist. At one period he did a good deal of mural painting, mainly for the Government. He attributes much of his subsequent progress to the late Edward Rowan, who was one of the heads of the Section of Fine Arts, a man with rare understanding and enthusiasm.

This year Lazzari had a one-man show in New York, which was long overdue. He showed mainly his works in polychrome cement, a process he has worked out for himself. The show had excellent reviews. He is being considered now for other shows outside of Washington. We believe that eventually he will be known from coast to coast.

Viewing these drawings at American University, we recalled the portrait sketches of convalescent veterans Lazzari made in hospitals hereabout. He worked tirelessly as a volunteer for the Red Cross, and the sketches were generally mailed home to families or to sweethearts. These line drawings should be treasured on more than one count, for they are works of art.

The curent show, his latest work, has a beautiful composure. Whether it be a portrait of a woman staring into space, a child asleep, a theme based on a study of ikons, an animal study, or an abstraction, the lines fairly sing. If we can forget all the palaver about art, we have it here in essence: a synthesis of thought and feeling and manual skill.

Brilliant Brazilian

IN THIS country we are not up to date on Portinari. The brilliant Brazilian artist worked here around 1940 and left much behind him, notably the murals in the Hispanic Foundation of the Library of Congress. Pending another visit to this country, or the arrival of a shipment of recent work from Brazil, the Pan American Union honors Portinari as of 1940. Including several paintings and sketches not previously exhibited, the show is well worth a visit. The library has lent studies for the murals, which should stimulate those who have not already done so to take a good look at the originals.

Included in the present show is a big canvas in somber color, called "Brodowski" for his native birthplace. Unlike his earlier "Morro", the painting of the hillside slums of Rio, now owned by the Museum of Modern Art in New York, "Brodowski" is more fantasy and decoration than local color.

"Teaching of the Indians", lent by Mme. Martins, an artist herself, is a gem. This small painting is based on the theme which Portinari developed somewhat differently in his library mural. Personally we prefer it to some of the more spectacular works in an excellent group.

On Generous Scale

THE MURALS paid for 50-50 by the U. S. and Brazilian governments, were planned on a generous scale to represent the "History of the Iberian Peoples in the Americas." Because of the artist's origin, they are associated with Brazil, but they are not directed specifically to any one part of the hemisphere. Facing the entrance, "Discovery of the Land" is a logical beginning. This is flanked in the vestibule by "Entry into the Forests", a process still in progress in Latin America. The final "Teaching of the Indians" faces the Hispanic Foundation reading room, with "Gold Mining" to one side. The designs for these at the Union reveal how Portinari, restless and inventive, did not copy even himself. The antithesis of the archeological approach to mural painting, these wall decorations in tempera, bold in color and composition, appear in startling contrast to the general decorative scheme of the Library of Congress. The fact that their setting and cramped quarters are far from ideal does not detract from their intrinsic value as paintings.

Portinari has done other murals, the best known for the Ministry of Education in Rio. He has decorated a chapel in Brodowski in Byzantine style. In 1946 he made a trip to Europe, where he had a one-man show of recent work in Paris last fall. He is now living and working in Rio.

Sometimes an artist who has a blazing success outside his own country, is less honored at home. The acid test is usually the reaction of the artists. The younger Brazilians are quick to acknowledge the tremendous influence he has had on the painters at home.

Four Cantor Prayers Are 15 Years Old

By Paul Hume

Gems of the Synagogue. Cantor Joseph Rosenblatt. Victor S 48. $3.85.

The name of Josef Rosenblatt has long stood for the finest traditions in the art of the cantor. The intricacies of music used to accompany orthodox services are beyond the comprehension of any not acquainted with them over years of personal experience. To unfamiliar ears there may seem to be an overpowering emotional quality in the music, but to those who know the text, the ornaments and high level of expressiveness are natural.

In this album we are given four prayers, all compositions of Rosenblatt's, which he sings with accompaniments including organ, orchestra, and solo instruments. In one of them (Dew for Harvest) the cantor is joined by a second voice, Cantor Meilech Kaufman. It is interesting to hear and compare these works with, say, the plain song of centuries, which was the basis for much of our later church music.

The recordings are 15 or more years old, but the voice emerges clearly and with much real beauty. For students of the liturgical arts, and those interested in this type of music, here is a worthwhile set.

* * * *

Sibelius: Karelia Suite: Intermezzo and March. BBC Symphony under Sir Thomas Beecham. Victor 11-9568. $1.05.

Youthful Sibelius, stunning recording and playing, musically banal.

* * * *

Gladys Swarthout: Songs by Rodgers, Cole Porter, and so on. With orchestra under Russ Case. Victor 1127. $3.

Miss Swarthout apparently prefers to record these songs, though she possesses one of the finest repertories of art songs now before the public. She sounds vocally fine, but why do we have to have these, which are just like everything on the radio and the juke box today?

The one album of art songs Swarthout released contained some of the best on records, and she and Victor ought to give us more. I mean the songs of Canteloube, of North and South American composers, and the other songs she builds her excellent programs with. Not these.

* * * *

Saint-Saens: Caprice on Themes from Gluck's "Alceste." Guiomar Novaes, pianist. Columbia 70961-D. $1.05.

How wonderful to have Novaes recording again Her Washington recital this past season showed her to be the great artist of old and there is no one like her on records or playing the piano today. We might wish for more than this rather sweet salon piece by Saint-Saens, in a vein now passe. But it is a good sign, and must be considered the forerunner of things to come. Recording and surfaces fine. More Novaes!

* * * *

Kreisler: Rondino on a Theme by Beethoven; also: Gluck-Kreisler: Theme from Orpheus. Nathan Milstein, violinist. Columbia 17408-D. 79 cents.

I have always liked this bit of Kreisler's, so much more Kreisler than Beethoven. Milstein, great violinist and great artist, apparently feels it an obligation rather than a pleasure to play it. He takes it much too fast, and with no regard for the light and shade with which Kreisler makes it endearing. The Orpheus melody goes better, but they both seem rather businesslike. Ah me, it must be rough to be so great an artist that to unbend becomes an impossibility.

* * * *

VERDI: Rigoletto: Pari siamo; also Cortigiani, Leonard Warren, barytone, with orchestra. Victor 11-9413. $1.05. Brilliant recording, fine surface, Warren at his best. He still sounds wooden to me, though not to his Met fans.

* * * *

Note: Last week's review of Horowitz playing his idea of Mendelssohn's Wedding March spoke of his "canonizing" the work. Nothing could have been farther from the impression intended. It should have read, "cannonizing."

'Nuther note: Victor issued some fine sets in "SP" covers a year or so ago. Such items as Respighi's Birds, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe, Brahms' Alto Rhapsody and Liszt's Mefisto Waltz came out in beautifully decorated paper covers, two records to a set. The notes on the covers were fine, and the illustrations swell. But the paper covers were too impermanent and no real record-lover would keep his sets in such shape. Victor now realizes this and is reissuing all those works in regular albums. After this maybe they'll consult their buying public before they go in for those new-fangled gadgets, to make sure their ideas click on the outside.

Rogers Drawings At Library Rich In Character

THE JOHN C. ROGERS exhibit of prints and drawings at the D. C. Public Library has plenty of character and strong human interest. The display is prefaced by a drawing of the artist by Edward Grove. Rogers, who served as a photographer with the Army Air Forces during the war, is largely self-taught, except for evening classes at the Corcoran under Burtis Baker and Eugen Weisz. In his block prints particularly he takes homely and familiar themes, interpreting them with sympathy and insight. Subject and medium seem unusually well suited. As in "The Homeless Ones" these modestly presented works have considerable impact. They have the ring of sincerity. The show is one of the best in the library series, which has done much to bring new work by local artists to the attention of the public.

The Corcoran Gallery has announced the acquisition of three new paintings—portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Corcoran, parents of the founder, by Charles Peale Polk, the gift of Mrs. Robert C. Dunlap, and an oil, "Moonlight," given by the artist, Samuel B. Pratt.

Polk worked in Baltimore as a portrait painter during the latter part of the eighteenth century. Pratt, a member of the staff of the Corcoran, has exhibited here in Washington and was included in Paintings of the Year, sponsored by the Pepsi-Cola Co. He is primarily a landscape painter in the romantic tradition.

Lucerne Prepares For Music Festival

Lucerne, July 5 (AP).—One hundred of Switzerland's leading musicians will participate in five symphony concerts to feature the International Musical Festival in Lucerne, August 9 to 27. The opening concert is to be conducted by Alceo Galliera. Wilhelm Furtwaengler, German conductor, is to conduct two performances of Brahms' "Requiem," sung by the festival choir.

Display at Library of Congress

80 Priceless Books Given to Nation

By Lee Grove

ON EXHIBIT at the Library of Congress through September are 80 important rare books, collected over a period of a year by Lessing J. Rosenwald of Jenkintown, Pa., and given by him to the library—which is to say the Nation.

ROSENWALD

The books, nearly half of which date from the first half century of printing, are an addition to an initial gift of books and manuscripts from the fifteenth century to the present, that was made in March, 1943.

That there is more to come is likely, as Rosenwald, retired chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck, is still collecting, and under the terms of his deed of gift the Library of Congress receives his books and the National Gallery his remarkable collection of prints.

Though no appraisal of the commercial value of Rosenwald's gift to the library has ever been publicly revealed, it is known that four books alone in the present collection represent $100,000. For one of these, the "Epistole," in Tuscan, printed at Florence in 1495, 7400 pounds (approximately $29,600) was paid at auction.

This figure is several times as much as the library's entire annual budget for the purchase of rare books.

There is probably no book lover in the United States today whose sustained collecting matches the magnitude of Rosenwald's. It is frequently said that the era of princely collectors such as Henry C. Folger, Henry E. Huntington and John Pierpont Morgan is passing, if not largely passed. Thus, Rosenwald often has first choice among rare books offered for sale.

Terms Liberal

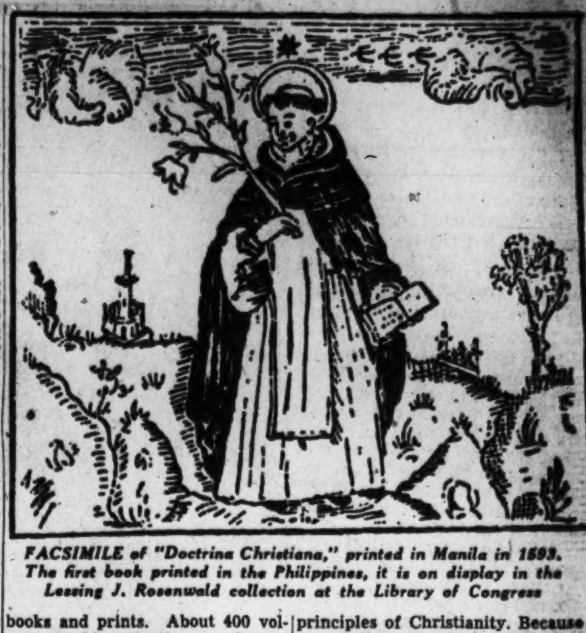
THE gift is made under very liberal terms. These terms provide that Rosenwald, who sometimes consults with the library before making a purchase, may enjoy the books at his home in suburban Philadelphia during his lifetime, following which they will come to Washington, and that the library need not shelve the books together and may dispose of such duplicates as it chooses. Meanwhile, the library, which has title to them, may use them at any time.

Incident to the major gift is another, a reference collection of approximately 2700 volumes formed for Rosenwald's use in collecting books and prints. About 400 volumes in this collection are also regarded as rare books.



FACSIMILE of "Doctrina Christiana," printed in Manila in 1593. The first book printed in the Philippines, it is on display in the Lessing J. Rosenwald collection at the Library of Congress

In the original gift of 1943 were 12 medieval manuscripts, nine books printed from wood blocks rather than type, 318 fifteenth century books and 324 sixteenth century books, the remainder having been printed from the seventeenth to the twentieth century as represented by such modern artists as Picasso and Roualt. This original gift is also noteworthy for some rare illustrated books by William Blake. More than 40 of the early volumes are the only copies in America.

The present gift of 80 books, now on display, represents additions to the earlier collection of books printed from the fifteenth to the nineteenth centuries. Of this number, 35 are books produced during the first half century of printing. One of these is really four books bound together, printed by William Caxton, England's first printer. The binding itself, exceedingly rare, was executed before 1544.

Early Philippine Book

SO REMARKABLE that "rare" seems inadequate is the previously displayed "Doctrina Christiana" printed at Manila in 1593. The first book printed in the Philippines, its existence was known only through references by early writers until the discovery of this single copy in Paris a year ago. The book was printed in Gothic letters and in the native Tagalog dialect by the Dominicans for the instruction of the natives in the principles of Christianity. Because no printing press had yet reached the islands, the book was printed from hand-carved wood blocks.

A highlight of the collection is "The Book of Hawking, Hunting and Heraldry, with a Treatise on Fishing," printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1496 at Westminster, then outside of London. It is a second, improved edition of the first English sporting book and contains the first treatise on fishing to be printed in England.

Beautiful Illustrations

REMARKABLE for the beauty of its illustrations is the previously mentioned "Epistole" printed in Florence in 1495. A book of epistles, gospels and lessons as read in the mass, it was intended to tell the layman what he needed to know about the Bible. The Rosenwald volume is one of the only two known copies in existence. A. S. W. Rosenbach, the rare-book authority, said of its acquisition, "It is in many respects the most distinguished volume of Italian origin to reach our shores for generations."

Among other highlights of the collection on display are a volume printed by Johann Fust and Peter Schoeffer, two printers believed to have been personally associated with Gutenberg, at Mainz, Germany, in 1459, and a number of volumes by the earliest printers in England.

A printed copy of the exhibit catalogue may be had without charge by writing the Office of Publications and Information, Library of Congress.

By William M. Stuart

MINT block prices rose about 6 per cent last month, according to a report of the Tiger "Postage Stamp Index." This indicates increased interest in twentieth century United States stamps, the most available mint blocks having been issued during this century. Also, it is believed many new collectors have started collecting mint blocks because they are always obtainable and not too expensive even for beginners.

This price index shows a drop of 4 per cent for mint singles and a slight drop for used singles. These percentages have been figured from thousands of prices realized at auction sales. Also, in the wholesale market a list of 300 basic stamps has been used to average a "fair price index."

Air Mail Convention

THE ANNUAL convention of the American Air Mail Society will be held at the Raleigh Hotel August 29 and 30, headquarters being at the Raleigh. Business sessions will be held in the mornings; tour of the Bureau of Engraving at 2 p. m. on the 29th and on the 30th a visit to the Library of Congress at 2 p. m. and a banquet at 7 p. m.

It is possible that the new 10-cent air mail stamp will be issued during the convention. All Washington collectors are invited to attend.

On July 15 air mail service will be inaugurated on extension of route A M-63 between San Francisco, Oakland, Portland and Seattle, and on August 1 air mail service will be inaugurated at Quincy, Ill., on route A M-48. Special cachets will be provided at these offices as well as at the air mail fields at San Francisco and Seattle. If collectors request it, covers will be sent to terminal or junction points to be served by the first flight in each direction for backstamping.

On August 1 air mail service will be resumed at Ottumwa, Iowa, on route A M-48. No cachet will be provided as this has been done previously, but covers received by the postmaster will be dispatched to first flights.

Rare Stamp Sale

THE $100,000 air mail collection of the late Walter Bruggmann of Manila, will be sold by J. and H. Stolow of New York in five sessions July 21 to 25. There are thousands of rare flight covers and many copies of the rare Madrid-Manila air mail set of the Philippines, some of which are the finest copies in existence.

The San Marino Post Office Department has surcharged the three low denominations of both postage and air mail Roosevelt issues. The new values are 3-lire on 1-lire, 4-lire on 2-lire and 6-lire on 5-lire postage, and 3-lire on 1-lire, 4-lire on 2-lire and 6-lire on 5-lire air mail. L. Bamberger & Co., Newark, in reporting these changes, adds that no additional surcharges will be made, as these have exhausted the Roosevelt issue.

The Capital Precancel Club will hold a special meeting at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the home of its president, Rolston Lyon, 217 Rittenhouse st. nw., in connection with the annual Precancel Society convention to be held at the Shoreham August 21 to 24.

Silver Spring Election

THE SILVER SPRING Philatelic Society elected the following officers at its meeting June 26: President, Warren C. Summers; vice president, James O. Peavey; secretary, John L. Kessinger; treasurer, R. K. Peck, and trustee for three years, H. P. Jones. The society's July meetings will be held in the board room of the County Building, July 10 and 24.

Howe Island Has One Bike, No Cops

AUSTRALIA'S HOWE ISLAND IS PEACEFUL
. . . But "keep off" signs hang over the place

PEOPLE who want to get away from atom bombs and food shortages might glance longingly at Lord Howe Island, 450 miles off the Australian coast, but it wouldn't do them much good. They might go there as tourists (the government is planning a plane service) but the 3220-acre dot in the south Pacific is not open to permanent residents who are not descendants of the original settlers.

Even the present 120 residents cannot own any saleable or transferable right to the island's rich acres. Each resident is alloted an area of land when he comes of age and further allotments are made on marriage and after the birth of each child. But the shares revert to the community on the death of the holder.

The little community is legally a part of Sydney, but the administration is independent. The island has no policemen and no traffic problem. There is not one automobile there.

Principal source of cash income for the residents are the seeds of the kentia palm which can grow any place in the world, but which produces seed only on the island. These palms are those used in hotel lobbies all over the world.

But the residents also raise poultry, pigs and goats, so there is no meat shortage and the lagoon has a large supply of tuna. The islanders catch enough so that they can export some.

Their little homeland has the most southern coral reef in the world, but there is no safe harbor for shipping, although in the middle of the nineteenth century, scores of whaling ships called there to replenish water and provisions.

It was settled in 1834 by eight people from New Zealand but they were soon bought out by two Sydney men. The population was 16 in 1851 and 36 in 1869.

In 1912, a royal commission found that the palm seed trade had grown to such an extent that a board was established to administer the affairs of the island. The government reserves the right to take over any of the island property whenever it sees fit.

Oldest Tourist Mecca

Proud Maine residents claim their State is the oldest tourist mecca in American. History, they say, reveals that Lief Ericson and the Vikings visited the coast of Maine in the year 1000.

Virginia Beach Mecca For Honeymooners

Virginia Beach, July 5.—Niagara Falls has nothing on this seaside resort when it comes to honeymooners. A check of the 1947 season so far reveals that an amazing number of visitors have been newlyweds.

A favorite with honeymooners is the Cavalier Hotel, and at present nearly one out of four couples strolling its sunny terraces or walking in the beautiful magnolia garden have just been wed.

Up the beach at the Surf Club, Jimmy Dorsey opened for dancing last month, and such big names as Carmen Cavallaro and Guy Lombardo will follow.

Sun-Tanned in Snow

Warm-weather skiers at Sun Valley, Idaho, usually strip to the waist to get a sun tan while out in the snow.

Surf Fishing Resumed

This year, for the first time since the war, a part of the beach at Sandy Hook, N. J., will be open for surf fishing.

Canada Steamship To Open Office In Washington

Canada Steamship Lines of Montreal shortly will open a new passenger office in the Shoreham building, 15th and K sts. nw., C. C. Bonter, passenger traffic manager, said yesterday that many requests are being received from this area for steamer reservations on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence and Saguenay Rivers and that the company hopes to offer better service through personal representatives here.

CRAIG

C. M. Craig, formerly city passenger agent for the company in Chicago, will be in charge of the new office with the title of district passenger agent. His territory will include Baltimore and the region south and southeast through Florida.

French Roads Readied for Tourists

By William J. Atwood

PARIS, July 5 (NYHT).—France is busily repairing and improving long-neglected roads in anticipation of heavy tourist traffice this summer.

In the course of a 1600-mile journey recently to the Spanish border and back, I saw as many as a dozen road gangs a day filling in and smoothing over the surface of the nation's principal highway.

Crews are also widening most of the main north-south arteries to accommodate three and even four traffic lanes.

There are no speed limits except in towns. There is almost no traffic and in place of billboards that blot out so much of the scenery along U. S. No. 1, French highways are lined with stately trees.

Also absent are service stations, lunch wagons and tourist cabins. These are concentrated in towns.

The fact that the gas now costs about 60 cents a gallon, if you have the tickets, is the chief reason for little traffic. So scarce are pleasure cars in some regions that farmers have got into the habit of using highways for moving their herds.

It is almost impossible to get lost on French highways. The profusion of road signs that tell you the distance to the next village are still as plentiful and the state has added new ones.

There is still little evidence of reconstruction in war-damaged towns, although debris has been cleared away. Important bridges have been repaired so that they are at least serviceable, although in most cases the new spans are temporary contraptions.

Even best hotels in provincial towns are unheated, shopworn establishments that do not provide hot water, towels or, in some cases, sufficient light bulbs.

Nevertheless, even in 1946, motoring in France has lost none of its charm.

Volcano Obligingly Erupts As Tourists Point Camera

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, July 5 (AP).—New Zealand has an obliging volcano which waits until your camera is ready before blowing up in front of you.

Eleven of us, newsmen and officers from the Mount Olympus, made a tour of North Island.

"Now here's a good spot to get a picture of Mount Ruapehu," said our guide. We started to take pictures of the sleeping, snow-clad cone 15 miles across a valley.

The 9175-foot mountain, one of the four active volcanoes in the country, had not so much as twitched in 18 months. But at that precise moment Ruapehu belched an umbrella of smoke and steam several thousand feet in the air.

Farther north, in the Rotarua hot springs area, volcanic energy is even more obliging. There the brown-skinned Maori for centuries have used steam vents and hot pools from the earth for cooking, washing, and bathing the baby.

Bores have tapped the subterranean springs for hot water and central heating of 50 homes and buildings.

Scientists propose an even more extensive harnessing of the earth's fires for light industry. Among them they suggest laundries, hothouses and industries needing continuous drying agents, such as seasoning of timber.

New Zealand's volcanic fires have not always been so benign. In 1886 Mount Tarawera blew its top, burying a village and many of its inhabitants. The volcano of White Island exploded three decades ago, killing several men working in a sulphur plant.

Three More Caracas Plane Cruises Listed

MORE 15-day escorted air cruises to the Caribbean and the mountain capital of Caracas, in Venezuela, have been announced by American Express. They will leave Miami July 12, July 26 and August 16.

Kingston, Jamaica, with motor sightseeing excursions, will be the first flight call. Next is Barranquilla, Colombia's great seaport, with its Hotel del Prado, a five-million-dollar structure where cruise members remain overnight. They may wander along the waterfront boulevard and visit the famous cafes.

Caracas, splashed with bougainvillea, honeysuckle and roses, introduces the "floral capital above the clouds," and a day of sightseeing. Cruise members will ride down queerly named streets such as "Bird to Comb-Maker," "Ball to Fan" and "Count to Father Sierra." The mozaic sidewalks are shaded by trees festooned with orchids.

Sightseeing excursions also are listed for Trinidad, Port of Spain, St. Thomas in the Vingin Islands, Port au Prince, Haiti and Havana. From the Cuban capital, morning flights will be made to Miami, the planes arriving in early afternoon on the fifteenth day of departure. Prices from Miami with escort are $728; independent plan, $616.

Historic Arizona Mission Reconverted

San Xavier Now an Indian School

TUCSON, Ariz., July 5 (AP).—An Indian school, dream for generations of the Franciscan priests of San Xavier del Bac, historic Spanish mission in the desert, has become a reality. Combining a school and a clinic, the new building recalls the colorful story of San Xavier del Bac.

Since it was founded 246 years ago, this fabulous church in the heart of the desert has been plundered by Pimas; served as a lookout for raiding Apaches; used by Mexican soldiers as barracks, stables and barns; withstood earthquakes and housed Jesuits and Franciscans who came to Christianize the Indians of the New World.

Records show it was late in August of 1692 when Father Eusebio Francisco Kino reached Bac, 9 miles south of here. The energetic Jesuit, cattleman and farmer named the place San Xavier.

On April 28, 1700, he began the task of building his mission, the "white dove of the desert." Eleven years later Father Kino died on a bed of sheepskins.

Half a century after work was started the Indians revolted, killing some of the priests, chasing others southward and plundering San Xavier and other missions.

Again the priests returned, only to abandon the mission in 1767 when word came from Spain of the expulsion of the Jesuits.

As the priests departed, some believe, they buried much wealth in gold. With the coming of civilization, men spent tremendous effort in digging for this "lost" Spanish gold. It is still being sought.

An Apache Lookout

TEN years later Apaches swooped down from the north, taking over San Xavier as a lookout. Then, along with other abandoned missions, it was taken over by the Franciscans.

To the Indian women was assigned the task of bringing the rocks to the mission from mountains many miles away.

Patiently they trudged across the desert, where temperatures reach 155 degrees in the summer time, perched a boulder on their heads, and walked back again. These were sacred stones which could not be allowed to touch the ground.

The Indians' knowledge of building was confined to the construction of rude adobe huts, but the priests were artists and architects as well as builders.

Then the Indians were told many gold coins were to be found in the dirt. They labored to remove the earth, leaving the dome where it now stands.

One of the towers at the front of the mission will always remain unfinished. Legend says all the church was finished with the exception of the dome over one tower. Chief Architect Father Ignacio Gaona climbed to the top to finish the building himself. Losing his balance, he is supposed to have crashed to his death. In his memory the tower has been left the way he last saw it.

One Tower Left Off

ANOTHER report says the King of Spain had ruled that a tax must be payed upon the completion of each church. To avoid this payment, it is claimed, the priests left off one tower dome so that it would never be finished.

The bell clappers, it is said, are made from a meterorite which flashed out of the skies.

The Franciscans were driven from the church during Mexico's fight for independence from Spain. The Indians kept sacred articles in their mud huts until the priests returned.

When the Gadsen purchase brought the area into the United States, priests did return to San Xavier del Bac, the only mission not completely in ruins.

For years a section of one wing of the mission had been devoted to school rooms. Now the children, between 70 and 80 of them, have a $25,000 school and clinic. Priests have moved into the old school rooms and the space they vacated has been given over to a museum and waiting rooms for visitors.

The Bridge Table

Teams of Four Battle Today In Two Annapolis Sessions

By Marian H. Barre

TODAY at 12:30, play will start in the open team-of-four match in the Carvel Hall Tournament at Annapolis. This is a two-session event without elimination, time of evening game to be announced by Director Russel J. Baldwin.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Washington Bridge League is having a called game on Tuesday, July 15, at 1355 Euclid st. The president, Mrs. Roy Hackett, announces that the noon business meeting will be followed by duplicate.

Washington's popular director, Paul E. Golden, felt as though he were in the middle of a Vienna coup Tuesday night when players to fill 38 tables put in an appearance at Pierce Hall for the Federal Bridge League's monthly master point game. Mr. Bolden's problem was the fact that the Federal has 36 tables.

Ingenious Paul found two tables somewhere and ran the game in three sections. Winners were: Mrs. Marianne Boschan and Dr. Neil McHugh, Miss Edith Fink and Dr. M. Grewe, L. Scruggs and Lieut. Col. P. Walker, James A. Stone and Miller Roberts, Mrs. Jennie Bryant and Davis and E. G. Harris and Bob Bierly.

ACBL Yearbook

THE American Contract Bridge League, for the first time in its 20-year history, is publishing a yearbook. It will list the winners of tournaments, describe the league organization, give the history of the league, etc. Form letters have been sent to 20,000 bridge players, but because of the paper shortage only 5500 copies will be available. The league suggests you to place your order now.

Memo to collectors of master points: Agriculture matinee game July 12 at 1 o'clock, Euclid Studios; Capital City Chess Club, July 12 at 8 o'clock; Euclid Studios, July 19 at 1 o'clock, and Women's Auxiliary open pair game July 26 at 1 o'clock, also at Euclid Studios.

The Women's Auxiliary June open pair game results: First, North and South, Mrs. Lester Gibson and J. G. Fletcher; runnersup, Mrs. Harold Young and Mrs. Breckenridge Long; East and West: Mrs. Roy Hackett and W. D. Poissant tied for first place with Commander John Parish and David Murray; Mrs. D. E. Stephan and Leo Kershenbaum, third.

Overlooked Rule

IN THE last ACBL Bulletin the powers that be stated that a card played by dummy was not a played card unless the declarer so agreed. That the item must have been overlooked by some players has been observed in two recent contests. Consult your Bulletin for proof positive.

The Plaque Series for club members only, a feature at the Capital City Chess Club, lists Louis Tubbs first and J. A. Stone second. Women's pair series: Mrs. Gregg Custis first and Mrs. Marianne Boschan, second. Saturday night Sullivan Memorial Award: W. Poissant first and Miller Roberts second.

The mixed pair championship game at Capital City will be run in two sessions July 14 and 21. This contest is limited to 30 pairs. Silver trophies will be awarded to winners plus coveted master points. This contest is to be an annual feature.
